Fifteen years later I came back east for a visit to my old home. I had heard a lot about the UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD but I didn't realize until I traveled over it, how closely it followed our old Overland Trail.
Why! I could see from the car window the places where we camped on the way out!
Isn't it remarkable that the route that was best for the old wagon trail proved to be best for the steel rail, and now for the automobile and airplane?

A "Scoop"!
Munsey's Magazine has made another "scoop"!
"Madeleine," the literary sensation of the day in France, is now being given to America for the first time by Munsey's Magazine, beginning in the September issue.
This unusual story, which has brought fame to its author, took the Goncourt prize as the best book of the year, and leaped into the position of a best seller almost overnight.
"Many of us," says Richard Le Gallienne, "are accustomed to think that only sophisticated themes appeal to the reading public of France; but here is a story of country life, written with extreme simplicity by a hitherto unknown school-teacher in the provinces, which last year snatched the much-coveted Prix Goncourt away from all the clever ones of Paris, and which has in a few months had a sale of seventy thousand copies."
Nor will it be long before this book is one of the best sellers here. In fact, certain of its elements bring "Main Street" to mind. But our small towns totally lack the quaintness, the charm, the beauty of rural France.
"Life is what this writer sees—life, with all its dangers, all its glimmers, all its despairs, its doom, its loveliness, its loneliness, its glory, and its anguish; and, through it all, the sound of the breeze blowing over the woods and across the reeds, the huge, fertile, blossoming earth, all seed and bloom, drift of leaves that turn again to flowers, and the everlasting Sorrow of the Joy that mates and unmates and mates again. He sees the earth with all its little lives, so apparently small, and yet so incalculable in their mysterious significance."
Although we are proud to give this great French book to the American public, we feel that this is only one of the remarkable stories offered by this magazine.
"Madeleine" begins in the September issue. We suggest that you get your copy from your newsdealer early as his supply is limited.
