AWFUL DEED OF E. B. KNOX

of love and affection between them but since October 8 he has made her swear frequently that she loved him and that her greatest interest in life was to look after him.

Yesterday morning he suggested to her that they go to the ranch and he led her into the back yard, across it and into the barn. He asked her to close the door which she did thinking nothing of it knowing it was one of his foibles. He led her to the farther corner of the barn and again made her swear she loved him. Then he began to cry and she did also. He had his arm around her and began to kiss her very tightly. She noticed him reaching inside his coat but thought he was reaching for a bottle of hot water he always carried in the belief that it kept his enemies away. When he drew out the gun she was frightened but pleaded with him to think what he was doing, trying to control him in that way until she could get the gun away or escape. It did not deter him and she grappled with him for the gun but he was too strong and pressing it against her side he fired and she screamed. He turned the weapon and fired three more shots trying to kill himself but he had partially collapsed and was too nervous to hold it. He then called for help and walked toward the barn door next to the street where he was met by W. L. Vinson, while she secured the gun and managed to walk back to the house, falling once or twice on the way. She carried the revolver in with her and laid it on a chair or bed or something.

Previous to telling this story Dr. Palmer told her he did not think she could recover and called the nurse to listen. She said she had nothing to regret, that she loved him and her greatest anxiety was to know how he would fare if she left him. She also said that he had been carrying a razor for sometime and that while she knew he was not right mentally she had tried to keep the fact as secret as possible taking the chances of her own life.

Dr. Palmer arrived at the house as quickly as possible after the summons and thought at first her life could be saved by an immediate operation, summoned the ambulance, ordered the operating room at the hospital made ready and with a nurse in attendance, and summoned Dr. Plath and Dr. Martin, a friend of the family to report there at once. By the time she reached the hospital her condition did not warrant an operation. There was a mere chance of recovery without it, none with it, so none has taken place.

The single bullet that took effect entered below and a little to the right of the left nipple entering the heart by a half inch, passed through the pleura, lung and probably the liver and the stomach, through the pancreas, and made its exit about the tenth or eleventh interspace to the left of the spinal column. The perforation of the stomach is indicated by the vomiting of a small amount of blood.

MR. KNOX' CONDITION.
Mr. Knox was practically in a state of collapse last night, sullen and asking no questions. He believed he was to be executed today and that the people in the room were the death watch. He refused to take nourishment saying that it was useless in view of his early execution. The slight wound on his left wrist by a pocket knife in an attempt to sever the artery is not serious. His entire condition however is such that the doctor refuses permission to take him to jail. The doctor says it is quite likely that in this case it is the beginning of tubercular spinal meningitis.

Density Sheriff Wayne Davis was summoned about the time Dr. Palmer was and reported in a hurry, taking Knox into custody on arriving, securing the weapon which was one that Mr. Hewins had in the house and which Knox had got hold of when nobody was looking. Knox was delivered to him by W. L. Vinson, S. H. Mitchell and others who arrived early. Vinson was the first man to see Knox meeting him at the street door of the barn and not having heard the shots asking him what was the matter. He replied that he had shot his wife and in reply to a question as to the whereabouts of the gun it is understood he said he left it in the yard. He then led him around to the front of the house where he remained until the officer came. The latter not knowing his condition and thinking him a desperate man handcuffed him but when he collapsed soon after he took the iron off and carried him to the hospital. He spoke but little on the way and rested most of the time doubled up on the officer's knees. Only at times does he now seem to realize what he has done.

Mr. Knox came here from New York City in 1896 and was employed in the Phoenix National bank until 1901 proving an efficient and trusted officer, and holding the position of cashier when he resigned on account of ill health. About that time his first wife died here and since then he has lived here intermittently.
