HIS IDEA OF EXTRAORDINARY.

Nothing Remarkable About a Man Falling 1,000 Feet Unless He Lived.

[From the New York Herald]

Some ten or twelve years ago an incident happened at Gibraltar which illustrates the practical views of a certain class of people. A subaltern named O'Donohue was the officer of the guard at the Elphinstone Guard. At this point of the world-known rock there is a sheer drop of over 1000 feet. A Lieutenant who had taken too much champagne at a mess dinner walked over the rock and undoubtedly was dead before he reached the rocks far below. When the officer of the guard came to fill in his report and reached the question, "Has anything extraordinary happened while you were officer of the guard?" he wrote in the blank space reserved for the answer, "Nothing."

Of course he was summoned before Lord Napier of Magdala, the Governor of Gibraltar. When he appeared Lord Napier asked:

"You were the officer of the guard at Elphinstone Guard yesterday?"

"I was, sir."

"And this is your report?"

"It is, sir."

"Lieutenant M— was killed by walking over the rock?"

"He was, sir."

"You knew that when you made out your report?"

"I did, sir."

"That he was killed?"

"Yes, sir."

"And yet you said in your report that nothing extraordinary had happened on your guard?"

"I did, sir."

"Well, Mr. O'Donohue," said Lord Napier, sternly; "don't you think it is extraordinary when a lieutenant walks over the rock, falls 1,000 feet and is killed?"

"Indeed, sir," was the prompt reply. "I should think it was extraordinary if he had fallen that far and not been killed."
