

ARMY MAN NAMED BY WIFE IN OWN SUIT

Mrs. McGee Produces Husband's Letters to Clear Herself and Prove Lost Love.

An unnamed American artillery officer, who during the latter part of 1919 is said to have enjoyed visiting the apartment of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. McGee, Jr., and drinking their liquor, figures in Mrs. McGee's suit for separation started yesterday in the Supreme Court.

Mr. McGee counters his wife's allegations with charges that she had been unduly hospitable with the army officer. Mrs. McGee denies this allegation and submits letters said to have been written by Mr. McGee to his mother-in-law, in one to "Dear Mother Wainwright" he is alleged to have written:

"Several months ago I met a very sweet girl, who has become strongly attached to me. I am to her, for her as I once cared for Elsie. She is entitled to consideration, as she seems willing to give me what Elsie has never been willing to give—her undivided self."

On another occasion he is represented as having written to Mrs. Wainwright concerning one of the artillery officers' visits that "neither he nor she ever explained satisfactorily about their acquaintance and friendship, and all that she ever would say to me was that he liked to come to my apartment on a regular basis. I finally kicked him out of the place and thought I would never see him again. In April, 1920, however, I returned from Chicago and found not only the regular lock, to which I had a key, on my apartment door, but also a burglar proof lock.

"My wife came to the door and opened it. She was in negligee and a nightgown. She embraced me, saying she was glad I had come. When I went to go to the bathroom I found the apartment not to be kept and her arms about my neck. I had observed that she writes a regular note to me in a chair, and in the bathroom I found the army officer. I tried to look him in, but was unable to do so. He left the apartment and I cut up the clothing he left behind."

After this incident, the letter goes on to show that McGee is represented as having forgiven his wife and continued to live with her. When he discovered annual telephone calls recorded on his bill he moved.

SAYS G. A. WHEELOCK NEEDS A COMMITTEE

Wife Tells of Realty Man's Inability to Manage His Many Affairs.

Mrs. Julia Ellen Wheelock, active in the war as the head of the Pioneer Women Recruiters and thrice wife of Norman Selby, "Kid McCoy," applied yesterday to Justice Wasservogel in Supreme Court to have her husband, George A. Wheelock, adjudged incompetent.

Mr. Wheelock, who is 63, formerly was president of the Metropolitan Turf Association. In recent years he has operated extensively in real estate.

Mrs. Wheelock says her husband has not been able to manage either himself or his business affairs properly since last March. He was twice examined in May by Dr. Abraham A. Brill, of 1 West Seventieth street, and Dr. Menna S. Gregory, psychiatrist of Bellevue Hospital, and found to be suffering from general paresis. Dr. Brill observed that Mr. Wheelock has no sense of responsibility.

Mr. Wheelock has at various times held an interest in property at 2 West Eighty-sixth street, 30 to 38 East Thir-

ALLOWS WIDOW TO SELL HUSBAND'S MAUSOLEUM

Court Grants Plea of Woman Whose $100,000 Is Gone.

Justice Gavegan in the Supreme Court, The Bronx, granted the application yesterday of Mrs. Elizabeth Wisen, aged 50, formerly a singer in the old Atlantic Gardens in the Bowery, to sell the mausoleum of her husband in Woodlawn Cemetery.

Mrs. Wisen in her application said she was destitute, the $100,000 fortune left her in 1901 by her husband, Henry Wisen, having disappeared.

The mausoleum will be sold at private auction. Several telephone offers to buy the property already have been received. Wisen left a provision in his will that his widow must erect a mausoleum costing at least $25,000. The National Vaudeville Association sent word to Mrs. Wisen yesterday that it would assist her if she needed it, but she believes the sale of the mausoleum will bring enough to keep her the rest of her life.

Adolph Lewisohn, president of the Children's Aid Association, was chairman of the ceremonies.

fixed at $5,000 each. These men gave the names: Albert Marx, fireman, 35 Newark street, Hoboken; Charles Leik, fireman, 142 Garden street, Hoboken; Joseph Schumar, alter, 369 West street, Manhattan; Ernest Abrahamson, alter, same address; Fred Krost, foreman, same address, and Thompson Noda, Japanese cook, 35 Henry street, Manhattan.

All nine were remanded to the Raymond street jail for another hearing next Saturday. All of the men pleaded not guilty of conspiring to violate the Volstead act.

Although the Ripple was said to have brought about 2,000 cases of liquor to New York, only 800 bags containing six bottles each were seized by Federal agents on the tug. The remainder of the cargo was landed in speed boats during the three days the Ripple lay fifteen miles out of the harbor. The bootleg value of the cargo was set at about $300,000.

Information that the vessel had been anchored offshore and would enter the harbor was received Friday by Federal authorities. Seven agents in charge of Henry W. Grunwald, and Chris J. Fortman, lay in wait for the craft all night.

The agents found the Ripple docked alongside four lumber barges with six or more power launches taking loads of liquor from the tug. In climbing over the lumber the agents gave alarm to the smaller boats, which escaped in the direction of Governors Island.

Having no boats in which to follow, the Federal men opened fire with their revolvers. This fire was returned by the escaping rum runners, about thirty shots in all being exchanged. None of the agents was hit, though the bullets splattered on the lumber piles behind them.

The tug was then rushed by the agents with drawn guns. As they got aboard, they found the crew on deck, some of them throwing rifles overboard. Two or three brief struggles followed before the crew was subdued and locked below.
