THE HOMEWARD ROAD

President Harrison on His Return Trip.

Good Words for McKinley and Sherman.

Cheering Crowds Greet the Chief Executive—He Makes Thirteen Speeches Yesterday.

SIDEY, Ohio, October 13.—A special train bearing President Harrison and party pulled out of Indianapolis on the return trip to Washington this morning. At Anderson and Muncie stops were made and the President addressed the waiting throngs. The greatest demonstration of the day took place at Winchester where several thousand people assembled. Every building in the city was decorated, even the telegraph poles were adorned with stars and stripes.

THE STURDY WEST.
BELLEFONTAINE, Ohio, October 13.—Brief stops were made at Union City, Ind., Sidney, Ohio, DeGraff and Bellefontaine during which the President made brief speeches touching upon the enlarged views which his trip through the West had given him of the greatness of this country and its sturdy manhood.

SHERMAN AND MCKINLEY.
CANTON, Ohio, October 13.—At Mansfield, another large crowd was assembled, and the President spoke briefly, thanking them for their kindness, and saying he was glad to be permitted to stop at the home of their distinguished Senator and his friend, Sherman.

"I am sure," said he, "however, you may differ from him in political opinion, that the people of Mansfield and of Ohio, are proud of the eminence which he has attained in the councils of the nation and of the distinguished service he has been able to render his country, not only in Congress, but in the Treasury Department (cheers). He is twin in greatness with that military brother, who led some of you, as he did me, in some of the great campaigns of the war and they have together rendered conspicuous service to this country which we, as they, love with devoted affection."

At Wooster the students of the University joined their college cry to the cheers of the citizens. This was the first point in Congressman McKinley's district at which the President spoke. The President spoke but briefly, as time was short, and many other stops remained to be made.

A large crowd was assembled at Orrville, but there was no time for a speech. At Massillon there was a great crowd of Grand Army veterans, school children and citizens, headed by the Mayor. As the train entered the city, operatives from manufacturing establishments near the road gathered at the track and cheered the President as he sped by.

In his address, referring to the industries of the city, the President said: "It is well that your interchanging industries and pursuits lean upon and help each other, increasing and making possible the great prosperity which you enjoy. I hope it is true that everybody is getting fair return for his labor. We cannot afford in America to have any disintegrated classes, and if fair wages are paid for fair work we will have none. I am not one of those who believe that cheapness is the highest good. (Cheers). I am not one of those who believe it can be to my interest or to yours to purchase in the market anything below the price that pays to the men who make it at fair living wages. (Great applause.)"

"The city is surrounded by a valley 160 miles in extent and by an appropriation of $8,000,000 which is confidently expected from the Government for the building has been let, and provides for the furnishing of 8,000,000 brick. It will be about three years in construction."

GONE TO HIS REST

Death of Supreme Justice Miller Last Night.

Passes Away Without Evidence of Pain.

The Last Remaining Appointee of President Lincoln—Biography of a Noble Character.

WASHINGTON, October 13.—Justice Miller died tonight at eight minutes of eleven o'clock, without a struggle, and apparently without pain. A few minutes before he died the phlegm in the throat gradually accumulated and his frame quivered. It was evidence that the end was fast approaching and members of his household who were not in the sick room were hastily summoned to his bedside.

Besides Mrs. Miller and her son Irvine, there were present Dr. Cook, J. W. Woolworth, an old friend of Justice Miller who had just arrived from Omaha, family servants and Chief Clerk McKenney, of the Supreme Court.

Soon after death, the face of the justice, which had become somewhat drawn during the last day's illness, changed to a perfectly natural condition and he looked as if in a quiet sleep. No arrangements for the funeral will be made until tomorrow, but it is certain his remains will be removed to his home in Keokuk, Iowa, where they will be interred in the family burying ground.

Tomorrow the Supreme Court will meet as usual and after the death of Associate Justice Miller is announced, Chief Justice Fuller will adjourn the court.

Mrs. Touzalin and Mrs. Corkhill, daughter and grand daughter of the justice, will reach Washington tomorrow afternoon.

A PHOENICIAN ABROAD.

PROSPERITY OF A WESTERN TEXAS CITY.

Interview With James Coleman About El Paso—A Field for the Marketing of Salt River Valley Fruits.

James Coleman returned Sunday from El Paso, Tex., where he went on a pleasure trip. Mr. Coleman is profuse in his praises of the little city and its hospitable people.

"I visited the Santa Fe, Texas Pacific, Southern Pacific and Galveston, Houston and San Antonio yards," said Mr. Coleman, "where there are from 5,000 to 6,000 cars handled daily. Eight passenger trains per day pass through the city, creating continuous life and bustle."

"The El Paso Smelter Company has their own switch engine, and five men besides a conductor are engaged to attend to their business, from 150 to 160 cars passing daily to and from the works."

"A Government building, one and a half stories high, and having departments for the Custom House, Postoffice and District Court is in course of construction. The citizens of El Paso have donated 1800 acres of land to the Government for the new military post which will be composed of sixteen companies. The contract for the erection of the building has been let, and provides for the furnishing of 8,000,000 brick. It will be about three years in construction."

BROUGHT TO JUSTICE.

ARREST OF A MEXICAN MURDERER NEAR SAN DIEGO.
Two Brothers Deliberately Kill an Old Alcade and Burn His Body to Ashes in Mexico.
SAN DIEGO, Cal., October 13.—A clever capture of a murderer who has escaped detection for three years was effected today by Constable José Cota of this city.

In 1887 an alcade, named Juan Mujos, was murdered at Todos Santos, fourteen miles from La Paz, in old Mexico, and a young Mexican named Castro was arrested and hung for the crime. His brother, José Martínez Castro, was also wanted, but he boarded the steamer Newbern and escaped to the United States.

The Castro brothers had a vicious dog and one day the animal attacked the Alcade, who shot it. This incensed the brothers and that night they went to the old man's house and shot him dead. They carried the body outside the village and burned it to ashes. Ever since the Mexican authorities have been searching for the brother who escaped, and finally a clue was obtained. Governor Waterman issued the warrant and Cota and a deputy started out to make the arrest. Castro was discovered in a lonely wood chopper's camp, about sixty miles from this city, and after some difficulty they prevailed upon him to come peacefully into town and he is now in the County jail.

A party captured a rough looking man a stranger in the vicinity, who, on being arrested, freely confessed that he placed the car on the track, but would say nothing further. He is believed to be deranged. He was taken to Bakersfield and lodged in the county jail.

DEMOCRATS AT TEMPE

Rally Across the River Last Night.

Speech Making by the Local Candidates.

Zulick, Cox, Chalmers and Farish Attempt to Elucidate Their Side of the Case.

The Democratic demonstration came off at Tempe as announced. The special train engaged to bear the body politic to the scene of slaughter left at 7 o'clock p. m. local time and arrived in Tempe 30 minutes thereafter. Aboard were the brains and the band. Both were in a state of musical commotion, the former induced by the juice of the rye and the latter by the coin of the realm.

The Reception Committee, composed of Boon Lewis, met the train and escorted the visitors to the town hall. Chairman L. H. Hawkins called the meeting to order, and Samuel F. Webb was introduced to the audience. Mr. Webb proceeded to make his speech already heard by the Phoenix people, and failed not to impress upon Tempeites that he wanted to be Sheriff; that while his honorable opponent was an honest and deserving man, that all honest and deserving men could not get into office. He touched also upon the sixty-day session business and left the platform with promises of eternal fidelity to the cause.

Frank Cox came up smiling. He had the glitter of confidence in his eye. Evidently he had been polishing off some of the corners of his Saturday night speech. He started off with a stinging sarcasm, ostensibly to wither somebody who had been on the Committee on Platform in the Republican Convention. The party wasn't there and couldn't have been very much withered. Then the acts of the District Attorney in the capacity of adviser to the Board of Supervisors were reviewed and endorsed in a liberal manner. He disposed in a very short time of certain deficiencies purporting to result from extravagances in County management and wound up by finding a surplus in the credit of the aforesaid Board of Supervisors.

L. H. Chalmers followed Mr. Cox and to take his own word for it, had just as well have given his time to some less sagacious candidate. He was certain of being elected but took the occasion to promise a reduction of Territorial offices and diminishing of fees and salaries of County officers. "Chal," made a sudden leap and landed on old King John and the Magna Charta, proceeding to outline a system of Governmental policy, from that date with respect to parliamentary rules down to Speaker Reed, who believes in acknowledging the right of power of a majority over a minority. He also referred to Frank Cox's appellation of "Eternity," but it fell flat, for nobody down at Tempe had heard anything about it. He also promised something in the way of railroad legislation (from Prescott to Phoenix) which, by the way, was not received with that enthusiasm calculated to inspire confidence.

C. Meyer Zulick was next introduced, speaking but a few moments, saying by way of explanation that he was billed for a joint discussion with his opponent in the field Friday night next.

T. E. Farish then got at the audience with his tariff machine and ground out statistics for half an hour that would have done up McKinley and relegated his bill to eternal innocuous desuetude if he had only had the machine in Washington during the Congressional session.

The Drama.
Maude Granger, who will appear at the Opera House this evening, is famous for being the most tasty and elaborate dresser on the American stage. Her costumes are always marvels of the dressmaker's art and created a furore among the fashionables of San Francisco during her recent engagement there.

Miss Granger says that it's all nonsense for actresses to send abroad for their costumes, and that as elegant and elaborately trimmed dresses can be obtained in New York as in Paris, and that the average price for a really elegant stage costume should not exceed $300. Despite the fair Granger's remarks concerning Paris-made costumes, she is known to be very partial to Worth's exquisite robes. Her engagement, which opens with "The Creole" tonight, will present the actress in several exquisite toilets.

Mrs. Rachel Johnson, mother of Rachel Macaulay, the actress, died last night in Louisville, Kentucky.
