Bandmaster Declares He Can Now Wear the Token of Esteem With Pride.

COURT GIVES NO REASONS.

Action the Result of Presentation Made by Ex-President Baseball President.

"I can continue wearing my medal with pride and dignity," said Bandmaster William Weil yesterday, when he learned that Judge Cullman had decided in his favor the suit brought against him by Chris Von der Ahe for $50, the price of the token presented by the "ex-base president."

The presentation was made in June, 1895, when Weil's band was playing at Sportsman's Park. Von der Ahe alleged that Weil came to him and stated that it would be of much benefit to him, in his grocery business, to have Von der Ahe present him with a medal, and that he agreed to do so.

THE MEDAL THAT CAUSED ALL THE TROUBLE. The medal was presented by Von der Ahe and given to Weil. He denied that he had accepted it.

LOOK TO AMERICA—All Europe Watches the One Nation Hampered by Alliances.

SPECIAL BY CABLE. London, Sept. 8.—(Copyright, 1900, by the New York Herald Company.)—All the Powers of Europe eagerly watch the trend of American thought in the world of politics. European diplomats are actually looking to America as a guide.

Not that the trained politicians of Europe can see any superiority in the "new diplomacy" of Washington, but it is recognized in all the capitals of the Old World that the new agent over the sea is entirely free to act untrammelled by dangerous alliances.

beaten to-day, he said, by an army of 250,000 men, but they would rise against England when they recovered their strength. Mr. Gaffney told me of the failure of his attempt to get pro-Roer and pro-British planks in the Republican platform at Philadelphia. He was at a loss for words to express his amazement at the termination of the British Government. "John Hay," said Mr. Gaffney, "is Lord Salisbury's tool."

close verbal similarity in some lines of dialogue, but then Mrs. Clifford goes on to relate that her play is founded on a story she wrote fifteen years ago for Temple Bar. She dramatized it six years ago, and sent it to Mr. Alexander. He refused it, says Mrs. Clifford, but was most nice about it, and thought sufficiently well of it to read it again last February. Mr. Hawley most kindly gave a copyright performance at the Avenue Theater, and it was published the following month in the Anglo-Saxon Review.

VAGUE FEAR OF WAR—Europe Scents Danger in the Present Grouping of the Powers.

repeated assurances of friendship and expressed regret at being unable to undertake the journey to Paris at this moment. All the journals have commented on nautical news on these three words, "at this moment," which contain, it appears, a world of thought and intention.

There is on one side Germany, which has taken the head of the movement, which has prepared it for two years past, which has furnished the generalissimo and the largest contingent of troops, and which drags with her two allies in Europe, Austria and Italy.

Germany is forced to do something, and something great; that is to say, dangerous. On the other hand are Russia and France, who have both without pleasure, but without protestation, the preponderant part which Germany arrogates to herself, and neither one nor the other of which desires to leave her troops too long under the command of a German chief.

There is thus divergence enough, and in consequence enough causes for conflict. God grant that there be no discussion, and that the hands of the powers be not too long under the command of a German chief.

DEFIANT AT BERLIN—Germany Has Made No Compromise Proposals to Russia or Other Powers.

authorized, judging from repeated information the Minister received there on the subject. A Foreign Office official, answering questions of the correspondent of the Associated Press, said that the Russian proposals, appear baseless. The correspondent of the Associated Press learns authoritatively that Germany, replying to the advice to withdraw her troops from Pekin, has sent Russia detailed reasons why this seems impossible and calculated to prolong instead of shorten the war.
