

Society is on the eve of departure for the summer.

MISS MARY EUSTON

some of the guests. Among those present were Misses Hester Gabel, Stella and Alva Winklemeyer, Corinne Backrow, Emily Friedman and Albert Mackey.

Miss Evelyn Walker entertained the regular classes of Bishop Eckert's school at her home, No. 257 Russell avenue. The class dinner was given in the afternoon in connection with the class colors, gold and white. Progressive games were played and prizes given to the winners.

The guests were: Misses—Alice Belle of Hamilton, Mo.; Lucille Konze, Helen Fugler, Mary Land, Isabelle Baumhoff, Elizabeth Patten of Canton, Mo.; Florence Beck, Laura Steinfeld, Edith French of Versailles, Mo.; Madeline Fautleroy, N. A. Fautleroy.

Miss Rhodus of West Belle place entertained friends informally last Friday evening, some of the guests being: Annie Rhodus, Thurnann, Immel, Killeen, Messieurs—Kuhn, Will Barnes, Robt. Herdhausen, Dick Rhodus, Will Bachor, Goetts, Cohen.

A coffee and cake was given by Misses Emily and Lillie Schmitt to their friends of the Concordia Gymnasium at their home on South Thirteenth street Wednesday afternoon. Euchre was the main feature of the afternoon. The first prize was won by Mrs. H. W. Schwenker and the second by Miss Emily S. Stumm. Miss Emily L. Bege-mann was awarded the consolation prize. Miss Irene E. Kring also awarded a prize for punching. Miss Bessie J. Stumm entertained with refreshments. Miss Dorothy A. Schowalter sang a few songs.

Those present were: Mrs. H. W. Schwenker, Irene E. Kring, Emily L. Bege-mann, Dorothy A. Schowalter, Anna K. Jackobs, Emily J. Schmitt, Lillie A. Schmitt.

The ladies visitors attendant upon the Supreme Convention of the Catholic Knights of America, accompanied by a committee of ladies from St. Louis, spent last Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. August Luer. The hostess, assisted by several other prominent matrons, entertained the party in royal manner. Euchre, bowling and music was indulged in. Dinner was served at noon, followed later by ice cream and coffee. The party returned to the city at 6 o'clock. Among those present were: Mesdames—Michael Becker, Andrew Mavor, E. Schell, Weinsberg, H. F. Crochran, J. W. Nordhaus, Mrs. J. J. Gannahl, W. A. Kelly, Charles E. Hannauer, Richard Walsh, C. Cummings, H. A. Rosenbaum, — Quinn.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pitney were tendered a surprise party at the home of Mrs. Pitney's mother, Mrs. M. A. Alhauer, on Tuesday evening. Euchre was played and an impromptu entertainment was given. The decorations were in white and pink. The guests were: Mesdames—Albert Wild, Edward Dufour, Henry McElhose, Edward D. Colbrunn, D. H. Kremer, Frank Alshier, Lulu Ketterer, Helen O'Neil, Amy Bergmann, Alma Alhauer, Richard Rombauer, G. H. Salzberger, Albert Ketterer.

This week will see the beginning of the summer exodus. For the last fortnight, unless one could positively declare on oath that one must sail for Europe on a certain date, it has been impossible to get a modiste or tailor to even consider a garment, much less take one's measure and set a date for fitting. Everything has had to give way to these travelers who will cross the pond; and I'm sure that we all will be loud in our acclamations of joy when they are well and off.

But even then it is not always certain that one can begin to feel sure of finding a dressmaker, who is not rushed to death, to the end of people, you know, get fitted for all their things and then decamp, leaving the gowns to be finished and sent after them. But not those who go to Europe. That would be an absurdity, when one can buy on the other side.

Every day you hear of new people who are to sail. Now it is the Leetees, who will take Mrs. Barnett, Charles Wiggins' sister, with them. Their pretty Northern cottage near Harbor Point, will, therefore, go unoccupied this summer, unless they make a last-minute change of mind. I don't think this is the case.

Mrs. Halle Cole-Herbert has gone into the suburbs for the summer, taking a house in Webster, with her two little girls. Herbert entertains so much and so well during the winter season that her Webster cottage will be quite as popular a rendezvous for the people of the city as the West Pine boulevard house. Golf on the Algonquin course will prove one of the attractions for her country stay, I presume; though little boys are learned enough to know that Algonquin this spring. Can it be that this club is no longer in the land of the living? What has become of that young champion, W. Tudor Wilkins? And why do we no longer hear of his prowess?

Everybody is on the qui-vive to know if the pronounced and handsome home body, Miss Ellen Walsh is receiving from "Billy" Mami; and the fact that she wears a remarkably fine solitary ring, may be taken as significant of the young lady's betrothal. No announcements have been made, however, and the family vigorously deny that an engagement exists. The Walshes will go East soon, as they annually spend the summer at the Virginia Springs, where the girls ride horseback over the mountains all day, and where there is little gaiety, only good, wholesome, outdoor sport.

Miss Mary Euston and Robert Kelter also are keeping their acquaintances in the "guessing" state of mind, though each has not been seen with the other since the winter season, and many of their intimates declare that they are engaged.

Driving and walking on the avenue late of afternoons has become quite the thing. Last week people whom one knows were to be seen in gay attire every day: Mrs. Kilpatrick parading her two little girls, and the Kilpatrick girls very shortly-clad in pale mauve, with small toques to match; George Tiffany trying a new bang-lit bob, his riding trousers and a new hat; Mrs. Pierre Chouteau, who is looking extremely well this spring, coming from the Florida; Mrs. Augustus Hart and Miss Adelaide Hart both in their victorias; Miss Hart wears sparkling white pique and a drooping Panama hat, trimmed in pompons of black and white coque feathers; Mrs. Sully Barron, wearing a new hat, with a green and white check, and a new dress, catching an Olive Street car; Miss Ella Beers, starting for a drive in a high-wheeled trap, wearing pale, sea-green, with a new hat, charming flat hat of red tulle, with a green and white check. These are only a few of the usual afternoon sights now grown familiar to most persons of the West End.

Red coaching parlors are very chic. Carrie Cook wore one at Glen Echo yesterday that was much admired. It is a vivid scarlet, with a bunch of cherries on the handle, which is of natural cherry wood.

Green, with red borders and vice versa, are both liked for outdoor use this season. Straws now styles merge into one another. Two summers ago gold-red had its innings; and we all sported coats and hats in this glowing color. Last season, unless one wore bright green in either hats or stockings or jackets or something, there was positively no use whatever in laying claim to smartness of attire. This summer the two colors are combined; and reds and greens mixed and mingled are the rage, a combination that is bewildering, but rather picturesque out of doors.

Not a few St. Louis society people are interested in the approaching wedding of Miss McCord of St. Joseph to Charles Parker, also of St. Joseph, Missouri town, and many will go over for the ceremony which is to be within two weeks. The McCords, the Nevases and the Toolles have all intermarried, and are always associated together whenever one mentions any branch of the families. Florence McCord, the eldest daughter, is perhaps the best known here. She has frequently visited the West family and I think made one or two stops with Mrs. Bert Walker since the latter's marriage.

The expectant bride is Lucy McCord, the youngest daughter of the household, and a very pretty and dainty girl. The bridegroom-to-be comes of an old St. Louis family, though his mother, Mrs. Parker, has lived in St. Joe for many years.

All the younger generation have made party and fashionable matches. The eldest sister married Jack Toolle of St. Joe and is a leader in the town's smartest set. Another sister was married about eighteen months ago to a very rich Colorado mining man, and now lives in Denver; while the son will not fall behind in the fashionable and social circles of the Colorado town.

I had a glimpse of the wedding gown last week, and very handsome it was—of soft, dead-white liberty satin, with clouds of tulle and flounces of magnificent rose point. Fully a thousand dollars' worth of lace trimmed the dress.

Mrs. Jordan Lambert's tea for her St. Paul guest, Miss Proctor, was a pleasant, though very small, afternoon affair of the past week, on Friday. It is decidedly too late in the season for anything except informal functions, so Mrs. Lambert merely asked those matrons and girls who had matched with her on Friday, to spend the two years ago. Lily Lambert, who is not to come out until next season; Miss Nan Woodward and Miss Elsie Ford served, and the hostess invited a few others to remove their hats when they came, so as to assist in doing the honors. Miss Proctor will stay for several weeks.

Miss Ruth Eschenfeld is proudly displaying, the last few days, a gorgeous graduation present, or, rather, two. Her mother, Mr. Charles Eschenfeld, gave her a hoop ring of five large and clear white diamonds; and her mother added another ring exactly like it, except for the fact that it is set in large, round pearls, perfectly matched with the diamonds. Miss Ruth is a senior at Mary Institute, and a younger sister of Miss Louise Eschenfeld, who has been out for about two seasons.

Mabel: "No, a 'baby tea' is not a party for a baby, nor is it proper to serve caudle. A 'baby tea' is some grown-up's latest fad in the entertainment line, and though I've not been to one, it sounds rather jolly, provided one is at all loose for amusement." The guests may be only women, when the tea must take place in the afternoon; or else one can ask men and give it in the evening, of course, leaving out the 'tea' distinction. Everybody comes provided with a picture of himself when a baby. These are given to the hostess, shuffled together and then, one by one, are shown to each to show his skill by trying to discover to whom each picture belongs. It is by no means an easy task, since most babies look alike to the eye, and the inevitable prize—more than one, if desired—is given to the person guessing the largest number correctly. An afternoon of this sport might be a pleasant affair at one of the country clubs, preceded by luncheon."

INFORMAL ENTERTAINMENTS.
