TO COME UP THIS MORNING.

The Case Against Presiding Elder Crandall J. North.

The case of the state against Presiding Elder Crandall J. North for contempt of court is expected to come up in the city court this morning. The editors of the Meriden Journal have been summoned to appear. It is rumored that Presiding Elder North denies the authenticity of the interview said to have been had with him by the Meriden Journal. Editor Allen of the Meriden Journal and the reporter who made the interview will be present in court this morning.

Asked to Withhold Criticism.

Rev. C. J. North, our Presiding Elder, is absent from the city, at Cottage City, Martha's Vineyard, and hence, in all probability, has not seen the newspaper reports of the alleged interview upon which is based Judge Cable's summons. We understand that other parties were present and heard the conversation, and what he said can be proven in due time. Therefore, on behalf of our common Methodism, we ask the press and community to withhold criticism until Brother North is heard from.

AT MORRIS COVE.

Accident at the Pequot House—General News.

Edward Minor, the attendant at the Pequot house, blew a finger off his hand and otherwise injured himself while loading a shell at the house yesterday afternoon.

It is the custom when a visiting yacht anchors or departs at the cove to salute them with a brass cannon, which is placed on the front lawn. The shells used are loaded by the attendant and it was at this time that the accident occurred. Mr. Minor was taken to the hospital in this city as soon as was possible.

Messrs. Dodd, Scranton and Goddard of Madison stopped at the cove last evening. They are on a cruise around the sound in a large cat-boat.

Miss Graham of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Mr. Wilcox and family from Meriden are the last arrivals at the McClellan house.

The steam yacht "Egret" is staying in the cove for a few days. William A. Granville and family are stopping at George Smith's house.

Those stopping at the Morris homestead are as follows: Mrs. Carhart, Syracuse, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Stevens, Bristol; Mrs. Burr and daughter, Bristol; Mr. North, Hartford; Mrs. Rider and daughter, Norwalk; Mr. Dwight Cowles, Kensington; Mr. E. J. Coon, Waterbury; Misses Burgess and Bromwell, Mrs. Miles and Miss Jennie Miles, Bristol.

GOOD SPEED BY MAJEL.

There Was a Great Tussel Between She and the Yacht Sport.

New London, July 19.—Sidney G. Harborne's sloop yacht Majel and Charles Ferguson's fin-keel Sport had a tussel over a triangular course of sixteen miles to-day, the course being from Fort Griswold house wharf to Bartlett's Reef lightship, thence to North Hill buoy and return. The day was perfect for the contest, for the air was clear and a view of the race could be had over a considerable part of the course.

Majel is a 26-footer, built by Weber of New Rochelle. Sport is a 20-footer, the product of Ferguson's shop at Groton. Majel got away first, going to windward to the lightship like a witch. The wind was just west of south and the fin-keel struck a pace that put the boat to the lightship in advance of Majel by fifty-seven seconds, though starting thirty-five seconds behind. Thence to North Hill the course was to eastward, and the wind being the yachts the race was a pretty one indeed, Majel showing superior speed as soon as the lightship was rounded and felt the effect of the wind. Majel's centerboard was hauled and she scudded away from Sport in the shape. On the homestretch the yachts had the wind on their quarter and it was a nip and tuck struggle. Majel finishing only one minute twelve seconds behind.

Mr. Jenkins, the timekeeper, had some misunderstanding as to the conditions. Mr. Harborne claiming that the boats were to sail without time allowance. The trophy was a silver cup. Though it has not been awarded, the gentlemen will come to a satisfactory agreement.

Generous Offer by Princeton.

New York, July 19.—C. H. Sherrill, Jr., chairman of the Yale advisory board, has received a letter from Tracy H. Harris, on behalf of the Princeton University Athletic association, offering the use of the latter's grounds, track and club house at Princeton to the Cambridge team for its training accommodation preparatory to meeting Yale October 5. Mr. Tracy also states that as well as this offer to Cambridge, Mr. Cuyler of the Princeton advisory committee, now in Europe, will extend the courtesy in person to the Cambridge men. Mr. Sherrill sent a reply to-day thanking the Princeton A. A. for its courtesy and regretting that as previous arrangements had already been made for the accommodation of the Cambridge team the Yale committee is unable to accept the very generous offer.

Big day for blackberries; 10c quart. R. W. Mills, 332 State street.

LETTERS SUGGESTED.

To a Post Guest of the Hotel Majestic While Making Observations in This Palatial House.

There is a certain charm or indescribable fascination about the atmosphere in this sumptuous house, it reminds one of the great hotels in the metropolis. On my first entrance I was amazed at its beauty, combined with simplicity. This is really a magnificent palace, and I doubt if the citizens of New Haven fully realize what they have got in their midst. It is evident the traveling public realize it from the number of transients who are constantly coming and going even in this dull season. I learn that your fellow townsman, Mr. Charles Kimberly of Kimberly, Root & Day, has decided to make it his home and has selected apartments for himself and wife. It is really the only way to live if one has only a small family. The following lines were prompted while I was in a spirit of contemplation over the marvellous change that this house has brought about. I have made myself familiar with every detail of the house during a sojourn of four days and can truly say it deserves all I have said about it:

New Haven at last Can proudly boast Of a "Majestic" hotel With a genial host.

It is the grandest In the state And stands unrivalled Up to date.

Amid richest furnishings And on finest beds, Morpheus lingers O'er the travellers' heads

For such rooms en suite, With private bath, Are a grand departure From the beaten path.

Through marble halls, With sweet plants lined, The guests pass on Until they find:

A dining room That's rich and rare, A perfect gem Without compare.

'Tis here the service Stands the test, Where chef and viands Are the best.

All wish 'twas bidfit Ten years ago And sigh to think New Haven's slow.

It was much needed They all say, Congratulating the owners, Who are modest and gay.

The guests go on And tell the rest Where they have found The very best.

And in their travels Up and down The Majestic, they say, Redeems "the town."
