Miss Louise B. Coombs left last Monday for Phoenix to resume her position as teacher in one of the public schools there. Her Globe friends will miss her.—Silver Belt.

Miss L. G. Coombs has entirely recovered from her recent illness and is enjoying her visit in the east. Mrs. Coombs will return home about September 15.—Silver Belt.

Miss Ella Whittemore leaves for Los Angeles Wednesday next, says the Florence Tribune, to take the position of professor of Latin in Occidental college, vice Prof. Wilber, resigned. College opens on the 20th.

Frank M. Morey and Miss Belle Reynolds were married on Wednesday evening, August 30, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Nisbitt. Justice William Whalley performed the ceremony.—Globe Silver Belt.

C. D. Reppy, editor of the Florence Tribune, leaves this week for Los Angeles. At Casa Grande he will meet his niece, Miss Helen Day of St. Louis, and together they will journey to the coast, where they will join Mrs. Reppy and Miss Day's mother.

School opened yesterday in Florence with the following able corps of teachers: Mr. A. G. McAllister, principal; Mrs. S. H. Summers, assistant principal; Mrs. A. T. Colton, grammar; Miss William Clark, primary. The Tribune confidently predicts a successful school year under their management.

The new telephone line owned by the Prescott Electric company was completed to Crowned King last evening. A Courier employe talked over the new wire, and could hear the person conversing at the other end as distinctly as though the voice were only a block away.—Prescott Courier.

A prominent business man of Globe, who had been subject to abuse from a competitor for some time, finally lost his temper to such a degree that he went after his trader with a quilt, and gave the offender a good lambing. The fact that the "P. B." had to pay a fine of $50 for the satisfaction, suggests that the law needs revision.—Silver Belt.

A detachment of troops from Jachitan to Oaxaca has been stopped and put in quarantine on a hacienda, it being suspected that there are incipient cases of yellow fever among the soldiers. A dispatch from the city of Tehuantepec is to the effect that almost all foreigners arriving there have been taken down with the disease, the mortality being great.—Tombstone Prospector.

Judge C. M. Marshall this week received the sad news of the death of his son-in-law, T. F. Faribault, which occurred a few days ago in San Antonio, Texas, says the Florence Tribune. He was married to Miss Bessie Marshall on the 4th of last January. The death was the result of a railroad accident in which Mr. Faribault was involved several days ago. The accident occurred on the line of the Santa Fe, near Thomas at 8 o'clock p. m., when it was overtaken by the big storm and the train lay there until Wednesday morning, when it proceeded on to Bowie, passing Solomonville at 12 o'clock. Both the train and the engine were abandoned Wednesday, causing much complaint among business men who were deprived of their mail.—Solomonville Bulletin.

Early this morning Mrs. E. W. Land conveyed to District Attorney Land a choice piece of land, says the Tombstone Prospector. It's a girl, with a little ray of sunshine as so sweet and so coy. Ed was in great hopes that a son would appear, yet we would that nothing of great moment should strike the district attorney's office because as it is Ed is only hitting the earth in high places. The proud papa is doing the proper thing and with a liberal hand is setting 'em up in honor of the event. We join in wishing him many happy returns. The prizes will be sung to the daughter later.

The collector of customs of this district, the Hon. Messrs. Dillon, went into the office of an El Paso business man in either day and made a gun play. This was not exactly in the course of business. After the collector had the business man covered with his gun, and at his mercy, he turned his head to look at a man on the street, and he looked back at the business man he found the table had been turned, and he was covered, and at his opponent's mercy. He then retired to the street and the incident was closed. If collectors of customs, like their subordinates, were required to pass a civil service examination before receiving their appointment, it is probable that Mr. Dillon would never have been appointed. The examiner on gun plays would have marked him deficient in a man who will cover an opponent with a gun and then look away could never pass in that important branch of the service.—Lordsburg Liberal.

Because of the teachers' institute being held at Prescott this week the school board deemed it advisable not to begin work until next Monday, when the necessity for breaking in the school work will have passed. Misses Johnson, Riley, Hauxhurst and Hall were all at the school building and classified 126 pupils and made other arrangements to commence work Monday without loss of time. The school board had expressed itself as being pleased with the personnel of the faculty, and are confident of a successful school year. The ladies are attending the institute.—Jerome Reporter.

Chief Engineer Burr Bassill, in charge of the engineer corps of the U. S. & N. P. railway company, engaged in the preliminary survey for a proposed railroad line to the Continental mines, last Saturday sent a partial report of his work to President William Garland. He finds a feasible route for the track to be followed by a spur from the main line. The preliminary survey will be extended to the summit, from four to six miles from the Continental mines, and on down Mineral creek to the different camps along the creek. It has already been ascertained that an easy grade can be found to the summit, the only question being as to whether or not the drop-down into Mineral creek will be too steep for a railroad. The Globe Silver Belt is informed by a gentleman high in authority that the road will be extended not only to the Continental mine but over the divide and down Mineral creek if it is proved that a feasible route can be found to this enormously rich district.

A COSTLY PISTOL.

It Would Make Him Too Popular at His Home.

The Hon. William Wortham is now about as well known in a certain jewelry store in New York as he is in Arizona. It came about this way: Mr. Wortham was in the store one day buying a present for a member of his family, when he noticed a show case filled with splendid jeweled revolvers with silver and gold grips and chased barrels, having precious stones set in to the hilt.

"Lemme see one of these guns," he said to the clerk.

"Which one, sir?"

"The gold one with the big ruby in the handle."

The clerk took it from the case. It was a beautiful piece of workmanship. It was marked $300, and it looked to the clerk as if it were worth more. The Arizona man took it tenderly in both hands and held it admiringly up to the light. Then, drawing himself up to his full height, which was six feet and a half, he rested the revolver barrel upon his elbow, crooked for the purpose. He looked over the sights down the long bore and those persons who saw him involuntarily dodged and one woman screamed.

"Say," said Mr. Wortham, with quiet but intense enthusiasm as he returned the weapon, "if I was to wear a sheet of glass, I have proved this is the best piece of work I have ever seen. It would be falling down on the knees begging to be killed with it."—Philadelphia Press.

THAT VANISHED MADEIRA.

The Melancholy Recollection of a Gastronomic Connoisseur.

It was in Scotland, and at dinner sherry and claret made their appearance on the table. I chanced what I anticipated would be the lesser of the two evils and helped myself to the claret, a dark colored, icy cold liquid, for the introduction of which to many a hitherto blameless middle class household the nation has lately become indebted to Mr. Gladstone. My host hardly touched any wine himself, but he created a great stir in my glass. This was not exactly in the course of business. After the collector had the business man covered with his gun, and at his mercy, he turned his head to look at a man on the street, and he looked back at the business man he found the table had been turned, and he was covered, and at his opponent's mercy. He then retired to the street and the incident was closed. If collectors of customs, like their subordinates, were required

THE EARTH IS FLAT

Ebenzer Breach Gives Reasons to Show It Is Not Round.

Mr. Ebenzer Breach of this town has just written to the presidents of the leading American universities and colleges seeking to enlist them on his side in an argument that is just now exciting the greatest minds in England, namely, the question of the earth's shape, writes a Portsmouth correspondent. Mr. Breach, in his letter to the American men of learning, has prepared what he is pleased to call a list of Breach-loaded arguments, which go to show that, whatever may be said about the theory he expounds, Mr. Breach is without his equal among the first earthites of modern times. So ingenious are the arguments advanced by Mr. Breach that the man who calls on him in a scolding mood comes away rather perturbed in mind to find that he is half persuaded to believe there is something in the flat earth theory after all.

The talk I had with Mr. Breach, supplemented by the information contained in the letters to the American professors, gave me a very complete idea of the subtle reasoning that underlies the easy conversational arguments of Mr. Breach. To give the gist of these arguments, Mr. Breach's idea is that the earth is the central and greatest object of the universe; that the earth is the top of a vast mountain, its mountains and hills forming excrescences and indentations as on the top of a Madeira cake; that this top surface of the monstrous pillar is circular in shape, and that above a mere matter of only 5,000 miles or so distant floats a crystal globe containing and co-extensive with the earth's surface, through which we behold the celestial bodies revolving in one plane. One of the illustrations I send gives an idea of this. The roughly and rapidly improvised circular disc on the table represents the top of the earth, the paper patches are the continents, the piece of mechanism held in the right hand was constructed to show the spiral course from the center to the circumference, like a coiled watch spring, marking the course of the planets. The globe in the center is the sun, and the circumference all the stars. There is perpetual ice at the north center and at the south, the sun performing its course above the intermediate parts.

"And the pillar which constitutes the earth," Mr. Breach, upon what does that rest?"

"Ah!" he replied with a smile, "I cannot say. Job was once humiliated by that question, asked of God, 'Where wast thou when I laid the foundations of the earth?' Whereupon the foundations thereof fastened?" This showing conclusively that the earth had foundations and wasn't a revolving body."

"Ships have sailed round the world?" I queried.

"Quite so. You take a point in my disk of ship, you continued sailing either east or west, and you would reach the point of starting. She would have sailed round the world. Nothing is clearer."

"But the fact that you see a ship's masts at sea before the hull?"

"It proves nothing. Cape Horn can be seen a hundred and twenty miles off the earth was a globe that caps should be a mile and three-quarters out of sight."

"If ships go out to sea sailing over an unshaped ocean," he continued, "they should see the tops of mountains high above the range of vision, as they are constantly seen hull down, owing to angular vision. We can only see distinctly for three miles. By telescope the ship will appear again as a sheet of glass. I have proved this by lightships and other things."

"But at sunrise you see the sun rising out of the water, if you are up early enough, and at sunset it dips below the horizon to the west."

Mr. Breach smiled. "It is the law of perspective," he replied. "Two parallels will meet at a given point."

"How do you account for day and night?"

"Easily enough. When the sun is in the arc of the spiral course, which is above our arc of the flat earth, we have day; when it is in the opposite arc we get night. It is foolish to imagine that the sun goes underneath the earth, as foolish as the false teaching that the earth rotates round the sun."

"The earth is the greatest of all things created," he continued. "It was created first, is immovable, and all other bodies were made for it. The sun was made first of the subsidiary bodies to give light to the world."

"But the sun is of greater proportion?"

"No," he said, laughing at my folly. "Modern astronomers say so, but they are wrong. God created the sun to light the world. Whoever heard of the light being made bigger than the place to be lighted? We never carry a room round the candle, but always the candle round the room."

"The ingenuity and originality of the argument silenced me."

"All pains are flat," continued Mr. Breach. "Take the Sahara and the Pampas for instance. As you go to geology you will find all strata in flat layers, not in convex, as they would be in a curved body. Look at the case of rivers. The Nile drops only one foot in 1,000 miles. Rivers cannot flow uphill, as they would have to do in mounting the curvature of the world."

"But what excited Mr. Breach even more than the globular 'fallacy' was that the earth should be supposed to revolve."

"Why," he exclaimed, "if the world went around the oceans would be whirled away in a moment. If water is dropped on a spinning top it is at once thrown off. According to the false theory ships must have upset down at Australia. Ridiculous! All wells would be emptied of their contents, and Niagara would be upturned and tumble upwards."

"If the earth is revolving at about fifteen miles an hour as is taught," he continued, "why do not balloons make an easy and swift passage to America by rising into the air and waiting till the new world comes round? Instead of that they go slowly with the wind, either in the direction of the supposed revolution of the earth or against it. Astronauts have informed me, too, that they see the surface of the earth as the shape of a saucer, concave, not convex, as it would be if bulged out round. You watch a lark rising. When high up it poises itself in the air, moving neither in one direction nor another. Yet he remains exactly over the field it rose from. If the earth revolved 1,000 miles an hour, that field ought to be 100 miles away in a few minutes."

"Volcanic substances thrown a mile or so into the air fall near the edge of the crater. They come at least, to be left some little way behind. A burning mountain, in fact," Mr. Breach went on, "deny the revolution of the earth, as they would be extinguished by the tremendous velocity, just like a candle swiftly carried through a room. A burning mountain being merely a burning match head compared with the size of the world, ought to be snuffed out with a fraction of a revolution at 1,100 miles an hour."

"The round earthites have to adopt an imaginary axis for their world to revolve on, and what you call the earth revolve upon an imaginary axis. The fact is, the round, revolving world is just as imaginary as their imaginary axis; imaginary cause, imaginary effect."

Among the numerous converts created by Mr. Breach to his theory of a flat earth is no less august a personage than the prince of Wales. His steadfast opponent is Sir Robert Ball, who is preparing to deliver a lecture broadside that he declares will shatter Mr. Breach's flat-earth fortifications to bits. Mr. Breach is so devout a believer in his theory that he is spreading the flat-earth arguments across the American continent. It is likely that the worthy hostilities will become world-wide. Nothing would please Mr. Breach more.—Galveston News.

Unhushful Act of a Man Who Was Driven to Desperation.

"The meanest man on Capitol Hill is a boozemonger of mine," said the man in the lunch room to the story teller. "Being an Uncle Sam's wage list in the $1,400-a-year class, he isn't exactly able to see where his and his'n break into the pink tea bunch—that is, he hasn't enough social aspirations to induce him to stop paying grocery bills, or to cause him to stay awake nights wondering how he's going to beg or bribe a pin-headed legation attaché to lend him distinction by honoring his roof, or to incite him to intrigue for an invitation to a progressive euchre party at a sassy boarding house, where all the ladies who 'assist' tog themselves out in their one pink china silk waist and throw the high handshake.
