

WESTERN GROWTH OF CITY INJURES RIVER PARISHES.

Decreases the Population and the Receipt of Funds for Church Work—Priests of the Churches Unite in Arranging for Bazaar to Be Given for the Aid of the Old Parishes.

THE REVEREND EUGENE COYLE, Pastor of the Old Cathedral.

REV. FATHER TIMOTHY DEMPSEY, Pastor of St. Patrick's Church.

The bazaar at the Exposition in the aid of the river parishes, which opens Tuesday night, promises to be one of the most successful of church entertainments given in St. Louis in recent years.

Four priests on the river front, seeing their parishes growing smaller because of the trend of the western growth of the city and the desire of their parishioners to live in the better localities, have conceived the idea of uniting in a grand bazaar.

The old Cathedral on Walnut street is the landmark that will ever be remembered with reverence by the former parishioners, and, indeed, by all the citizens, irrespective of church affiliations or creed.

Three great ecclesiastics were once assistant priests under Archbishop Kenrick at the old Cathedral, viz. Archbishop Peahan of Chicago, Archbishop Ryan of Philadelphia, and Archbishop Hennessy of Dubuque.

The Reverend Eugene Coyle, its today rector of this historic church, for its reduced to a parish church since the marts of trade and commerce have driven the population westward.

The Assumption Church was erected by the present Archbishop Ryan of Philadelphia in 1860 at a cost of $100,000. The funds were supplied by the late Archbishop Kenrick, who at that period conducted a banking establishment at the old Cathedral.

As early as 1868 the population began to go westward, and Archbishop Ryan became pastor of St. John's Church.

Rev. Father Patrick Dooley, Pastor of the Assumption Church.

The Reverend Father J. J. Head, Pastor of Annunciation Church.

Yale Men Are Hurrying to New Haven to Attend the Bicentennial Celebration.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 16.—From Europe and Japan, from Canada and Central America, Yale graduates and the representatives of Governments and of universities are hurrying to New Haven to be in attendance upon the bicentennial exercises at Yale University.

Probably at no time or place have so many college graduates been gathered in all assembly in this city on Sunday until Wednesday of next week. Efforts have been made to bring Yale men back home to their alma mater, and the call has received responses from more than 4,000 of them, almost one-third of the graduate body.

With the 2,700 undergraduates and professional school students, and with the big delegations from the American colleges and the foreign representatives, the members of the Federal and State governments, it is certain that between 8,000 and 10,000 college men will gather.

It may almost be said to a convention of college presidents. And 100,000 visitors are expected on the day that President Roosevelt comes to Yale—next Wednesday—to receive the degree of doctor of laws.

President Roosevelt will not be able to leave Washington in time to review the torchlight procession of next Monday evening. He will be represented by several members of his cabinet.

President Roosevelt will arrive in New Haven tomorrow morning. Mayor John Stuedey and Arthur T. Hadley of Yale to-day decided that it would be better to hold a public reception in honor of President Roosevelt on Wednesday next. New Haven and Yale will take no chance of a limited reception on Wednesday. A limited reception would entail ill-will on the part of the public thus shut out.

But as the president will be accompanied in telegrams to-day that he would acquiesce in any plans for himself that Yale or the city might suggest, it would be preferable to hold no reception, his implied wish was gladly followed.

MOULTON-CONARD WEDDING AT MR. ROZER'S HOME.

Despite a series of obstacles which might have daunted a less stout-hearted bride, the marriage of Miss Nannie E. Moulton and Mr. Benjamin Duane Conard of Carthage, Mo., took place last evening, in accordance with plans made late in the summer, when their engagement was announced and the date set.

Last week Mr. S. T. Moulton of No. 218 Westminter place, father of the bride, was stricken with a dangerous illness, so that his life has been despaired of for several days. Yesterday he rallied sufficiently to have the ceremony proceed according to plans, but as absolute quiet is ordered for the Moulton household, the residence of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Rozer, who are neighbors and very close friends, was loaned for the occasion, and there the ceremony was performed.

Thomas Dozier, an intimate friend of the bridegroom, promised his assistance as best man months ago. Last week Mr. Dozier was taken ill, and on Saturday night, when he was to have given a stag dinner to Mr. Conard, he lay cold in death, with his sorrowing friends watching by his side.

The pretty little bride, worn out with anxiety and distress over her father's illness, herself succumbed several days ago, and it was feared that she would not possibly be strong enough to have the ceremony performed last night, but she made a brave effort and appeared in her bridal robes of snow-white chiffon, with much point lace, her veil, and big bouquet of President Carnot roses, at the appointed hour.

To make their cup of disappointment full to overflowing, the bride and bridegroom found at the last moment yesterday that they would be unable to take their projected wedding trip—a leisurely tour through the South—which it was expected would do much to restore the bride to health. As Mr. Conard was associated in the same business with Mr. Thomas Dozier, the death of the latter and the enforced absence of another young man from their office made it impossible for the bridegroom to leave Carthage, Mo., to attend to his duties. His journey had to be postponed until midwinter.

Mr. and Mrs. Rozer, elated at thoughts of having a wedding to arrange in their household, carried out all plans as to floral decorations and similar appointments to a state bordering on perfection. The house was a bower of American beauties, palms and asparagus ferns. The Reverend Doctor Halling read the service.

The bride had two attendants, both of whose offices were hardly formal enough to be designated as bridesmaids. Her younger sister, Miss Lee Moulton, and her cousin, Mrs. J. S. Moyer, assisted her, both wearing frocks of pale-blue silk with heavy yellow lace and carrying loose clusters of pale yellow chrysanthemums.

Mrs. Martha Conard and the Misses Conard of Carthage, mother and sisters of the bridegroom, came yesterday for the wedding, while other relatives and intimate friends, who were present included Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Moyer, Mrs. J. S. Moyer, Mrs. Washington Woods, Doctor and Mrs. William C. Green, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Barrett, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph M. Bryson, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Dowler, Mr. and Mrs. Courtney Moffett and Miss Leola Martin.

Mr. and Mrs. Conard will stay at the Planters for a short time, and later on will live at No. 418 McPherson avenue, where they will receive after November 15.
