

Storm Casualty List Shows 53 Dead; Seven Are Missing and 53 Injured

The following is a list of the casualties attending Sunday evening's storm, compiled up to early this morning:

IDENTIFIED DEAD.

- ANDERSON, JOHN, 4138 Diagne avenue, The Bronx; drowned in Long Rock.
BIALEK, SAMUEL ISRAEL, 16, 16 Long Rock, Passaic; drowned in Passaic River, near Singac.
PETZOLD, CLARA, 53, 2416 Loyerre avenue, The Bronx; drowned, City Island.

INJURED—53.

- BYRNE, MARY, 27, 2175 Bathgate avenue, The Bronx; crushed by falling tree, possible fracture of skull; to Nassau Hospital, Mineola.
CECANTANO, SANGIO, 18, 474 Henry street, Eastchester; from submersion; Fordham Hospital.
CHRISTIAN, ETHEL, 26, 42 West 133d street; injured in Ferris wheel accident; to Fordham Hospital.

Willing to Share Custody if Father Provides for Them Adequately.

SHE ASKS FOR A TRUCE

Undermyer Hints at Possible Kidnaping or Other Forms of Vengeance.

SAFEGUARDS SUGGESTED

Justice Finch Adjoins Hearing on Settlement of Separation Decree.

An amicable settlement of the legal separation which Mrs. Helen Elwood Stokes won last year from W. E. D. Stokes, wealthy real estate owner, appears now to hinge upon the possibility of a mutual agreement concerning the custody of their two children, properly safeguarded, and adequate financial provision for their future.

MRS. R. W. CHAMBERS CHARGES GEM THEFT

Says Necklace Was Gone After Process Server Forced Way Into House.

MAID FLED SCREAMING

Author's Wife Leaped From Tub and Was Served; Has Intruder Arrested.

David Hartman, a process server of 1710 Union avenue, Brooklyn, was locked up in the East Sixty-seventh street station last night, accused of throwing legal papers at Mrs. Robert W. Chambers, wife of the author, after she had run from the bathroom in her home at 43 East Eighty-third street without stopping to put on any great amount of clothing to find out the cause of the noise that Hartman was making in his efforts to get up stairs past the maid.

Wards of Colorado Court

These children are the wards of the Colorado court.

Heffner's Parents in Tears

Heffner's father and mother were in tears in their home in Jamaica, L. I., last night when they were trying to get bail for him. They were amazed at his arrest, for they believed him to be an insurance adjuster. They said he had not frequented the race track for father admitted that he had frequently supplied the son with money when he said he needed it.

Advertisement for BELLANS Indigestion Tablets, featuring a cartoon character and text: 'Sure Relief FOR INDIGESTION... BELLANS Indigestion 25 CENTS... PEERLESS TOWEL SUPPLY CO. PHONE - MAIN 572'

We only want a few, but we want them now

PROMOTIONS have left a few openings—less than twenty, in fact—in our Sales Department. They constitute an immediate need for a few qualified men who can measure up to our requirements.

Ours is a large and successful corporation, backed by more than thirty of the best industrial and technical brains in America. Our Advisory Board includes such men as Dr. C. P. Steinmetz, Chief Consulting Engineer of the General Electric Co., A. Russell Bond, for 18 years Editor of the Scientific American, P. H. Duesenberg, President of Duesenberg Motors, Inc.

We do not believe in transplanting "high-powered" executives from outside. We make promotions entirely from our own sales staff. Naturally we select new men with extreme care. And our personnel records show us how mutually satisfactory and profitable this care has proved. Every man here is building solidly for a permanent business future.

You may or may not be the exact type of man we are seeking. You may or may not have had selling experience. But three things you must have—courage, determination and that intangible something called "personality."

To arrange for a personal interview, write at once, giving a fairly complete outline of your work and yourself. All communications are held strictly confidential. Address Director of Personnel, S711 Herald, 280 Broadway.

Advertisement for Chauffeurs' Suits, featuring an illustration of a man in a suit and text: 'Chauffeurs' Suits At $42, $45 and $55... Suits that are amply full where freedom is needed and smartly snug wherever style demands it.'

Ferris Wheel Inquiry.

Another phase of the destruction and death cost was that of the Ferris wheel collapse at the amusement park. It was estimated that seven persons were killed and forty injured. This deadly accident may result in the elimination of such amusement contrivances as that of the Ferris wheel.

Grand Jury to Act.

The Bronx county Grand Jury will investigate the Ferris wheel accident. It was announced at the District Attorney's office. District Attorney Glennon said that he had no objection to the Grand Jury of all the amusement resorts in the Bronx and that he was convinced that most of the apparatus used in these parks is unsafe.

UNIDENTIFIED DEAD.

- Man, 26, drowned in Harlem River off 180th street, clad in blue woolen bathing suit.
Man, 25, found floating near the Larchmont Yacht Club. He wore a blue sweater and white flannel trousers, had blue eyes and light brown hair.
Two women, drowned off City Island.
One woman about 30, killed on Ferris wheel.
Two boys about 6 years old.

MISSING—7.

- The following were reported missing at the Missing Persons Bureau at Police Headquarters:
ELOG, JOE, 114 West 117th street.
CONY, JOSEPHINE, 350 East Forty-first street.
PAN, FRANCIS, 43, Clove and Richmond roads, Staten Island.
SCARLETT, JOSEPH, 1352 Sixty-second street, Brooklyn.
VALLMER, CARL, 23, Penny Field road, The Bronx; believed drowned off City Island.
WUNDER, ERNEST, 1229 Cypress avenue.

Parks Never So Hard Hit.

Probably never before was the park system of New York so hard hit, or so much damage caused to the trees in the public streets and private grounds. A survey of the parks yesterday by the officials in charge revealed astonishing destruction. In the parks of The Bronx 600 trees were destroyed, many of them fine big trees.

But it was in Westchester that the most damage of this nature was done. Scarcely a household enjoying trees on his ground was not lamenting the ruin of a favorite tree. Whole streets were denuded if they lay in the path of the gale. Passengers in trains saw yesterday morning, as they passed through Westchester, innumerable great trees uprooted and falling, blocking the roads and forcing motorists to detour. Firemen and volunteers were out laboring to clear up the wreckage. In some cases, at the height of the storm, big trees were lifted and hurled upon

NEW HOT WAVE COMING AS BREEZE COOLS CITY

Mississippi Sending Weather Near Century Mark.

Fair, with a slight rise in temperature, is the weather man's forecast for today, with brisk winds such as fanned the city yesterday and brought relief from the excessive heat.

Ward's "Clocker" Discovered.

Another item indicating that Walter Ward was more than casually interested in the betting side of racing is that investigators were reported yesterday to have found a negro woman actively working as a "clocker," including New Orleans, as a "clocker." His business was to watch the thoroughbreds in their trials and report their performance. This man, the investigators said, was a groundkeeper at the Brooklyn Federal League baseball park when the Wards owned the Brooklyn club.

Ward's "Clocker" Discovered.

Another item indicating that Walter Ward was more than casually interested in the betting side of racing is that investigators were reported yesterday to have found a negro woman actively working as a "clocker," including New Orleans, as a "clocker." His business was to watch the thoroughbreds in their trials and report their performance. This man, the investigators said, was a groundkeeper at the Brooklyn Federal League baseball park when the Wards owned the Brooklyn club.

Ward's "Clocker" Discovered.

Another item indicating that Walter Ward was more than casually interested in the betting side of racing is that investigators were reported yesterday to have found a negro woman actively working as a "clocker," including New Orleans, as a "clocker." His business was to watch the thoroughbreds in their trials and report their performance. This man, the investigators said, was a groundkeeper at the Brooklyn Federal League baseball park when the Wards owned the Brooklyn club.

Ward's "Clocker" Discovered.

Another item indicating that Walter Ward was more than casually interested in the betting side of racing is that investigators were reported yesterday to have found a negro woman actively working as a "clocker," including New Orleans, as a "clocker." His business was to watch the thoroughbreds in their trials and report their performance. This man, the investigators said, was a groundkeeper at the Brooklyn Federal League baseball park when the Wards owned the Brooklyn club.

Ward's "Clocker" Discovered.

Another item indicating that Walter Ward was more than casually interested in the betting side of racing is that investigators were reported yesterday to have found a negro woman actively working as a "clocker," including New Orleans, as a "clocker." His business was to watch the thoroughbreds in their trials and report their performance. This man, the investigators said, was a groundkeeper at the Brooklyn Federal League baseball park when the Wards owned the Brooklyn club.

Ward's "Clocker" Discovered.

Another item indicating that Walter Ward was more than casually interested in the betting side of racing is that investigators were reported yesterday to have found a negro woman actively working as a "clocker," including New Orleans, as a "clocker." His business was to watch the thoroughbreds in their trials and report their performance. This man, the investigators said, was a groundkeeper at the Brooklyn Federal League baseball park when the Wards owned the Brooklyn club.

Ward's "Clocker" Discovered.

Another item indicating that Walter Ward was more than casually interested in the betting side of racing is that investigators were reported yesterday to have found a negro woman actively working as a "clocker," including New Orleans, as a "clocker." His business was to watch the thoroughbreds in their trials and report their performance. This man, the investigators said, was a groundkeeper at the Brooklyn Federal League baseball park when the Wards owned the Brooklyn club.

Ward's "Clocker" Discovered.

Another item indicating that Walter Ward was more than casually interested in the betting side of racing is that investigators were reported yesterday to have found a negro woman actively working as a "clocker," including New Orleans, as a "clocker." His business was to watch the thoroughbreds in their trials and report their performance. This man, the investigators said, was a groundkeeper at the Brooklyn Federal League baseball park when the Wards owned the Brooklyn club.

Ward's "Clocker" Discovered.

Another item indicating that Walter Ward was more than casually interested in the betting side of racing is that investigators were reported yesterday to have found a negro woman actively working as a "clocker," including New Orleans, as a "clocker." His business was to watch the thoroughbreds in their trials and report their performance. This man, the investigators said, was a groundkeeper at the Brooklyn Federal League baseball park when the Wards owned the Brooklyn club.

Ward's "Clocker" Discovered.

Another item indicating that Walter Ward was more than casually interested in the betting side of racing is that investigators were reported yesterday to have found a negro woman actively working as a "clocker," including New Orleans, as a "clocker." His business was to watch the thoroughbreds in their trials and report their performance. This man, the investigators said, was a groundkeeper at the Brooklyn Federal League baseball park when the Wards owned the Brooklyn club.

Ward's "Clocker" Discovered.

Another item indicating that Walter Ward was more than casually interested in the betting side of racing is that investigators were reported yesterday to have found a negro woman actively working as a "clocker," including New Orleans, as a "clocker." His business was to watch the thoroughbreds in their trials and report their performance. This man, the investigators said, was a groundkeeper at the Brooklyn Federal League baseball park when the Wards owned the Brooklyn club.

Ward's "Clocker" Discovered.

Another item indicating that Walter Ward was more than casually interested in the betting side of racing is that investigators were reported yesterday to have found a negro woman actively working as a "clocker," including New Orleans, as a "clocker." His business was to watch the thoroughbreds in their trials and report their performance. This man, the investigators said, was a groundkeeper at the Brooklyn Federal League baseball park when the Wards owned the Brooklyn club.

Ward's "Clocker" Discovered.

Another item indicating that Walter Ward was more than casually interested in the betting side of racing is that investigators were reported yesterday to have found a negro woman actively working as a "clocker," including New Orleans, as a "clocker." His business was to watch the thoroughbreds in their trials and report their performance. This man, the investigators said, was a groundkeeper at the Brooklyn Federal League baseball park when the Wards owned the Brooklyn club.

Ward's "Clocker" Discovered.

Another item indicating that Walter Ward was more than casually interested in the betting side of racing is that investigators were reported yesterday to have found a negro woman actively working as a "clocker," including New Orleans, as a "clocker." His business was to watch the thoroughbreds in their trials and report their performance. This man, the investigators said, was a groundkeeper at the Brooklyn Federal League baseball park when the Wards owned the Brooklyn club.

Ward's "Clocker" Discovered.

Another item indicating that Walter Ward was more than casually interested in the betting side of racing is that investigators were reported yesterday to have found a negro woman actively working as a "clocker," including New Orleans, as a "clocker." His business was to watch the thoroughbreds in their trials and report their performance. This man, the investigators said, was a groundkeeper at the Brooklyn Federal League baseball park when the Wards owned the Brooklyn club.

Ward's "Clocker" Discovered.

Another item indicating that Walter Ward was more than casually interested in the betting side of racing is that investigators were reported yesterday to have found a negro woman actively working as a "clocker," including New Orleans, as a "clocker." His business was to watch the thoroughbreds in their trials and report their performance. This man, the investigators said, was a groundkeeper at the Brooklyn Federal League baseball park when the Wards owned the Brooklyn club.

Ward's "Clocker" Discovered.

Another item indicating that Walter Ward was more than casually interested in the betting side of racing is that investigators were reported yesterday to have found a negro woman actively working as a "clocker," including New Orleans, as a "clocker." His business was to watch the thoroughbreds in their trials and report their performance. This man, the investigators said, was a groundkeeper at the Brooklyn Federal League baseball park when the Wards owned the Brooklyn club.

Ward's "Clocker" Discovered.

Another item indicating that Walter Ward was more than casually interested in the betting side of racing is that investigators were reported yesterday to have found a negro woman actively working as a "clocker," including New Orleans, as a "clocker." His business was to watch the thoroughbreds in their trials and report their performance. This man, the investigators said, was a groundkeeper at the Brooklyn Federal League baseball park when the Wards owned the Brooklyn club.

Ward's "Clocker" Discovered.

Another item indicating that Walter Ward was more than casually interested in the betting side of racing is that investigators were reported yesterday to have found a negro woman actively working as a "clocker," including New Orleans, as a "clocker." His business was to watch the thoroughbreds in their trials and report their performance. This man, the investigators said, was a groundkeeper at the Brooklyn Federal League baseball park when the Wards owned the Brooklyn club.

Ward's "Clocker" Discovered.

Another item indicating that Walter Ward was more than casually interested in the betting side of racing is that investigators were reported yesterday to have found a negro woman actively working as a "clocker," including New Orleans, as a "clocker." His business was to watch the thoroughbreds in their trials and report their performance. This man, the investigators said, was a groundkeeper at the Brooklyn Federal League baseball park when the Wards owned the Brooklyn club.

Ward's "Clocker" Discovered.

Another item indicating that Walter Ward was more than casually interested in the betting side of racing is that investigators were reported yesterday to have found a negro woman actively working as a "clocker," including New Orleans, as a "clocker." His business was to watch the thoroughbreds in their trials and report their performance. This man, the investigators said, was a groundkeeper at the Brooklyn Federal League baseball park when the Wards owned the Brooklyn club.

Ward's "Clocker" Discovered.

Another item indicating that Walter Ward was more than casually interested in the betting side of racing is that investigators were reported yesterday to have found a negro woman actively working as a "clocker," including New Orleans, as a "clocker." His business was to watch the thoroughbreds in their trials and report their performance. This man, the investigators said, was a groundkeeper at the Brooklyn Federal League baseball park when the Wards owned the Brooklyn club.

Ward's "Clocker" Discovered.

Another item indicating that Walter Ward was more than casually interested in the betting side of racing is that investigators were reported yesterday to have found a negro woman actively working as a "clocker," including New Orleans, as a "clocker." His business was to watch the thoroughbreds in their trials and report their performance. This man, the investigators said, was a groundkeeper at the Brooklyn Federal League baseball park when the Wards owned the Brooklyn club.

Ward's "Clocker" Discovered.

Another item indicating that Walter Ward was more than casually interested in the betting side of racing is that investigators were reported yesterday to have found a negro woman actively working as a "clocker," including New Orleans, as a "clocker." His business was to watch the thoroughbreds in their trials and report their performance. This man, the investigators said, was a groundkeeper at the Brooklyn Federal League baseball park when the Wards owned the Brooklyn club.

Ward's "Clocker" Discovered.

Another item indicating that Walter Ward was more than casually interested in the betting side of racing is that investigators were reported yesterday to have found a negro woman actively working as a "clocker," including New Orleans, as a "clocker." His business was to watch the thoroughbreds in their trials and report their performance. This man, the investigators said, was a groundkeeper at the Brooklyn Federal League baseball park when the Wards owned the Brooklyn club.