

Talleyrands Here on the Last Lap of Trip Around Globe

Former Anna Gould Visits Native City After Long Absence.

Completing a trip around the continent on a tour of the Duke and Duchess of Talleyrand arrived at the Plaza Hotel yesterday and the former Anna Gould is again in her native New York after many years' absence.

The Duke and Duchess of Talleyrand left Paris six months ago and sailed for Marseille Tuesday for a voyage on board a French steamer.

"We stopped at Colombo, Singapore and other places en route for Hongkong. Travel in China was very uncomfortable and one was impressed with the number of spiders everywhere, keeping watch on travelers.

"Upon their return to Japan and found that country very different. The hotels were most comfortable and every one was glad to make the trip pleasant and agreeable. But one must admit that the country gave one the impression that they were preparing for war. There were soldiers training everywhere and the country was alive with boy scouts. We missed the cherry time, but were there when the lotus was in bloom and saw an abundance of the blossoms. The country is most interesting.

"We took the steamer President Jackson of the Admiral Line at Yokohama and came to Seattle. From there we went to San Francisco and then proceeded to Los Angeles. I was surprised to find the roads far superior to the roads in France. They were beautiful and the country is wonderful. The French roads were once very fine, but they have ruined them for the time being. Perhaps they are better now. I have been away so long that I am quite out of touch with the present conditions of roads or politics in France.

"We spent one week in Chicago, where the roads are delightful for motoring. We were the guests of the Rev. Samuel Watson, formerly head of the American Episcopal Church in Paris and now in Washington after spending the summer at their home in Prince Georges county, Maryland.

Miss Christabel Hill of Washington is now en route to the Orient on a trip around the world.

The Shoreham—Mr. and Mrs. A. Le Mout, Miss N. Rhoads, Miss L. H. Smith, Frank B. Stubbs and Mr. and Mrs. George H. Clancy, who returned twenty miles out of Chicago, in a pretty spot.

"I am very tired from my trip, but hope to enjoy New York."

The Duchess looks younger than she did when here ten years ago. She wore a frock of dull gold embroidered with blue silk. Her hair was styled in shades of brown, and a hat to match. Her Pekinese dog "Tanky" made the whole trip and was well received everywhere. She was glad to say. He is three years old, and was the gift of one of her brothers.

The Duchess of Talleyrand was very young when she became the bride of the Count Boniface de Castellane, and her wedding was one of the first important international marriages of this country. It was soon followed by that of Miss Honorio de Castellane and Mr. Marborough. Both terminated in divorces. When referring to this yesterday, the Duchess de Talleyrand said smiling, "I think it is a great mistake to marry when young."

Her son, Count Henri de Castellane, and the Countess his wife, who are in this country on a visit, are in Philadelphia with their mother and her grandmother, Mrs. James Elverson. It is said that they will start back to Paris this week. The youngest daughter of the Count Boniface de Castellane, and her wedding was one of the first important international marriages of this country. It was soon followed by that of Miss Honorio de Castellane and Mr. Marborough. Both terminated in divorces. When referring to this yesterday, the Duchess de Talleyrand said smiling, "I think it is a great mistake to marry when young."

MISS MARY HONE, 17, IN STAGE DEBUT TO-NIGHT AT GARRICK

Miss Mary Hone as Desdemona.

Another Daughter of Prominent Family, Choosing Drama Career to Star in 'R. U. R.'

Another daughter of a well known New York family identified with society for many years has followed a popular trend and chosen the stage as a profession. She is Miss Mary Hone, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus C. Hone of 110 West Fifty-fifth street, and she will make her debut to-night as Desdemona in "R. U. R.," the new melodrama by Karel Capek, a Czechoslovakian dramatist, which will be produced at the Garrick Theatre, 219 West 52d street, the first offering from an author of that country.

Miss Hone will be one of the youngest stage debutantes for several years. She is only 17. She attended the Rosemary School at Greenwich, Conn., and got her first taste of dramatics in Shakespearean plays produced by the school under the direction of Gen. John D. Castleman of Louisville, Ky.

Mrs. Hone has been the beautiful Miss Alice Castlemain of that southern city, which also was the birthplace of her mother, Mrs. Augustus C. Hone.

Many friends of Miss Hone are hoping and expecting that she will be as famous on the stage as Mary Anderson. They have at least one point in common—both made their first professional stage appearance at 15.

Lionel Barrymore Has a Strong Role in Crime Play

'The Face in the Fog' Understood It or Not.

'The Face in the Fog,' seen at the Rivoli yesterday, is engrossing, whether you understand it or not. It is as confused as anything that has to do with the Soviet Government might be expected to be. But whether you follow the various diversions of the plot in this Cosmopolitan production, you feel you have had a corking good time all through, fighting the wrong and confounding the oppressor.

There are the crowd jewels that will restore the Romanoffs to their throne, as jewels always will if you'll give them half a chance. There is pursuit and duel and general elation, with the Grand Duchess Tatiana and her noble lover smuggled to America, while Sonya, the faithful old nurse, performs her regulation feat of shooting down the dogs of parasitic Bolshevists.

But when all is said and done it is a very fascinating carnival of crime—Marcel Gars of murder—done, of course, in a refined and inoffensive fashion, according to the best standards. Since it is another "Boston Blackie" story by Jack Boyle, it must needs tangle up that redoubtable and able detective in his involved web of circumstance, making him, of all persons, the trusted repository of the jewels. It is in his who straightens out everything, including the royal love affair, mainly by various ingenious electrical contrivances that make him a sort of Marconi of the underworld. One is surprised not to see him maintaining a friendship with the police in the next of the series—

Once more another actor, this time Lionel Barrymore, is pressed into service as a refined and inoffensive, every actor who attains prominence must sooner or later be filtered through this trap. It is hardly necessary to state that he is the best of all the Blackies.

It is a refined and inoffensive, every actor who attains prominence must sooner or later be filtered through this trap. It is hardly necessary to state that he is the best of all the Blackies.

Francis J. Lantry, Long in Politics, Is Dead at 63

Former Commissioner of Correction and Fire Departments and Friend of Roosevelt.

Francis Joseph Lantry, aged 63, former Commissioner of Correction and Fire Commissioner of New York, died last Saturday in his home, at 565 West 133th street. He had been in poor health for two years, but his condition was not regarded as serious until two weeks ago.

Mr. Lantry, despite the difference in political views, was a close friend of the late Col. Theodore Roosevelt. He was active in Tammany most of his life, and for the last five years he held a position in the office of the Borough President, during the second administration of Mayor McClellan.
