Miss Eva Gauthier in Songs of Many Lands and Tongues

Popular Singer Unable to Translate From Too Highly Spiced French.

By W. J. HENDERSON. Miss Eva Gauthier gave a song recital in Aeolian Hall last evening. When Miss Gauthier sings there is always something of interest. Illumined by the wide prospect of her beauty, she is original in costume as she is in program making, but her robes are not the concern of chroniclers of musical doings.

As on many other occasions, the soprano prefaced several of her songs with brief remarks. For instance, she told the audience that she could not give the translation of the texts of the "Trois Bijoux Indescentes," with which she began her entertainment, because they were somewhat too highly spiced.

Despite this intriguing introduction, these songs were heard with interest, less than the second group, consisting of three Spanish popular songs arranged by Manuel Falla. These were indeed characteristic of the singer's manner.

opportunity to display the best qualities of her delicate art. In the third group she played an air from a new German opera, "Der Schatzgraber," by Franz Schreker, which was well received.

Her assurance and repose of manner were attractive. Her interpretations might have had more individuality and warmth, but experience ought to help in this path. Her audience was enthusiastic.

AMERICAN PIANIST'S DEBUT. Raymond Burr, a young pianist from Paterson, N. J., who has given concerts in the city for many years, appeared in Aeolian Hall last night at Town Hall in the presence of relatives and intimate friends, by the Rev. Dr. Ernest M. MISS KELLOGG MARRIED TO HUDSON BUDD IN ST. THOMAS'S Under Observation at Son's Request Lest He Squander $845,000 Fortune.

Chandler N. Wayland, 86, who a year ago offered to pay the streets of a new city, died suddenly yesterday morning in Jacksonville, Fla. He was well known in shipping circles, having been an official of the Clyde Steamship Company for years. Born at Scarsport, Me., Capt. Tupper followed the sea in his early days and later was master of sailing vessels touching at ports in all parts of the world until 20 years ago, when he joined the Mallory Line. In 1907 when the Clyde and Mallory lines joined forces he was made superintendent in charge of operations at Southern ports.

Chandler N. Wayland, 86, who a year ago offered to pay the streets of a new city, died suddenly yesterday morning in Jacksonville, Fla. He was well known in shipping circles, having been an official of the Clyde Steamship Company for years.

Mr. Wayland had been transferred to the sanitarium from Bellevue Hospital, to which he had been committed for observation on the application of his son, John Gilbert Wayland, of East Fifty-third street, New York, who feared that he would dissipate his fortune through his liberality. The estate was valued at $845,000.

The elder Wayland had an income of from $30,000 to $40,000 a year. Last August his son and the Fifth Avenue Bank were appointed as trustees to oversee his property as a result of the finding of a sheriff's jury.

The elder Wayland, whose New York home was at 9 West Thirtieth street, was arraigned before a New York magistrate last November on complaint of his son that he had written abusive letters to him. Later in the same month he was committed to Bellevue for observation by Justice Gray of the Supreme Court.

At the hearings it was testified that Mr. Wayland had given away numerous parcels of land in Stonington to various persons. His son was his sole heir. He complained that his father was planning to dispose of his property and that his plans included the paving of five miles of streets in Stonington and the erection of a marble hotel to cost $1,000,000. He tore up his old will, the son said, and made a new one in which he designated and bequeathed to the son the choice of his father's scarf pins.
