A PATRIOTIC PROTEST.

Iniquitous and extravagant pension laws are as obnoxious to honest Union veterans as they are to the public in general.

There is no organ in the human body which stands in greater need of rest than the brain.

When a man begins to leer, he must be very careful to keep track of what he says.

When the unspeakable Turk commences to get too gay Russia reminds him of "that small balance."

If the Virginia Legislature can find no way of reducing the State's expenses except by curtailing appropriations for educational establishments it had better drop the matter altogether.

Those Kentucky Democrats who are anxious for Mr. Lindsay to resign would doubtless favor an amendment to the constitution providing for the election of Senators on probation.

One of the good effects of the recent cold snaps is that it cured a number of people of the influenza fever.

FRAGILE WARE DECORATED WITH DAINTY SCENES IN DELICATE TINTS.

Wingless of fine make now have little fairylike hand painted scenes on one side. These are intended for champagne and like exhilarating beverages and are correspondingly gay, though not gaudy in design.

Whether full or empty the coloring on the glass shows to advantage and the little oval picture is framed about with a delicate scrollwork of gilt. Thirty-six dollars will procure a dozen of these dainty drinking cups that seem almost too fragile and exquisite to be trusted to ordinary handling.

It is the Bohemian glass chiefly that is enriched with this handwork. The miniature scenes depict, goddesses, nymphs and cupids in various attitudes out of doors, and with only sketchy scarfs, grape clusters and garlands to enhance their charms.

A Venus with long blond tresses sits in careless indifference on a river bank and togs with a white winged cupid on her extended hand. Another glass of this set has a little scene of a Greek mother fondling her infant, the baby hands touching her cheek caressingly, and a flutter of rainbow hued scarfs being the only drapery.

A busy little Cupid, aiming an arrow in smiling mood, is another scene. The maiden is of modern days. Diam at her bath in the forest, white limbed and beautiful, looks from another glass. Two nymphs, with flowing locks and gleaming arms, breathing the waves of a blue, blue sea, is one subject, and a family group, with a mother and child, is another, and surroundings, another. In each and all the design is carried out with careful regard to detail, and the coloring, both the flesh tints and the bloom of the flowers, as well as the soft tones of the background, is appropriate. Although there are pinks and blues and rainbow tints in the pictures, the effect is light and delicate, as though the sun was shining through a bubble, this Bohemian glass is so thin, fine and luminous.

As a set off to the exquisite fineness of these glasses are drinking mugs and vases of course, heavier make, with peasant scenes framed on the sides. There is nothing elusive and smushing about these. They look as though almost any servant might handle them with little risk, and the enamel work is raised, as though stamped on the outside and not all in one with the glass, as the hand painting appears.

Following, heavy footed pensants are these, in blue and green, with long frocked coats and peaked hats on the fluted sides of the drinking mugs. A good story is being told in one scene, and is being listened to with breathless interest. The participants are full of laughter. Some household emergency is being dealt with in another, and others show the homely folks in the various phases of a quarrel about their everyday tasks. Some of the dillylike vases and slender stemmed wingless have only gold filigree work about the edge or a shield and crest to distinguish them. Others have the most delicate tracery of green encircling their borders or wound about the stem.—New York Sun.

Best For Tired Brains.

There is no organ in the human body which stands in greater need of rest than the brain, and this rest, the most efficacious of all, is afforded by sleep.

Other kind of rest is a variation of work or change of subject, the best rest most frequently for the higher or intellectual centers. An enormous amount of mental work can be undertaken if only sufficient variety is secured. In the end, however, the brain demands sleep, and this is more particularly the case with the young, and especially when they have been engaged in mental work up to the hour of going to bed may cause the loss of a night's rest, and it is an excellent plan to indulge in some kind of relaxation before retiring to rest, such as the perusal of light and amusing literature, some game, some music.

Children undoubtedly require more sleep than grown up people. Even to the age of 4 or 5 years a child should have one hour of sleep or at least rest in bed before its dinner, and it should be put to bed at 7 or 8 o'clock in the evening up to the fifteenth year. After that age every one must find out how much sleep he or she requires, though, as a general rule, at least six to eight hours are necessary. During growth there must be ample sleep if the brain is to develop to its full extent, and the more nervous, excitable or precocious a child is the longer she should get it if its intellectual progress is not to come to a premature standstill or life be cut short at an early age. The period of full maturity, with its maximum of mental activity, is the period of minimum demand for sleep.—New York Ledger.

When a man begins to leer, he must be very careful to keep track of what he says. An amusing instance of the results of not doing so was shown in the case of the manager of a music hall in the north of England, who, although a most illiterate man, prided himself not a little on his practical oratorical powers, and made it a practice in the evening of the programme every Saturday night to announce the leading items of the forthcoming week's entertainment. One evening he finished his weekly speech in the following remarkable terms:

"Last, but not least, ladies and gentlemen, allow me to inform you that at an enormous expense I have exclusively engaged the marvelous Borndor brothers, the world-famed acrobats, to appear here in their celebrated entertainment for six nights, commencing Monday next—understand, ladies and gentlemen, the Borndor brothers, the champion acrobats of the world."

Here he paused for a moment to regain his breath and then proudly continued: "Yes, and, what's more, on Monday week we've got a troop coming what can knock 'em into a cocked hat."—Harper's Round Table.

The Origin of the Word Filibuster.

The name "filibuster" was chiefly affected by the English adventurers on our coast, while the French members of the profession often preferred the name of "hibuster." This word, which has since been corrupted into our familiar "filibuster," is said to have been originally a corruption, being nothing more than the French method of pronouncing the word used by independent robbers.—Frank R. Stockton in St. Nicholas.

It Never Thaws.

The soil of Siberia, at the close of summer, is found still frozen for 60 inches beneath the surface, and the dead who have been in their coffins for over a century have been taken up unchanged in the least.

A Change at Benin. The English occupancy of Benin has resulted in so complete a change that the field of execution—where slaughter pits and crucifixion trees abounded, and sometimes the bodies of thousands of victims lay in heaps, polluting the air—has been laid out in polo grounds and golf links.

Judged by Appearances. Magistrate (who has lately taken to himself a wig)—I think I've seen you here before on a similar charge. Drunk and Disorderly Female—No, yer washup, s'elp me! The last week I was up afore was a baldheaded old cove.—London Telegraph.

Dentistry at Sea. When a sailor on a deep water ship has a toothache, he is likely to go to the captain. The captain gives him something out of the medicine chest to put in his tooth, and if that doesn't cure it perhaps he pulls it. It is a common thing for sailors to pull their own teeth. Their method is to put a string around a tooth and pull it. But dental forceps are carried on deep water ships, on some vessels a fair outfit of them. A ship captain of long experience said that in the course of his life at sea he had pulled 200 teeth.

The ship's medicine chest on large vessels is like a closet or cupboard with a glass door built in the ship. In this chest the medicine bottles, gilt labeled, are arranged on shelves that rise one above another in receding tiers. It is practically a well appointed little drug store. There is supplied with the medicine chest a book explaining the uses of the medicines. The captain is likely to have some other book on medical subjects which he has read and studied, and he is likely to have had a good deal of experience before attaining the rank of master of a ship.

The sailors are generally healthy men, but when occasion requires the captain prescribes. He is the physician. Limbs broken at sea are of course set there, and there might be circumstances in which the captain would not hesitate to perform a surgical operation.—New York Sun.

The Public Enjoys It, BUT It Was a Hard Pill for the Merchants.

The "one-third off" sale that we advertised last week may not have wrecked all the other merchants in the city, but it has kept them guessing, and the old self-worn goods that have been brought out and reduced in price would make Noah groan with envy if he lived to this day to know that some of Newport News clothing dealers had gotten a part of the stock that was taken in the ark.

Our one-third off sale gives you a choice of this season's production, and our original prices being marked plainly on the ticket, you simply have to select what you want and do your own figuring.
