INVESTIGATORS AT WORK

Engineer Says Pipes and Engines Are in Good Repair.

RECENT FIRE INQUIRED INTO

Dr. Foster Meets Members of the Board Cordially—Superintendent Details the Hours of the Watchmen About the Asylum Buildings.

(Special to the Daily Press.)

WILLIAMSBURG, VA., Oct. 2.—The investigating committee reconvened here today at 11 o'clock in Cameron hall. All the members were in attendance. Dr. Foster was on hand and greeted all the members cordially. No evidence of any friction developed. No time was lost in getting down to business. Chairman Sacler rapped for order.

J. M. Clark, the engineer, was the first witness, the matter first engaging attention being the burning of the carpenter shop. He said that there was some delay in getting a stream on the fire. Water had gotten out of the pipes.

Mr. Clark said he did not know that there was any formation or deposit in the pipes at this time.

His testimony was largely technical, Mr. Clark saying he was a practical and not an expert engineer. He said that more than five minutes elapsed from the discovery of the fire and getting on the stream.

Dr. Foster detailed the tours of duty of the watchman. Four rounds are made each night, beginning at nine o'clock. No delinquency on the part of the watchman or nurses in regard to fire.

VIRGINIA HAMS PRAISED.

Chicago Packer Tells Why They are So Good.

A Chicago packer who knows the meat business from ranch to restaurant has surprised some people by the statement that the prize corn-fed hogs of the West, that figure in the county fairs and look so impressive in the pictures, are not nearly so highly esteemed by the consumer as the acorn-fed porker of Virginia and the South.

"Lean and hungry" as any Cassius, the Southern razorback learns early to shift for himself and pick up the best morsels from the world of food. The razorback cannot lay claim to long and lordly pedigree and does not get his name in the registry books or his picture in the farm journals. No stall fed life of ease for him, no days of ease and sleep in the protected pen, rising and walking only to take another slice. The razorback, in order to "save his bacon," must have a keen ear and a swift foot. Some of them develop speed like a racehorse and are as hard to catch as a sand county flea.

But, though his back may be so sharp it will cut through a fence rail, and his sides as lean as a Kansas farmer in drought time, the razorback has his reward. He feasts on the sweet and succulent acorns that fall from the shady oaks and drinks the pure water of limpid country streams. He is free as the air, and, though he sometimes goes hungry, it gives him good digestion and a keen appetite for the corn-fed, pen pampered Western hog never knows. It is a pleasure to know that the world is coming to appreciate the merits of this creature, who from very piggishood leads the strenuous life.

When the Southern hog at last comes to the knife he dies in a good cause. Men may praise the capon of France, the "roast beef of old England," the steaks of Chicago and the wieners of Coney Island, but they do not tempt the epicure who really appreciates the flavor of old Virginia ham. Whether boiled or served in appetizing wafers, broiled in slices of rare excellence or fried with a gravy that makes you smack your mouth, the Virginia ham is a thing to be treasured and cherished by the man who loves good things to eat.

From the frying pan there arises a matchless aroma that is as grateful to the smell as the finished product is delicious to the taste. Virginia ham is food fit for the gods.—Baltimore Sun.

ANARCHIST AS A BARBER.

King of Italy Soon Got Rid of His "Red" Servant.

Those who serve the Quirinal have fallen on evil days, and they do not hesitate to make their troubles known. It is a case of "Listen to My Tale of Woe," sung in a loud voice.

The one who has, perhaps suffered the most is the king's barber, Isodoro Quaglia. He was at the height of his career in the good, open handed times of King Humbert, but he made a fatal mistake and has never recovered from it. When King Edward and Emperor William came to Rome more barbers were needed at the palace, and Isodoro, at his wife's entreaty, sent two or three, who he did not know personally, but who had been recommended to him; but as luck would have it, one was an anarchist and another under police surveillance. This coming to the ears of the authorities, Quaglia was at once dismissed, but was eventually retaken by the King, and then gradually dropped.

Queen Margherita has always had her own hairdresser, who usually travels with her, while Queen Elena has her hair waved by her maid. In the beginning of her reign she had a regular woman hairdresser, but she was also dropped in favor of the maid, who had been her pupil. The discarded hairdressers are very bitter, attributing the changes to economy on the part of the sovereigns; but may it not be that Victor Emmanuel remembers that anarchist barber? That episode must cause him cold shivers when he thinks of it.—Rome correspondence Pall Mall Gazette.

DISCUSSING NEW BATTLESHIP.

Plans to be Considered Confidential Until One is Selected.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—The naval general board was in session all last week, and, while the Cuban situation was the subject of some discussion, the principal topic under consideration was the new battleship, tentative and alternate plans of which have been prepared by the bureau of construction and repair. It has been decided that the various propositions submitted for a ship shall be regarded as confidential.

Perhaps some of the projects sent in by outside constructors will be made public if their authors desire it, but the finally approved plans, which are likely to be those of the Navy Department—the result of the work of combined talent of the bureau—will be carefully guarded from observation and only the merest details will be given out.

The general board will present certain qualifications which should be met in the new ship, especially those of greater speed, increased endurance, better protection against the fire of an enemy and greater hitting power. This last will be accomplished by placing on board as many 12-inch guns as the ship will stand without sacrificing any of the weight of armor or requiring a decrease in the machinery weights.

It is not desirable, think the members of the general board, to build up the armament in such a way as to deprive the ship of its ability to keep out the projectiles of a foe or hamper the speed of the ship, which is necessary in pursuing or avoiding the enemy, or in limiting the radius of action. These strategic considerations, having to do with the value of the new ship as a fighting engine of the deep, will be handed to the designers as representing qualities contributing to efficiency.

Striking Actresses Arrested.

The strike of the Yiddish Variety Actors' Union against Baum Brothers, proprietors of the Irving Music Hall in Broome street, resulted yesterday afternoon in the arrest of three actresses who were picketing at the theatre and advising people not to enter it, according to the charges made against them. The young women were taken to the Eldridge street station, where they were charged with creating a disturbance and preventing people from entering the theatre.—New York Tribune.
