

PLANNING TO BATTLE SPREE AND TROUNCE THE DODGERS TO 2

Bancroft and Snyder Lead in Attack With Home Runs

Uncle Robbie Uses Three Pitchers in Vain Attempt to Check Wicked Clubbing of McGraw Men; Jess Barnes in Trim.

The Giants butted Al Mamaux of the Dodgers unconscious in the first inning at the Polo Grounds yesterday and knocked him right into the showers in the second, taking the third skirmish in the Battle of the Boroughs by the score of 10 to 2. Wilbert Robinson attempted to deceive McGraw by shifting his batting order, putting Ivan the Terrible down near the bottom, but John Joseph saw through the disguise. About 15,000 witnessed the sufferings of the Dodgers.

The Giants ran amuck with their clubs and their brutality was very distressing to many visitors from the other side of the bridge, among them being Uncle Tom Rice, the plesiousaur hunter of Flatbush, Irish Meusel seemed to have cured himself of the home run habit, but Beauty Bancroft poked a homer into the right field stands, while Pancho Snyder, the terror of Alamo Square, San Antonio, drove one into the left field bleachers. All of the Giants got at least one hit, Heinie Groh helping himself to four, which is considered a fair day's work in these parts.

All through the murky afternoon the crack of the base hit detonated against the sloove of Coogan's Bluff while the regular inmates of the Polo Grounds exulted and the followers of the Flatbush Fusiliers became more and more hoarse. After the remnants of Mamaux where wheeled to the clubhouse Uncle Wilbert Robinson tried to conceal himself in the Dodger dugout, but part of his countenance was still visible to the naked eye.

Sergeant Smith Summoned. After Mamaux departed Sergeant Sherrod Smith, who had started to work a subway ball like the one used by Mays, tried to stem the charge of the Giants. The sergeant leaved the unbecoming pitch on the starboard side with considerable speed, but the Giants continued to accumulate base hits. The Dodgers finally wound up with Barney Shivers on the mound after the Sergeant had been yanked for a pincher.

For a little while it looked as though the shuffling of the Dodger lineup might do some good. Hans Andy Huggins had been shifted to the leadoff in place of Ivan the Terrible, started with a single to left. With Johnston out Tommy Griffith drove a three runner to left center, scoring High. Wheet lifted a long fly to right and Griffith scored. Then the Dodger batters practically ceased to function on the starboard side and the Giants continued to march around the sacks.

The Giant parade started promptly at 2:41. Bancroft, a first man up, lifted a home run into the right field stands. Rawlings lined one to Jimmy Johnston's feet, and while the Dodger third baseman was waiting for it the pill took to center. Groh, who had been shifted to right field, Groh lined one at Schmandt so torridly that it knocked the Dodger first baseman for a loss of five yards. Rawlings lined one to center and Groh got a base on balls, which put a world's champion on every corner of the infield.

By this time young Al Mamaux began to look a bit uncomfortable. Meusel lifted one high to Ivan the Terrible, Long George Kelly hoisted a fly to center and Rawlings scored. Eaglebeak was singled to left and Groh scored.

In the Giant half of the second inning young Jess Barnes started with a nice swing to left. He was followed by a base on balls and Rawlings advanced the men on base by rolling a nice sacrifice to Schmandt. Then came Heinie Groh, the Dodger prisoner, who sent a single to left center, scoring the Rhineland. Heinie der Groh lammed out a double to right center, which scored Barnes and Bancroft and sent Mamaux to the showers.

Sergeant Sherrod Smith, dealing them left handed from the dirt in imitation of Carl Mays, started to save the game. He lined a double to left center, which started to crab when he was called out. There was method in his madness, for Schmandt and Smith joined in the defense. While the jawing match was on Groh quietly raved home with another run.

Jess Barnes Supreme. Jess Barnes, who seemed to solve the puzzle in the Dodger batting order after the first inning, opened the fourth for the Giants with his own personal second hit of the afternoon. It was a single to left center, which scored Barnes and Groh. The home run of Pancho Snyder practicing closely the material from the bench. Pancho just patted the pill into the left field bleachers for one of those long home runs, the sort of swigs that would be a home run on anybody's legs.

During the afternoon the balling came close to wrecking the Giants' extensive infield or a large part of it. Jawn was called out on strikes and in his wrath he rolled his bat back toward the dugout. Heinie der Groh was standing in the path of the flying timber and saved his toes by hurling the club. Today the Dodgers and the Giants finish out the series, which stands two to one for the champs. On Sunday Charles Hercules Ebbets will entertain the Phillies on his own estate at Flatbush, while the Giants will meet G. Washington Grant's Braves at the Polo Grounds. The season is starting to get loose.

PRINCETON BLANKS VIRGINIA BY 2 TO 0

Timely Hit by Jefferies in Third Settles Outcome of Pitchers' Duel.

Special Dispatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD. WASHINGTON, April 14.—Miller Huggins is on a hunt for another outfielder, an experienced ball hawk who also can hit. Quite a prescription, but Huggins believes that it can be filled. The manager of the Yankees made known the resurgence of his old desire this afternoon after it had been announced that the rain was just a little too thick to permit of playing the third game with Senator.

The two contests we already have played have impressed me again with the desirability of getting another experienced man for the outfield," said Huggins. "I have two or three men under consideration and I believe that we will be able to pull through a trade in a short time. The man I think I will land will be able to step right in and do us a good turn. He can field and he can bat, and he has been around long enough to know just what to do with the ball."

While Huggins made no bald statement of his plans we gathered from his remarks that he was looking for a man who could play both in the field and in the batting line. The manager of the Yankees made known the resurgence of his old desire this afternoon after it had been announced that the rain was just a little too thick to permit of playing the third game with Senator.

Adrian C. Anson, Notable Baseball Figure, Is Dead

ADRIAN C. ANSON.

'Pop,' Legendary Hero of National Sport, Stricken at Age of 70—Established Remarkable 20 Year Record as a Batsman.

CHICAGO, April 14.—Adrian C. Anson, for more than half a century one of the notable figures of baseball, died to-day at St. Luke's Hospital after a week's illness and just two days before his seventieth birthday.

The death of "Pop" Anson, as he was called by the thousands of baseball followers who have known him as one of the legendary heroes of the national sport, came suddenly after it was believed he was well on the way to recovery, following an operation last Monday. He had been stricken on the street Sunday with internal trouble.

Mr. Anson's death has placed the sport-loving world in mourning, for "Pop" not only was beloved by every person interested in baseball, but was admired for his manliness and squareness by all true sportsmen. His ability on the diamond, where he was looked on as the greatest of first basemen, brought him admiration of the type given to physical prowess, while his sportsmanship brought him the respect of all.

Expected to Recover.

"Pop" was an outdoors lover up to the day he was stricken, turning to golf when he no longer could handle a baseball. His confinement in the hospital was very irksome and during the last few days his first question to his doctor was: "When do I get home, Doc?"

He always followed this with an insistent request that he be permitted to go home for his birthday—Monday—and was greatly cheered on the occasions that he was told this might be possible.

Winner of Many Pennants.

In the early eighties he became manager of the Chicago team and, in winning pennants, became known as a disciplinarian. Through the various baseball fights and the numerous occasions on which he insisted on fair play, this trait was carried with him to the golf links, where he has been a familiar figure in recent years. He always observed the many rules of golf etiquette and insisted that those about him do the same. There are few tyros on the local public links who have not received one of "Pop's" famous "bawling out" for moving, talking or violating some rule of etiquette as the old timer prepared for his shots.
