ICE HOUSE AT BOLTON BURNED.

Locomotive 173 Runs a Gauntlet of Fire—Bolton Depot Saved. Vernon, July 18.—At 12:10 p. m. to-day smoke was seen emerging from Bolton Lake ice house, owned by J. C. Moulton of Hartford. Upon investigating the entire center of the structure was found to be on fire. Some laborers were at work near by, but they found that all attempts to put out the fire were unavailable. At 1:30 the entire building had been consumed, causing a loss estimated at $25,000, which is partly covered by insurance. The building contained 4,800,000 pounds of ice.

Flagman F. H. Potter and Conductor Gallagher, who were at Vernon with engine No. 173, were called upon to gather up and help save the New York and New England depot at Bolton. Flagman Potter threw the throttle open and struck a sixty mile per hour speed. After reaching Bolton he ran the gauntlet of fire and smoke.

Bill Nye, head-end brakeman, displayed great courage in making the coupling to the cars which were in front of the burning building. Just as engine 173 pulled the cars by the building, the entire side of the building fell with a crash. Conductor Gallagher, Engineer Potter and Nye deserve praise for their bravery.

The tool house belonging to the New York and New England Railway Company caught fire but was saved by a hose from engine 173. Had the wind been blowing in the direction of the depot it would have been destroyed by fire.

There was no clue as to the cause of the fire. It could not have been set on fire from the engines of the New England railroad, as the wind was blowing directly from the ice house to the tracks.

HER SNAKE GOT AWAY.

It is a King Snake, Only Five or Six Feet Long, and is an Ooty Tooty. (From the Washington Post.) About 2 o'clock yesterday morning Officer Gibson saw a large snake slowly dragging itself along Seventh street, between E and F streets northwest. Gibson called up Officer Kimmel, who patrols the next beat, and the two had a consultation. The snake was unlike blacksnakes or water snakes or any of the common varieties that they had seen as boys. Its back was stamped with the colors of the rainbow and its brilliant coat glistened even in the moonlight. The officers resolved to capture the snake. They procured a large pasteboard box and called to their assistance several mail collectors and night watchmen who happened to be in the vicinity. After considerable effort the snake was driven into the box.

Early yesterday morning Officer Kimmel learned that a Miss Lee, who is stopping at the house of John Hartnett, 517 Seventh street northwest, had been visiting in North Carolina, and had brought a king snake back with her. The king snake, while large and quite harmless, bears its name because of the ease with which it kills rattlers, moccasins and other dangerous crawlers. It despatches these snakes by constriction. Miss Lee's home is in New York, and she is a student. When Kimmel learned that the snake belonged in the Hartnett house he did not tell them that it had been found. As a result, when Miss Lee arose and found that the snake was missing she was worried. She told all of the guests of the house, a great four-story structure, with Hartnett's saloon in the basement, that her snake had got away.

When there was hurrying and scurrying. Some the guests were badly frightened. The thought of a live snake, five or six feet long, crawling through the bed rooms at will, was not pleasant.

About this time Officer Kimmel appeared with the box and the snake. Miss Lee ran forward with expectant face.

"Ah, there's my ooty, tooty pet," she exclaimed, as she patted the king snake's head. "Oh naughty, naughty boy, to go and run away."

Miss Lee explained that the snake must have fallen out of a fourth-story window.
