

The Pope Having His Tomb Made.

Although the pope is in very good health, and is devoting himself with ardor to the reunion of the eastern and western churches, which is being discussed by the conference of patriarchs, his holiness has given orders for the preparation of his own tomb. The celebrated sculptor, Sig Maccagnani, has received the commission to set about the work. The monument, says the London Standard, which is to be of white Carrara marble, is to be a sarcophagus, on which will repose a lion with its fore paws resting on the papal tiara. To the right there will be a statue of Faith, with a torch in one hand and the Scriptures in the other, and to the left a figure of Truth, the hand laid on the coat of arms of the Pecci family. The only inscription on the tomb will be: "Hic Leo XIII. P. M. pulvis est." By his will, the pope directs that his remains be buried in the Basilica of St. John Lateran.

as shown in the cut, make a runner 5 feet long from 2-inch hard wood plank. Let the nose turn up 14 inches and bore a hole for hitching a whiffletree. Make the runner the shape of the dotted lines in Fig. 2, the runner being 6 inches deep. Next make two flanges (B B, Fig. 1) out of 1-inch board, 1 foot wide, 1 1/2 feet long on top and 4 feet 7 inches long on the bottom as in Fig. 2 at B. Fasten the flanges on the runners with screws, bevel the front end and spread the back end 3 1/2 feet. Nail a couple of cleats to the flanges and put in a cross bar C C. When putting on the flanges allow the runner to be an inch below the bottom of the open flange wings. It will then run steady. Next nail two standards to the flanges for the seat and screw the seat securely.—W. G. Mar, in Farm and Home.

A FAMOUS CODFISH.

An Emblem in the Massachusetts Statehouse for Over a Century.

The famous codfish which hangs from the base of the dome in the Massachusetts statehouse, and inside the old room in which the representatives used to meet, will be absent from the chamber in the new extension which they are soon to occupy. Just why this emblem, which has always attracted the notice of visitors and sometimes moved them to ridicule, should be ignored in the transfer of movables from one room to the other is not explained, and, according to the New York Post, it is even said that the codfish is doomed to figure in a museum, presumably historical. The following account of its origin is given: "In 1806 Charles W. Palfrey, editor of the Salem Register, and a member of the house for several years, undertook to gather all the facts that could be learned about the placing of the figure in the chamber. After extensive research he found much concerning the fish which, luckily, had been preserved. It was by Mr. Palfrey's efforts that the actual facts were got from the records of the great and general court, and while many links are missing, the chain is nearly complete. On Wednesday, March 17, 1784, John Rowe, a member from Boston, moved permission to hang the codfish in the house as a memorial to the importance of the codfishery to the welfare of the state. The motion prevailed, and shortly after the emblem was placed in position, and there it has remained undisturbed through all the vicissitudes of the years which have intervened. Once it was painted, but it has never been taken down from the iron rod by which it is held in position. Mr. Rowe, who presented the figure to the commonwealth, was a well-known citizen of Boston and a conspicuous patriot, being associated with Samuel Adams, James Otis, John Hancock and other leaders of the period. He was interested in commerce and was an extensive property owner along the water front, Rowe's wharf and contiguous territory being among his possessions. He died on February 17, 1787."
