And gifts from all the world are gathered here

ON FIFTH AVENUE, at the very crown of Murray Hill, stands a shop whose day-to-day existence is woven into the pleasant side of the life of New York.

Like the sundial in the garden of the Guelphs at Sandringham it is perfectly content to say:

*"Let others tell of storms and showers
I'll only count your sunny hours."*

This Shop is Ovington's—"The Gift Shop of Fifth Avenue." And scarcely a person enters its doors without having in mind some joyous errand.

That errand may be the purchase of a wedding gift to some bride of the season. A map may come in to select the lamp that will lend its cosy glow upon his home.

Two young girls may enter to discuss fifty gifts for their mother's birthday and they may be followed by a young married couple whose purpose is to select their first good dinner service.

Gifts for birthdays, gifts for weddings, gifts for anniversaries, prizes for parties, favors for dances, and things like good china and good lamps which lend their gracious touch as the Lares and Penates of a home.

For seventy-five years it has been so. For seventy-five years Ovington's have been searching for and finding good gifts. For seventy-five years they have served New York in these matters that call for so much discrimination and good taste.

To-day they seek out and examine the wares of the world; to-day there are more good gifts at Ovington's than there have ever been before; and to-day the old, old principles of good taste and good value appear in combination as they did in 1846.
