U. S. WILL BORROW WHILE BONUS WAITS Government Must Raise Approximately $465,000,000 Before June 15.

TO MEET ITS NOTES Maturing Obligations Include Victory Issue and Liberty Bond Interest.

RAID BILL STILL SLEEPS Senate Finance Committee Takes No Action to Hasten Decision.

By LOUIS SEIBOLD. Special Dispatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD, New York Herald Bureau, Washington, D. C., May 22. The Treasury Department administered another jolt to the advocates of the bonus raid on the public Treasury to-day to add to existing complications.

While Senatorial supporters of the scheme were trying to decide on the next move the financial department of the Government was preparing to add a very interesting development to the situation.

The effect of it should be to convince bonus agitators that there is very little prospect of obtaining revenues to finance the $5,000,000,000 undertaking. Within a few days the Treasury will announce its plan for the heaviest financing forced on the Government since the war to meet maturing obligations.

Must Go Into the Market. The condition of the Government finances, which renders it imperative that the Treasury go into the money market to borrow funds to conduct stupendous Government operations, was cited by officials this afternoon as an additional reason for putting a stop to the bonus raid without further bickering.

Government plans for raising money to meet its obligations will show that the Treasury will have to raise $775,000,000 to pay bills maturing on June 15. As against this total the Treasury expects to collect in revenue from income taxes about $310,000,000.

This means that the Government must borrow approximately $465,000,000 before that date. No details as to the method for borrowing this sum of money were available to-day, but Treasury officials said that a feasible plan would be worked out within the next week.

The maturing obligations which the Treasury must finance from income tax receipts and on borrowed money includes $350,000,000 Treasury certificates of indebtedness, $270,000,000 of Victory 3 1/2 per cent. notes and $125,000,000 for interest due on the First and Second Liberty bond issues. It is probable that the Treasury will be put in the position of redeeming a large block of the Victory notes before June 15. While the Victory notes were called for redemption on that date, Secretary Mellon announced the Treasury is prepared to redeem them before that date, at the option of the holders.

OPENING GUN FIRED TO GET TARIFF OUT OF POLITICS

Continued from First Page. ing "pork barrel" legislation manifested a keen interest in the subject. Protests received by these Senators from their constituents, representing a wide variety of interests, including agricultural, have served to bring to light the many objectionable features of the Fordney-McCumber scheme.

Mr. McCumber and the Senators associated with him in promoting the bill which bears his name already have sounded the call to partisan arms by invoking the assistance of President Harding. The President's statement to the Chamber of Commerce a few days ago that Congress should pass the tariff bill without delay is receiving much greater respect and consideration than those made by him regarding the bonus and other legislative measures. The President is known to have based his statement on the representations made to him by dyed in the wool reactionary high tariff leaders in Congress.

Does Not Realize Opposition. A Republican Senator who discussed the matter with the President said this afternoon that he came away with the impression that the President did not appreciate the extent of popular opposition to the Fordney-McCumber tariff bill.

The attitude of Senators who have indicated their support of the tariff measure which Mr. McCumber is trying to drive through the Senate under the lash of party regularity does not reflect approval of many of the prohibitive schedules contained in it. Some of these Senators frankly inculcated Democratic criticisms of the bill. The only tie that seems to bind them to its support is that they have received "concessions" that are expected to prove politically helpful in their own districts.

The statement made by Democratic Senators that the rates imposed under the Fordney-McCumber bill will fall heavily on the people of the country is not disputed by a number of their Republican colleagues. Excessive rates set up in the bill can in the judgment of these Senators have no other effect than to increase the cost of living for not only the industrial but also the agricultural population of the country. Many of the articles which occupy an important part in the domestic welfare of farmers, such as aluminum, have been increased out of all proportion of economic necessities.

Higher Duty on Harvest Hats. Even members of the agricultural bloc have been provoked to remonstrance against "concessions" granted individual Senators to gain support for the bill. Harvest hats, for instance, worn by field hands, will, in the future, pay a duty of 30 per cent. instead of 20. Many of these laws which provide an instructive example of the methods by which the Fordney-McCumber bill was framed come from foreign countries. A point was made recently in the Senate debate that only a few American hat manufacturers did not ask for the increase.

Arguments based upon similar inequalities are swept aside by Mr. McCumber and his associates with the assertion that they are inspired by newspapers which they allege are controlled by important business interests in the towns where they are published.

Senators Simmons and Underwood, who are recognized as competent authorities in tariff matters have effectively exploded the fallacy that opposition to the Fordney-McCumber bill is traceable to partisan origin. Senator Simmons has read hundreds of editorial comments from newspapers that are not in sympathy with Democratic policies. He has called attention to comments made by THE NEW YORK HERALD and other newspapers which he has described as Republican or independent in political thought.

Persist in the Charge. Mr. McCumber's reply to the declaration of Mr. Simmons that the pending tariff bill was too unjust to receive the support of newspapers of Republican sympathy has been declared both incorrect and unjustified. Both he and Mr. Smoot have persisted in making the charge that the adverse comment of newspapers of Republican and independent tendencies have been dictated by business reasons. Mr. Smoot declared that business in New York city "is largely built on the importation of goods from foreign countries and the newspapers are kept up largely by the advertisements of the great importers."

Mr. McCumber has ventured even further in this direction. In a colloquy with Mr. Simmons he said: "The policies of practically all of the great metropolitan newspapers of the country are governed by the counting rooms. If the great department stores do not own stock in the great metropolitan press of the country, they are their customers, and through the advertising medium control the policies of these papers. From the time of the introduction of the great department stores of the country to the present time these papers have become their mouthpieces in favor of practically free trade, or at least a very low tariff."

"Every one of these great department establishments is an importer. I would to heaven that the American consumer could compare the price which the stores pay for the things they import with the price they charge the consumers. Any little profit that may be made by the producer in this country would sink into insignificance compared with the enormous profit that is measured between the importer's purchase price and the selling price of the same commodities in those great stores whose representatives are damning every effort to keep alive the American producer. Now I know that the metropolitan press of the country represents the importer. They speak the sentiments of the importer. I know their power throughout the country."

Other Republican Senators who have obtained for their respective districts the adoption of rates insuring the maximum of "protection" have repeated in other forms the statements made by Senators Smoot and McCumber. It is significant, however, that many of these Senators express complete dissatisfaction with most of the schedules which do not promise personal benefits of a political character.

SENATE TOO WORDY, DECLARES PEPPER

Chamber's Methods Are Diplomatic Rather Than Legislative, New Member Finds.

Special Dispatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD, PHILADELPHIA, May 22.—The United States Senate was pictured as an organization of diplomats rather than an assemblage of legislators by Senator Pepper to-day in a speech before the City Business Club. The Senator described the workings of the body, made up, as he called it, of "ambassadors from each of the sovereign States."

"Whether in the near future the Senate will modify some of its traditions and function more like a legislative body and less like a conference of ambassadors remains to be seen, and it is difficult for a new member to hazard a prediction of its outcome," he said. "I believe, however, that the business men of America would take a great interest in any proposal which would result in an early passage of legislation if it involves the curtailment of some of the ambassadorial privileges."

Conception of ambassadorial dignity, designated commonly as "senatorial courtesy," often leads to almost ludicrous proceedings, Senator Pepper continued, as, for instance, when a Senator interpolates a speech entirely foreign to the matter then under discussion. But no one has a right to interfere, although Senator Pepper said he had in mind a change in procedure.

"I would suggest," said Senator Pepper, "asking the Senator speaking if he believes he is discussing the matter under debate. Then if he is not so speaking and he answers 'yes' he would be held up to the ridicule of the press gallery. Perhaps the time will come when Senators will be required to speak only for a limited time."

"The committee work is heavy, and in committees the most important part of the work of the Senate is done. While the tariff bill was before the Senate Finance Committee that body sat day after day from an early morning hour into and through the evening, and kept this up for months. Even under normal conditions the Senate Finance Committee requires regular attendance at frequent meetings and much time spent in study. The thoroughness with which committee work is done, explains the weight accorded to the reports of the committees."

Contacts with responsible officers in the executive department of government are among the most agreeable of a Senator's experiences. "It is always a reassuring thing to me to find myself convinced that the President has surrounded himself with a wise and hard working group of advisers, each of whom is effectively discharging his great responsibility."

TURKS ATTACK Y. M. C. A. CONSTANTINOPLE, May 21.—The Turkish press is attacking the local Young Men's Christian Association for having permitted a Greek officer to deliver an address on the occasion of the centenary of the Greek independence. The Techid Eshar, newspaper, speaking of the Y. M. C. A. says: "This American institution, the object of which is to drive our youth into the region of Protestantism, has also become a center of Greek propaganda."

HUDSON BOATS START FRIDAY. The steamships Berkshire and C. W. Morse will be put into commission on the run between New York and Albany next Friday, according to an announcement yesterday by Middleton S. Borland, receiver for the Hudson Navigation Company. They will sail daily from New York at 6 P. M., daylight saving time. Beginning Sunday the regular weekly excursions to Newburgh will be resumed.

BATTLING WATSON HUNGRY FOR FIGHT

Georgia Senator Makes Promises in Vain to Senator Phipps of Colorado.

Special Dispatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD, New York Herald Bureau, Washington, D. C., May 22. Senator Tom Watson (Ga.) to-day dined Senator Phipps (Col.) to come down the steps leading from the Senate chamber to the corridor and simultaneously threatened to "dash his damn face" and "beat him to a pulp."

Senator McNary (Ore.) arrived in time to prevent a fight. Senator Watson was still announcing in a loud voice what he would have done to Senator Phipps if he had "moved an eyelash" when the Colorado Senator walked away with Senator McNary.

Watson was the aggressor and he used some of the strongest and most unprintable words in the English language in his denunciation of the Senator from Colorado. The argument started in the chamber when Senator Watson went to Senator Phipps' seat and berated him for standing by the recommendations for the appointment of Jack Curran as postmaster at Savannah, Lawson Fritchard at Tennil and J. D. Crane at Dixie. Mr. Phipps is chairman of the sub-committee on post offices.

Some one suggested that the quarreling Senators go outside and settle their differences. Hardly had they reached a door leading to the corridor when Senator Watson called Senator Phipps a "blankety blank 'tax dodger'"—only he did not say "blankety blank." Senator Phipps stood on the steps leading to the corridor and remained there while Senator Watson dared him to come down.

"If you will step down here I will mash your damn face," was the declaration of the Georgian. Senator Phipps showed no disposition to step down and then Senator McNary came along and led away Senator Phipps, leaving Senator Watson still exploding.

It was quite warm in Washington to-day. "Shows the Way the milk of the future will be sold. ROGERS RICHEST MILK is ahead of the times in being fresh-packed in glass.
