Women's Shirt Waists

SURELY some good genius devised Shirt Waists, so easy, so dressy, so cheap. Half a dozen Shirt Waists, half a dozen Skirts, jumble them up and you have suit combinations almost past counting.

Waists at 50c., 75c., $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 and $1.98.

All our higher-priced Waists reduced to $1.98.

HERE'S what a customer says of our Waists:

"You have the best line of sizes and styles in the city—I have been everywhere."

Separate Skirts

We were showing some of our fine Crepon Skirts to one of the swell Dressmakers of this city and she said: "I am astounded at the low prices of such handsome Skirts."

SKIRTS that were $16.00, now $18.00. SKIRTS that were $23.00, now $12.00. SKIRTS that were $27.00, now $13.50. SKIRTS that were $41.00, now $7.00.

She was right!

WALLINGFORD.

There was exciting times on Church street early last evening, and the result was that Officer Dan Reilly has a badly bruised face, with several teeth missing and Martin Bridget, well known in the police circles, is nearly at death's door from the justly merited clubbing he got from Officer Reilly. Early in the evening complaint was made to the officer by one of the residents of Meadow street, George Donovan, that Bridget had taken some bundles of groceries away from one of Donovan's children and appropriated them to his own use. Officer Reilly went over to Bridget's house to investigate the affair, and when he came into the house he was set upon by Bridget and his wife and badly beaten and kicked about the face, and several of his lower teeth were knocked out, and, as the officer states, Mrs. Bridget assaulted him with a knife.

The officer failed in working order with his club, and for a time the blows rained fast and furious, as it was a matter of self defense, and his life was at stake. Both the Bridgets were knocked down with the club, and Martin had to get quite a dose before he was subdued, which he finally was, and it was thought that he was dying and the priest and doctors were sent for. The news of the affair spread like wildfire, and soon a crowd had collected about the battle ground. After the scrimmage Officer Reilly reported the facts of the case to Warden Botsford, and holds himself ready to await the result. Bridget has already two cases of assault pending in the borough court, and has figured there several times before.

Later: At 8:15 Bridget was alive, and although he has two bad cuts on the head it is not thought that his condition is dangerous. Dr. Wilson is attending, and does not anticipate any fatal result.

The high school will have this excellent program for their exercises this afternoon.

Real estate changes recorded are: Oneida community to Edward Tuttle of Derby, one-fourth of undivided property adjoining Community lake. Edward Tuttle has sold the same to Maud Safford of New Haven. W. Burr Hall to Andrew J. Bradley of New Haven, one lot 50x104 feet on Cottage street, Yaleville.

The committee from the three uptown churches has decided to have the union Sunday school picnic next week Wednesday at Hanover park. Round trip twenty cents.

Miss Charlotte Myers graduates today from the normal school in New Britain.

The annual meeting of the Central school district will be held in the town hall this evening.

Robert King of the west side, injured himself playing ball about two weeks ago, and Wednesday night was taken with serious cramps, and his condition for a time was quite critical. Dr. Wilson is attending. Yesterday he was somewhat better.

Much complaint has been made of the electric tracks on Center street being too high above ground and need filling and and repairing. Yesterday J. W. Fixgood, while crossing the track diagonally on the hill had one wheel of his furniture wagon torn all to pieces. Other like cases are reported.

The Wallingfords expect to play ball with the Amaranths in Meriden on Saturday.

As there is to be no state fair in Meriden this fall the Wallingford Agricultural society contemplate giving a three days' fair on the Center street park, and make it a big affair. The date will probably be September 18, 19 and 20.

THE SULTAN OF JOHORE.

It was a comfortable berth that he left when he died a few days ago. (From the Philadelphia Telegram.) Abu Baka, hereditary Sultan of the state and territory of Johore Muar, was a high-class Malay prince so singularly fair of countenance that he could not be distinguished from an Aryan. He bore a striking resemblance to Henry M. Stanley, the African explorer. Abu Baka was born about 1820, and ascended the throne of his ancestors in 1856. His dynasty is a continuation of the dynasty of the Sultans of Malacca, who reigned to Johore on the conquest of the capital by Albuquerque the Great of Portugal in 1511.

The empire, which is situated almost on the equator, occupies the southern part of the Malayan Peninsula, and its Sultan holds sway over about forty thousand Malays and seventy-five thousand Chinese. The country is famous for its silks, embroideries and jewelry, and is also rich in spices and pepper. The Sultan's revenues amounted to about six million dollars a year from Johore and another half million from his private property in Singapore. The bulk of the public revenue of Johore is raised from opium, spirits and gambling. The scheme of taxation is simple, but most effective. Any Chinaman who has a longing for the pipe pays into his Highness' treasury one dollar a month, and is granted a permit to buy and smoke opium; another monthly one dollar and he is licensed to imbibe. The gambling privilege is given to the highest bidder, and he has the monopoly for the kingdom. There is also a small export tax on gambler and tin. On the other hand, any immigrant who wishes to settle and open a farm of any kind is given all the ground he can work, rent free, to have and to hold as long as he keeps it under cultivation. Should he leave, it reverts, with all improvements, to the crown. The government is autocratic, but tempered and kept in sympathy with the English ideas of justice as seen in the great colonies that surround it.

Abu Baka was one of the pioneers of western culture in the far East. His palace in the capital is a fine mixture of European comfort and Oriental luxury. It bears the name "Fatmah." It is the chief adornment of a plateau and is surrounded by a beautiful botanical garden, or park, containing plants of all kinds, grass plots and fountains. The rooms of the palace are furnished in western style. Many valuable works of art, gathered by the ruler in his various Journeys to the Occident, adorn the walls of the chief rooms. Abu Baka's title was originally that of Maharajah, but it was elevated to that of Sultan some years ago. In recognition of his firm, unwavering friendship with Great Britain. This friendship he extended to all British enterprise in the Malay Peninsula, and the introduction of a railroad into Johore was accomplished by his support.

In personal appearance his Highness compared favorably with the best representatives of the Anglo-Saxon race. He was five feet eight inches in height, well built, with clean-cut, kindly features. His color was nearer the European type than the Indian. His hands and feet were small, forehead high and full, lips thin, and nose aquiline. His hair and moustache were iron gray. He spoke good English, and was able to converse in French and German. In every day dress he affected the English Prince Albert suit, to which he added a narrow silk sash and a rimless black cap. At unofficial dinners he wore a tuxedo jacket, a white, low-cut vest, with diamond buttons, black panta- loons and gray sarong. In the front of his cap was a plume of diamonds, and in his buttonhole a diamond orchid. On his wrists were heavy gold bracelets of Malayan workmanship, and his fingers were cramped with almost priceless rings. In official dress, including his crown, his Highness wore ten million dollars worth of diamonds. His collar, epaulet, belt, cuffs and order of his medals were encrusted with diamonds, blazed with diamonds. The handle and scabbard of his sword were a solid mass of precious stones.

Other than being a lover of jewels, his Highness was a lover of good horse flesh and of yachts. His stud comprised two hundred horses, among which are fleet Arabians, sturdy little Delhi ponies, thoroughbred Australians and Indian galloways. Twice a year he offered a cup to the Singapore jockey races, and entered a half dozen of his best runners. At his tent on the grounds he dispensed champagne, ices and played alternately with the regimental band from the English barracks. His three hundred ton steam launch was built on the Clyde. Besides the Sultan's saloon on the lower deck, which is furnished befitting a king, there are cabins for ten people. The promenade deck is under the awning, and is furnished with a heavy rosewood dining table and long chairs. She carries four guns of long range. He had two smaller armed yachts of one hundred tons and twenty-five tons each that are of light draught, built expressly for shore and river use.

The Sultan of Johore had been well known throughout Europe for many years, as his long chronic illness had frequently led him to seek relief at the various watering places. At Mayence and at Carlsbad he was a familiar figure, and he spent much time at Brighton, in England. It was here that the incident occurred that made him famous, or at least notorious. While living here incognito as Mr. Alfred Baker he met a certain Miss Jenny Mitchell, with whom he became immediately fascinated. For a while his suit was very ardent, but just when pretty Miss Jenny found that the man she thought she had secured was an East Indian Sultan, with an income of a million and more, he suddenly cooled off, and the fair creature was left with a broken heart. This she tried to solve by bringing suit against his royal Highness for fifty thousand dollars for breach of promise; but Abu Baka pleaded that he was a reigning sovereign, and consequently free from the jurisdiction of the English courts, and that those same courts held to be true, and he consequently escaped being mulcted.

If the Baby is Cutting Teeth, Be assured use that old and well-tried remedy, McInroy's Cherry Syrup for children's teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic and is the best remedy for diarrhea. 10 cents a bottle. It is in a tin.
