MRS. J. J. HODNETT HOME.
Mrs. J. J. Hodnett returned Sunday morning from an extended eastern trip. She left here early in August on a purchasing tour and went as far east as New York City, where she spent a week and laid in a good supply of the best that could be found there in her line of business. From New York she went on to Providence, R. I., where she visited relatives for a short time and returned by way of New York, where she spent two days, doing more buying. She was gone a little over a month and over half that time she spent on the train. She had a very pleasant trip and so far as buying was concerned a very satisfactory one.

JUDGE NEILSEN HOME.

Mr. Johnson was the only Mesa man in the party that missed anything that came his way.

THE NON-OSCULANT HOOSIER.
The order issued by the Indiana state board of health forbidding kissing in the schools gives a greater impetus to Lynch law than anything that has been done by Citizen Dogberry for some time. It will damn a good part of the people of Indiana into eternal blessedness almost instantaneously. "Postoffice," "For the producers of the back numbers of the law," will be gentle osculation. What was obtained heretofore in a formal and accepted manner will now be secured with ease and expedition. The hunters who hunt by stealth and darkly bag great game. For if the law or the regulation prohibits the kiss, Lynch law will assuredly give it place. But what rare wrong has Indiana done herself! Reputedly her poets and "that old sweetheart of mine?" Flouted Eve? Nay, it is not Indiana that has done the deed, but germ-ridden sawbones.

"Yet whoop Jack! kiss Lillian the quicker Till she bloom like a rose, and a fig for the vicar!"

And a fig for the board of health—New York Globe and Advertiser.

INTERNATIONAL ARTISTS.
Performers From Every Quarter of the Globe Are Assembled With the Forepaugh-Sells Circus.

The great Adam Forepaugh and Sells Brothers' enormous shows united offer more sensational novelty in the program of this season than was ever presented in a circus bill before. Leading all of these is the stupendous spectacle of "Fighting the Flames," the most exciting show and thrilling exhibition ever seen under canvas. Nearly all the acrobats, gymnasts, aerialists and riders are imported artists, and make their first appearance in America with these huge shows. The acts are mostly new, and none is commonplace. Each member is properly named a feature. The possibilities of gymnastics and equestrian art were never before so fully demonstrated as they are in the Forepaugh-Sells Brothers' shows. Not one old act is to be seen. The exploits in mid-air, the dashing feats on galloping horses' backs, the marvelous tumbling on the immense stages, the sensational gymnastic spectacles, the equilibrist inventions, the startling contortions and all the other features of athletic skill and perilous art are new conceptions of expert European professionals, and absolutely new to American audiences. The acts take place in three rings, on two stages and a forest of overhead hangings and round about a huge race course a quarter of a mile long. Three hundred peerless artists and performers contribute to make a continuous whirl of ever-changing surprises in the hours' exhibition of these wonderful shows. Among the world-famous gymnasts, acrobats and aerial specialists are the fourteen Volkowskies, the nine Lowandies, five Dunedins troupe, five Fishers, four La Vans, Carnell trio, Harry Lamberkin, Joseph LeFleur, Frederick Zobel ("the human totem"), eight Carnellas, Nelson Berry troupe, the Bartos, Jennette and De Bolla Bros., Nettie Carroll, and the Misses Hill and Millette. Every noted amphitheater and circus in Europe have been drawn upon to make the scenic program of the Forepaugh-Sells Brothers' circus the most unique, exclusive and wonderful in the annals of the circus in Europe and America. The Forepaugh and Sells Brothers' enormous shows will exhibit here one day only, Monday, Oct. 1, and give two performances, afternoon at 2 o'clock and evening at 8 o'clock.

THE AGE OF TREES.
Oldest in Europe—Rings Formed by Annual Growth as Evidence.

There are few questions of natural history more interesting or on which imagination allows itself more faraway flights than the ages of trees. The famous plane in the Aegean island of Cos, which has been the wonder and admiration of centuries, has again challenged attention; on this occasion with a "revised" claim to the age of 2,000 years.

It has been repeatedly visited and described and there can be no doubt as to its being a tree of patriarchal venerability. But the subject of its age has so often been dismissed with the estimate that it must be "at least a thousand years old" that a little startling. The faculty with which this result has been attained is, however, eminently characteristic. In a recent account of the tree attention is called to a suggestion of the late Dean Farrar that both St. Luke and St. Paul had probably rested beneath its shade. The idea is highly picturesque, but it can only be soberly regarded as a piece of off-putting local color.

This, however, is by no means the only tree of its kind which has been similarly endowed with a fancy age. The famous plane near Caplyoe, in Arcadia, is thought to be the identical tree referred to by Pausanias in the second century; and another near Constantinople is considered of equal age. Of course these trees belong to the Oriental branch of the great Platanus family, the planes with which Londoners are so pleasantly familiar being all of the western species.

On such a subject we have still to look to the German forestry department for some of the most carefully ascertained facts and deductions. It is the opinion of those best qualified to judge that there is no European tree which can be proved to be older than 800 years, and that no tree in Germany attains that age in a healthy state. The rings formed by the annual growth of exogenous trees are, of course, the best evidence of their age, but this is only to be obtained before decay's effacing fingers have obliterated the record. Documentary evidence of the existence of a specified tree at a remote date is not necessarily conclusive. Trees are often thus referred to as acknowledged boundary marks, which seems to invest them with an authenticity which they do not really possess. It is not a question of the truth of the record, but it is a fact that young trees have not seldom been planted on the sites occupied by famous predecessors and, standing as it were, in their shoes have come to be taken for them.

A good illustration of such a possibility is afforded by the Rufus Stone in the New Forest. As its name implies and its inscription records, this stone was erected on the spot formerly covered by the oak from which the arrow which slew William Rufus is said to have glanced. The tree is in an advanced state of decay, was in existence in the thirteenth century, but was replaced in 1745 by a stone which was itself restored in 1841.

There are instances in which a young tree has sprung spontaneously at the very foot of its ancestor, and others in which the lusty offspring has taken bodily possession of the hollow trunk and driven its way to the top. It is by no means unlikely that some of our historic oaks have undergone this transformation. They are still a numerous though rapidly diminishing body and their ages can only be assumed from the traditions attached to them. On which ground all that can be said is that they must necessarily be older than the tales they tell. Ages of seven or eight hundred years have undoubtedly been attained by some, as to which there is exceptionally clear documentary evidence.

The famous Tretworth chestnut—supposed to have been formed by the junction of two trees—was mentioned as a boundary of that manor in a record of the year 1125. The Swilley Lawn oak, in Needwood forest is provided by historical documents to have been at least 600 years old, and in 1822 it was far from being in the last stage of decay. At the same date our largest elm was still in existence at Chipstead place in Kent, under which—as shown by historic records—an annual fair was held in the time of Henry V.

An old oak at Tilford, near Farnham, is supposed to have been referred to in a charter granted by Henry de Blois in 1256; and a remarkable tree in Norfolk, long known as the Hethel Thorn, has been presumed to be identical with "the old thorn" given as a boundary mark in a deed of the year 1290. Such a list might be almost indefinitely extended and yet only bring us to the conclusion that the same date is less than a certain age, beyond which there is nothing but an estimate of probabilities. These may be more or less scientific, and experts of course base their calculations upon species, size and the known laws of a tree's growth, modified as these may be presumed to have been by any special conditions.—London Globe.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one constitutional remedy. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a running ear, or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be got out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever, nine cases out of ten are cured by Catarrh Cure, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surface of the Eustachian Tube. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

THE NORMAL OPENING.
Little Except Registering of New Students Done, Yesterday.

The Normal opened yesterday morning but not a great deal was done during the day except registering the new students. There was no general assembly in the morning and the day was devoted almost exclusively to listing the new students, arranging their work and attending to the many other things that usually come up on the first day. In the afternoon there was a faculty meeting for the purpose of preparing written tests for students today and most of today will be taken for that purpose, though there will be a general assembly of old and new students this morning. Entrance examinations will be the chief order of events for the day, however. More students made application for entrance yesterday than on any other first day of the Normal in its history and everything points to the largest attendance the school has ever accommodated. Both dormitories are full and in the young ladies' hall the demand for rooms has been so great that some of the rooms have been fitted up for the occupancy of three young ladies.

NEW MAN IN CHARGE.
C. W. McTae of Kingman arrived here yesterday and will have charge of the New York Store's new grocery department. COOPER-COSNER.
A Quiet Wedding at the Bride's Home Last Evening.

Last evening at the home of the bride's parents, Miss Bertha Cosner was united in marriage to Prince Cooper, Rev. J. C. Chapin, pastor of the Baptist church, officiating. The home was tastefully decorated for the occasion with flowers and greenery and a number of relatives of the contracting parties as well as intimate friends of the young people were present. The bride is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gabe Cosner. She has made Tempe her home all her life and has many friends here who wish her happiness in the future. The groom is a
