

WOE TO BABIES.

Up Goes the Death Rate Among Children.

Many Homes Stricken With Cholera Infantum.

Deploable Disregard of Summer Dangers.

Little Sufferers Sicken and Die From Poor Nutrition.

Every Year Lactated Food Saves Thousands of Lives.

Babies that won't eat in hot weather must be induced to take sufficient nutrition by providing for them lactated food.

An infant's only salvation, especially in hot weather is in keeping well nourished. As soon as it fails to eat heartily and to sleep soundly, there is an opening for summer diarrhoea and other wasting diseases.

Lactated food should be given to all babies and young children who do not eat with relish, who are weak and drooping. But a few meals make the little sufferers "pick up" wonderfully.

Thousands of mothers know by experience that lactated food surely prevents cholera infantum and other summer disorders of a like character, and in hundreds of cases it has cured the severest attacks of these diseases.

It is perfectly prepared to be pleasing to the weak infant stomach. It quickly makes solid flesh and bone, and thickens the blood over summer days and nights.

HUNTING HOUSES FOR RENT.

New and Profitable Occupation of Some Enterprising Buffaloniens. (From the Buffalo Express.)

"Why don't you get a house hunter to help you?" The landlady said this. "A what?" exclaimed Mr. and Mrs. Jamison both at once. "House hunter."

"Why, I never heard of one," said Mr. Jamison. "What are they?" asked Mrs. Jamison. "Why, a house hunter is one who hunts houses," explained the landlady.

"You go to one and tell what you want and she does the rest. There is a house hunter who lives up in Prospect avenue. If you will go and tell her what you want she or her son will go with you and get you just the very kind of house you want.

Sometimes she gets two dollars and sometimes as high as ten dollars for a house you want and how much you want to pay. They seem to have the whole city right at command, and no sooner do you tell what you want than there it is, all fitted out ready to move into. I always get her to hunt houses for me when I want to move. You will pay her one dollar and then she gets a commission from the other end as well.

She has a sort of understanding with all of the real estate dealers in the city. Sometimes she gets two dollars and sometimes as high as ten dollars for a house you want and how much you want to pay.

What difference does the quantity make, after all? If you spend five cents or ten cents or a dollar for an aid to washing, don't you want the thing that will give you the most work, the best work, and the most certain safety for that amount of money? That thing is Pearline.

Send it Back. Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, be honest—send it back.

resident. The fee of one dollar is asked only when the person desiring a house is in a hurry. Where the house hunter takes her time a house will be secured after a time which will please. The dollar is for having the house hunter go with one at once and finding just the house wanted. That plan is usually chosen.

A CLEVER RUSE.

How an Actress Succeeded in Getting Rid of an Admirer. (From the San Francisco Post.)

A callow young dental student is infatuated with a young actress who plays old woman parts at a local theater, and has been most assiduous in paying her every attention. First came bouquets, boxes of bonbons and spiced notes, then long waits at the stage door, and lately he has haunted her dressing room, until lately he has become almost unbearable.

One night last week the actress hit upon a stratagem to get rid of her admirer. "Charley, I want you to do something for me. Will you do it?" she asked in her sweetest tones.

"With the greatest pleasure. You know I love to serve you." "Well I've just got half an hour in which to dress for this old woman's part and I haven't a wrinkle. I want you to go to the drug store and buy a dozen wrinkles. If you can't get them at one place go somewhere else. But get back as soon as you can, for I can't make up until I get them. If you are not back here in fifteen minutes I will not be able to go on at all and I will be ruined."

"Oh, I'll be back in that time," declared the ardent youth. "If you don't get here with those wrinkles inside of fifteen minutes I'll never speak to you again. Now, hurry up."

Half a dozen notes pleading for forgiveness constitute all the evidence the actress has that her admirer is still alive.

A Vanished Gold Mine. The most artistic swindle known to the history of the gold-mining industry occurred some years ago at a place called Georgetown, in Colorado, in the center of a very rich mining country.

In the winter snow drifts hundreds of feet deep among the mountains and freezes very hard. Two old miners ran a tunnel into the snow at the base of a mountain, a distance of three hundred feet, timbered it up nicely, plastered it with mud, and at the far end piled a quantity of very rich quartz.

Then they went down to Denver and became acquainted with a couple of wealthy Englishmen who had just come over to look for an investment for their spare cash that would pay a big dividend. They took them to Georgetown, and showed them their tunnel, and the El Dora at the end of it. The tunnel had been really into the rocky mountain, would have represented thousands of pounds.

The Englishmen were charmed with the prospect. They bought the claim for seventy-five thousand dollars cash and went to New York to arrange for bringing up a quantity of quartz mill machinery. When they returned in the spring, there was nothing left of the tunnel but the woodwork and a wagon-load of quartz at the end. It was the most ridiculous sell ever known and the most successful.

CURIOUS ISLANDERS. The Cave Dwellers of Behring Straits are Without Equals. (From the Pittsburg Dispatch.)

In Behring Straits, thirty miles off Port Clarence and the shores of Alaska, there are about two hundred of the most curious islanders that ever were seen.

The islanders were found by the whalers after a great many years after the whalers had been going to Behring Straits, and the great Mackenzie, it was supposed the huge brown rock was uninhabited. It was like a beacon in the sea, and about it nothing had been seen or heard, except the roar of the waves and the weird cries of the wild fowl.

Finally, some one discerned smoke ascending from the other side of the cliff. A landing was made, and there the islanders were found. They said they and their forefathers had been there always and that they knew no other world, though they had heard that there was one. This was seen. The island or rock they inhabit is about half a mile wide and a little more than that distance long, and the islanders are cave dwellers and live on whale blubber, seal and walrus meat.

In effectiveness, in economy, and above all in its absolute harmlessness, no matter how or where you use it, there's nothing to compare with this, the first and only washing-compound.

On the southeast side, close and nesting against the cliff, is a village of the cave dwellers. One abode is built over and under the other and to the right and left, giving them a strange and motley appearance, not unlike the recesses inhabited by bald eagles. There are narrow caves excavated into the side of the crumbling volcanic rock, and in the bottom of each is some short, native grass, forming a bed in which to sleep.

At the mouth of the cave and just in the interior fires are lighted, and here they warm themselves in the winter. Skins of different kinds are also suspended outside to keep out the snow and cold. In the summer the hardy natives leave their holes and live in odd houses made of poles, constructed near at hand on the edge of the cliff.

These strange people are usually as strong and vigorous as can be found anywhere. Moreover, they are entirely contented and happy. They have no government, no chief and no need of laws. Living in families and settling forth every day in their klaks for the whole, seal and walrus, they return each night to their caves, or pole tents, caring nothing for the outside world.

Odd to relate, however, the prestige of the native is determined by the clothes he wears. As these consist of skins and constitute the wealth of the islanders, it will be seen that they are not in this respect so much unlike civilized people. But the man with more clothes than anybody else has no more authority. He is respected for his sagacity, but that is all.

Little has been known of the islanders hitherto. For a great many years after the whalers had been going to Behring Straits, and the great Mackenzie, it was supposed the huge brown rock was uninhabited. It was like a beacon in the sea, and about it nothing had been seen or heard, except the roar of the waves and the weird cries of the wild fowl.

Business Was Less Active Than on Any Day of the Week. New York, Aug. 16.—Business on the stock exchange to-day was less active than on any previous day of the week. Tobacco was heavy throughout and broke from 108 1/2 to 106 1/2 @ 107. The selling of the stock was based on reports that the opposition to the company is growing and that manufacturers in other parts of the country will join with the western competitors of the concern.

The poor statement of the Manhattan for the June quarter induced selling of this stock and the price fell from 117 1/2 to 114 1/2. Distillers were sold by brokers supposed to be acting for the Greenhut-Morris interest. Chicago Gas was taken up to 6 1/2 by houses with western connections.

The general railway list held very firm throughout, operators having been encouraged by the excellent crop advice, the weather at the west, according to reports, being ideal. The engagement, too, of only $400,000 gold for shipment to Europe by the Lusitania tomorrow had its effect, as it had been expected that at least $2,000,000 would be forwarded. The supply of bills against securities sold abroad increased materially, a firm identified with the Susquehanna and Western road being the heaviest sellers. The changes, however, except in rare instances, were confined to the fractions quiet and steady.

Speculation closed quiet and steady. Net changes in the usually prominent stocks were slight either way. Among the specialties New England dropped 3, Manhattan 2, Lake Erie and Western 1, Lake Erie and Western preferred 1, while Minneapolis and St. Louis preferred rose 1/4 per cent.

Bonds were firm. Sales footed up $1,250,000. Following are the closing prices reported by Prince & Whitley, bankers and brokers, 45 Broadway, New York, and 15 Center Street, New Haven:
