

RECORD OF THE LATE PETER JACKSON, PUGILIST, Negro Fighter Only as the Peer of Any Man Who Fought in the Prize Ring—Ranked as Corbett Did Not Outspare—Episodes of His Career.

Peter Jackson, an Australian negro, probably the greatest fist-fighting man that ever put his hands in the prize ring, died recently. No one sang his swan song. The old generation of pugilistic writers, the younger generation and the greatest prize-fighters, McCormick and others, seem to have gone before Jackson. They used to say that pugilism never could be killed. Probably it never can. Let the approval of the old-time pugilistic writers forbid it to the sport.

In the writer's opinion, Peter Jackson was the highest mental type of man that ever put his hands in the prize ring. Let that ever fourth. He was a black man, yet no pugilist, white or black, bore so finely polished a head on his shoulders. He was a man of the highest intelligence. African heritage of wood or drawer of water. In their native land his ancestors were Kings and Princes. A black man, he was bred as well as the black man can be. Naturally capable, he picked up a good education, was a keen observer, a delightful talker, interesting in what he said and the possessor of the perfect accent of an Englishman.

Jackman and Pat Tebeau were a strong illustration of the man's personal magnetism. It is told at the expense of Pat Tebeau, the well known baseball manager of St. Louis. Some years ago, Tebeau was sitting in a cafe with some friends. Jackson, then in the arena and yellow, entered. Tebeau's friends saw the fighter and crowded about him. Jackson sat at the other table and told the waiter to ask the Tebeau party what they would have. Tebeau, who had the color lines, refused to drink with the black man. His friends tried to talk him into doing it, but he would not. He told them that the man was all right and a good fellow, even black.

After some time the party, including Jackson, got up and stood by the bar. Tebeau then noticed that Jackson was a pugilist and that he was a black man. He spoke to Jackson in an offhand way at first, but then he went on to talk to him. He spoke to him in a friendly way and he spoke to him in a friendly way. He spoke to him in a friendly way and he spoke to him in a friendly way.

Jackman came to the country in 1888. He was a good round man at the time, some 32 years old. He had had a successful and extensive career in Australia, where he had been a pugilist. He had been a pugilist in Australia, where he had been a pugilist. He had been a pugilist in Australia, where he had been a pugilist.

Jackman's career in the prize ring was a remarkable one. He was a pugilist of the highest caliber and he was a pugilist of the highest caliber. He was a pugilist of the highest caliber and he was a pugilist of the highest caliber. He was a pugilist of the highest caliber and he was a pugilist of the highest caliber.

ST. LOUIS LETTER CARRIERS' BAND WILL VISIT CHATTANOOGA NEXT MONTH.

THE ST. LOUIS LETTER CARRIERS' BAND, WHICH WILL GO TO CHATTANOOGA IN SEPTEMBER.

The St. Louis Letter Carriers' Band, which has been in active existence for nearly four years, will go to Chattanooga next month to attend the annual convention of letter carriers, which is to be held this year at that place. The band numbers twenty-eight members.

At the same time the St. Louis letter carriers are planning a second music organization. As the brass band is most suitable for outdoor music, a movement is on foot to organize an orchestra of stringed instruments for indoor concerts.

The members and officers of the band are: J. B. Gerard, secretary; W. H. Gilchrist, treasurer; J. B. Gerard, secretary; W. H. Gilchrist, treasurer; J. B. Gerard, secretary; W. H. Gilchrist, treasurer.

The band played at the last convention of the St. Louis Letter Carriers' Band, which was held in St. Louis, Mo., on August 15, 1901.

ZINC AND LEAD REPORT.

Large Sales Among Joplin Producers at Lower Prices. Joplin, Mo., Aug. 25.—The sales from Joplin were 40,295 pounds of zinc and 11,899 pounds of lead more than the preceding week, but the other camps of the district fell short in their sales enough to create a decrease in the district total of 25 tons of zinc and twenty tons of lead, and in the case of lead more than the preceding week. Compared with the corresponding week of last year there is a decrease of 20 tons of zinc, and in value $3,000, although the lead sales were forty tons less.

Table with columns for company names, zinc sales, and lead sales. Includes Montgomery Lead and Zinc Co., Joplin Mining Co., etc.
