The report that there is scarlet fever in Tombstone is without foundation. There is practically no sickness here.—Tombstone Prospector.

Qua Hirschfeld, proprietor of the famous Palace saloon in Phoenix, was in Globe last week, where he has business interests, returning home Saturday. Qua is probably the best known man in Arizona, and universally popular.—Solomonville Bulletin.

The Tucson Bar association is making preparations to give an informal banquet to Senator Morgan. It would not be out of the way to offer as a suggestion that it would be appropriate for the democratic club to tender a reception to this illustrious exponent of democratic principles during his stay in our city.—Tucson Star.

Word was received in Tombstone today from Fort Huachuca that William Tobler, a well known cattleman, had committed suicide at his ranch at Garden canyon near Fort Huachuca. Gardner Schuster and Deputy Sid Muller left this afternoon for the ranch to hold an inquest. Tobler was well known in Tombstone and the news of his suicide was a great surprise to his friends. He was believed to have considerable money and property interests. Further particulars as to the cause of the rash act are expected when the inquest is held.—Tombstone Prospector.

The case of the Agua Prieta grant, claimed by Santiago Alana, as administrator, was called this morning and occupied the attention of the court throughout the day. Two witnesses were called and examined.—Juan Pedro Canon for the claimant and Lieutenant O. H. Kipper for the government. The contest is to have the grant, partially on whether or not all the land involved lies on the Mexican side of the international line, the claim of the government being that it does. The claimant holds that 68,000 acres included in the grant to which this is alleged to have been issued on December 25, 1836, lies on the United States side of the line. The land lies in Sitopah Springs valley, about thirty miles southeast of Bisbee.—Tucson Citizen.

Word comes from Phoenix that there was a hot time on board the passenger train going west last Monday night. A crazy negro was a passenger on route to Phoenix in charge of Fred Dysart. Just as the train left Bowie the negro tried to run out of the car. Fred headed him off and got him into a seat when the negro made a dash through the window. His body was half through the window when the senior editor of the Bulletin, who was a passenger in the same car, came to the rescue. Together with Fred they secured a cage and then commenced a tug of war similar to that in the Holladay murder trial. He was finally drawn back through the window. Ropes were secured and he was tied to the seat. He was found in the asylum at Phoenix Tuesday morning.—Solomonville Bulletin.

The preliminary hearing in the case of Dora Garnett, charged with the murder of Irene Logan on the evening of the 6th inst., was completed at about 8 o'clock last night. A number of witnesses were examined but the testimony added did not materially change the original character of the case, and the cause of the killing was as originally reported—the result of an old standing feud between the two women, augmented by the desperate conditions of the life which both were living, and the presence of both to the use of intoxicants. Whatever excuse there is for the killing, if such there be—lies in the fact that the deceased woman had been repeatedly warned by the slayer never to enter her (Dora Garnett's) house, which in the face of such warning she did. Both District Attorney Land, who conducted the prosecution, and Allen R. English of counsel for the defense, were on hand. Judge Williams held the woman to await the action of the next grand jury and placed her under $15,000 bonds. She was unable to furnish the bond and is in jail.—Bisbee Correspondence Tombstone Prospector.

Billy Mason was in the city yesterday from Jim Millar's ranch. Located nearly on the summit of the Rincon mountains, east of Tucson, Billy is cultivating six acres of ground high up in the mountains on the Millar ranch, on which he is raising the finest potatoes in the territory, and other vegetables. Cabbage grows there to over twenty pounds in weight, and of the tenderest quality. Tomatoes and all other vegetables that are raised there are of a superior quality. This is on account of the temperate character of the climate, and no irrigation is necessary, being so high up in the air that the dew of that region gives all the moisture required. But the ranch is watered with a number of springs which meander through it, coming out of the mountain near its crest, more than 1,000 feet above sea level. Billy Mason has a tract of land of his own which covers the crest of the mountain, comprising over 100 acres. It is as level as a table and is dotted all over with gigantic mountain pines, and is covered with snow in winter and grass and wild fruits in summer. It is delightfully fertile and the soil commands a beautiful view of the surrounding country.—Tucson Citizen.

There was a thrilling scene at Tattersall's Wednesday morning in which a prominent part was played by Mme. Ade Castello, Ringling Brothers' intrepid menage rider. It is customary to run the racing horses around the hippodrome several times during the day to accustom them to the track, and particularly to give the drivers confidence in the short turns. This is not difficult for the stock but in the running races, but it requires great skill to turn the corners with the four-horse Roman chariots without collision. Wednesday morning two chariots were on the track. One was driven by Henry Golden, the other by M. G. Gilroy. Both are charioteers of ability. The horses, eight blooded Kentucky racers, were full of life, but the drivers succeeded in holding them in check, and swept around the course once without mishap. On the second lap Gilroy's horse became frightened at some drapery that was being hung by an incautious decorator, and swung in toward the other team, the two quadrigas came together with tremendous force. The chariots were not checked, and the concussion threw Gilroy out of the chariot. He fell upon the track, while his now thoroughly excited team, drawing away from the other chariot, sped onward around the track. The horses made tremendous headway, and Golden, who had succeeded in checking his horses, which were fully headed, was left behind. Realizing the danger of another collision, he quickly drove his horses off the track and left it in undisturbed possession of the runaway team.

A WOMAN COLLECTOR.

"I used to work for a collection agency in one of the northern cities," said a woman perfumery drummer, "and my experience was tolerably exciting. My duty was to sit at a roll-top desk in the office and imperatorially to say, 'Just you wait. All day long men would come in to hammer the boss. 'Where's the fellow that sends out these blackmailing letters?' was the usual salutation. Then I would smile sweetly and say: 'I'm the proprietor; what can I do for you?' At that the visitor would look dazed, utter things under his breath and walk off. Occasionally the real proprietor would peep through an inside window to see whether I was still alive, for I must admit our letters were calculated to give a man the homicidal mania."

"I don't believe a word of it," he replied, "and I can't beat a woman. He thought as when I did so, and in his eyes made me feel creepy. 'I'll have to take it out on the fixtures,' he said finally, and upon my word, he broke up every blessed thing in the shop. He did it quickly and systematically, and you never saw such an awful row! I felt as if I was in a bad way, and he went right ahead. As a tip-off he smashed the chandelier and bade me a polite good-day. When the proprietor came in he had a fit. It was after that I went into the perfumery business. The work is harder, but it is much less trying on one's nerves."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

BRIGHT LITTLE BOY.

"Now, boys, I have a few questions in fractions to ask," said the teacher. "Suppose I have a piece of beefsteak and cut it into sixteen pieces, what would those pieces be called?"

"Sixteenths," answered one boy, after meditating a moment.

"Very good. And when the sixteenths were out in half what would they be?" There was silence in the class; but presently a little boy at the foot put up his hand. "Do you know, Johnnie?"

"Hash!" answered Johnnie, confidently.—Tit-Bits.

INDIANA'S LOST RIVER

An Erratic Stream That Puzzles the Hoosier State People.

Geological explorations and recent floods have brought to light many interesting facts concerning the "lost rivers" of Indiana, and lead to the belief that hundreds of feet under the ground in this state great rivers are gushing toward the sea, appearing at the surface here and there in southern Indiana to again lose themselves far from on. The most wonderful of the surface indications are found in the southwestern portion of the state, especially in the vicinity of Orange county, where the famous Lost river is formed by half a dozen of the world's most wonderful circles and brooks.

Lost river rises all of a sudden in Washington county. It rather gushes from a bank a full sized river, and after running a mile or so, suddenly disappears from view. Near Orleans it suddenly sinks into a great cavernous hole. The passage is black and unfathomable and even in the driest seasons it has never been explored. A mile from the first sink a stream again breaks forth from the side of a hill, and it has been established beyond doubt that this is a continuation of the famous Lost river. After running through a narrow bed for a distance of two miles it again disappears. Eight miles southwest it comes to the surface abruptly to flow on for another mile or two, and then disappears in another sink. It gushes forth again from another bluff, and continues as a modest, unassuming, every-day stream to its junction with White river, a few miles distant. There are indications that at one time in the past there was a regular surface bed over which the stream flowed. But this bed is now dry and overgrown with trees and briars. Still during fresher seasons the underground caverns are evidently over-taxed and the overflow continues over the old bed to the second sink, and then to the third and the fourth, and then joins the lost stream.

But Lost river is simply the parent of numerous remarkable surface and subterranean streams. A year ago it was found that there was a subterranean stream running under Rush county, almost exactly five miles northeast. It was discovered in a rather remarkable way. William Barlow was drilling a deep well at Moscow, in Orange township, a few feet from the banks of Flatrock creek. All of a sudden the drill penetrated a cavern, and after it was withdrawn a roaring sound could be heard. An investigation was made with a sounding line. At a depth of 100 feet the line was caught in a remarkably swift current, which carried the plummet along with it as much faster as to make it difficult to reel the line in. When the hole had been lighted, and it is found that the subterranean stream flows over a bed of the whitest rock, washed smooth and polished by the friction of the water passing over it for thousands of years. Scientists now believe that this water is water from the Lost river. It evidently flows from the northeast for a great distance, possibly rising in Ohio or in the St. Lawrence arch. At English, Ind., a recent flood resulted in the discovery of another lost river. A new cavern was opened by the water in Crawford county. By placing one's ear to the opening, the splash and roar of water may be heard underground. It is also headed toward the point where Lost river makes its appearance. Reports from various sections of the southern

A Chicago newspaper man tells an interesting story of how he got the laugh on the editor-in-chief: "During the last year," says the newspaper man, "I have troubled with very unpleasant feelings in my stomach. My editor-in-chief knew I had recently been taking Ripans Tablets and had been inclined to laugh at me, but when I told him how much better I was he got interested. He has been taking medicine from a physician all summer for stomach troubles. I told him the story of Ripans as I had learned it from the ads, telling him the name was the initials of rib, bar, spears, peppermint, aloes, rice and soda. He says his wife is all out of sorts and he has a notion to try Ripans on her. I let him wait for it if he does he will stop paying $5 a trip to the physician who has been treating him. I feel very free to say that I never felt better in my life. I have a good appetite, good digestion, sleep well and enjoy life. I ride to business and back, making twenty-two miles a day, on my wheel, and enjoy it as well as I ever did. I have dropped down to one Table a day. Not that I fear the need of even one, but I take it as a preventive."
