HE MET 20 GHOSTS; LIKED ALL BUT ONE

Washington Man Upsets Popular Belief by Saying Hands Are Not Clammy.

DODGE CARBON DIOXIDE

One Visitor Brought Apples, He Says—Don't Anger Them, His Advice.

Special Dispatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD. New York Herald Bureau, Washington, D. C., March 11. Antigonish and its ethereal visitor, which apparently has gone on a strike since the arrival of scientists and curiosity seekers, is backed into insignificance when compared to the bodiless visitors who sometimes pick out Washington as a ghastly rendezvous.

At least so says William H. Bryson, 1002 M street, N. W., amateur ghost chaser of the District, who allows that since he first started studying the habits and mannerisms of spooks, five years ago, he has been visited by twenty assorted ghosts, all of whom turned out with one exception to be first rate chaps.

Bryson, who until recently was employed in the Government service in a semi-scientific capacity, has come out with the blanket statement that ghosts do have bodily characteristics and, contrary to popular belief, the hand clasp of a spook is warm and not cold and clammy.

While the hunter after the habitat of the dweller in the world beyond has made no effort to photograph his nocturnal visitors, he says he has held protracted conversations with many of his friends and relatives who have passed on.

Such materializations usually occur about midnight, Bryson says, but on two occasions he has been visited as early as 8 o'clock at night. Bryson agrees with those who have laid claim to being subjected to the weird pranks of the Antigonish ghost with one exception. He says spirits do not exhale carbon dioxide.

One Ghost Carried Apples. It might be said that Bryson goes further in his research in the fact that he avers that one of the ghosts who paid him a visit about three months ago wore silk gloves, or what appeared to be silk and felt like that material, and was carrying a few red apples.

Asked if he had held any protracted conversation with his ghostly friend Bryson admitted he had and went so far as to say he ate a shady apple. The fruit had no flavor, he said, but Bryson declares that a core was left and can produce it if occasion demands.

On one occasion, Bryson said, his brother visited him and complained bitterly about conditions on the Florida sea coast where a self-respecting ghost of the past decade could not enjoy himself. Whether it was the beach nymphs or the conditions regarding the influx of foreign spirits from Scotland the ghost did not say, but he nevertheless said he would seek some other clime during the winter of 1923.

The wandering ones also are subject to down and out periods in "shadowland," Bryson states, as one friend who was rather opulent here came wandering into his room with ghostly garments that had been patched in several places.

Don't Like Cold Reception. In this connection the saying that "you can't take it with you" may be erroneous, as the spook gave every evidence, according to the spectator, of being in need of a few shades of greenbacks to buy a new set of garments.

Some of the shades that return and haunt the scenes of their life are not inclined to be kindly disposed, especially if one turns the covers over the head and keeps mum until the ghost loses heart at the cold reception and blows off to some more hospitable place.

Another ghost that Bryson knew in the flesh, according to the medium, appeared to him on one occasion and bitterly berated him for having lost a few dollars of his white on earth in a business deal. "In the future you will see me often," the spook is said to have announced in the language of the beyond, and to prove it he came for six nights running.

Asked if he ever became nervous at the nocturnal visitations, Bryson hastened to remark that he did not invite the bodiless ones to visit him, but did not put up signs that no spook traffic would be allowed.

He qualified his last statement by saying that a prohibitive sign would only go to rile the departed ones and he would no doubt have his home cluttered up with a bevy of ghosts each night who might berate him for his unkindness.

FACED WITH DEFEAT, DECLARES DR. PRINCE

Says He Has Tried All Recipes for Luring Spooks Without Result.

To Pursue Quest of Antigonish Ghost Alone in MacDonald House.

CALEDONIA, Mills, N. S., March 11 (By a member of the expedition).—Dr. Prince to-day told me his Sabbath plans. There is no such thing as "rest for me on Sunday in this most mysterious quest," he said. "This Sabbath will be the most serious in my life. I am faced with defeat."

"The world looks to me for a solution of these continent-wide human interest events. To-day I cannot provide that solution. To-morrow, Sunday, I hope to. I am in receipt of messages from all parts of the world offering suggestions. I have tried all the recipes for coaxing out spooks that I know and without result. Mary Ellen, a very extraordinary girl, an excellent medium for manifestations of an uncanny nature, such as have occurred, has failed me. The most I can get out of Mary Ellen is a laugh.

"I have never seen her when she did not smile. That smile is a smile of innocence. I cannot think else—but she smiles, smiles, smiles. To me her foster mother is an enigma. Her foster father is a puzzle. Yet I cannot think ill of them. They are God-fearing people, devout members of their church, and their honor and integrity is substantially lacking by the parish clergy of all denominations. I had hoped with the entire family in the house last night that there could have been a recurrence of the events which have been recorded throughout the world. I was never more

Special Dispatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD. ATLANTIC CITY, March 11.—The women of America spent last year thirty-eight times as much for powder puffs, lip sticks, rouge and other articles of feminine facial adornment as they contributed to the Methodist Episcopal Church for its missions, according to the Rev. E. Luther Lovejoy of Chicago, who addressed the annual New Jersey Conference of that denomination here this afternoon.

Despite the lessened purchasing power of the dollar, Dr. Lovejoy observed with emotion, the cent is the symbol of generosity with a certain class of churchgoers. Many people, too, he said, do not understand that they are merely giving to the churches what their grandfathers gave, despite the radically dissimilar conditions. "We are a much wealthier country now, but it seems that this nation's sense of luxuries alone keeps pace," Dr. Lovejoy said. "The men smoke up a sufficient sum to finance the entire Methodist centenary for 147 years. Many men will own elaborate city homes, ride in expensive

SECRETARY WALLACE DENIES PROPAGANDA

No Differences Over Forestry and Alaskan Policies.

Special Dispatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD. New York Herald Bureau, Washington, D. C., March 11. Secretary of Agriculture Wallace today wrote a letter to Senator Capper of Kansas, in which he denied that there were any differences between his department and that of Secretary of the Interior Fall over "forestry policies and the question of Alaskan development."

Secretary Wallace says it apparently "has been charged that the Department of Agriculture has been guilty of issuing propaganda criticizing another Government department or the heads of another department," and continues: "There is absolutely no foundation for such a charge. Neither the Department of Agriculture nor any one connected with it has been guilty of issuing propaganda of any kind." Then he reviews the circumstances surrounding the article written by Col. Greeley of his department, and which is being used by the American Forestry
