VARIETY ISLE DRAWS APPRECIATIVE CROWDS

LAMONT, FRIEDLANDER AND TEAL ARE ALL BIG CARDS.

But Nan Halperin, Corinne Carkeek, and the Chorus Are Certainly Helping to Get the Money.

"Variety Isle" drew another large house at the Grand last night and a more responsive audience than the one of Sunday night. The snap and ginger that is put into the Teal productions by Carl Lamont and William B. Friedlander is great. There is something "doing" every moment. The swing and go takes the audience from the start, carries it through to the last finale and brings a return the next night.

The music was better last evening both in chorus work and in the pit. "King Shutezen Pest," finale for the first act was great. Mrs. Gabbie and chorus in, "I Want to Meet a Man so Bad," was the best of the evening. Corinne Carkeek has the best voice of the company and knows how to deliver it. Nan Halperin scored her hit last night in the grand finale, "When You Smile," in Nan's own petite way.

William Friedlander came through better in Neitz Pickleheimer than on Sunday night, and played up to Cash Knight, his secretary. Mae Stead has a quiet way that attracts and will no doubt develop into something stronger in a production where she can have better hold on the reins. Raymond Teal in the olio brought the house down again and again in his colored monologue. He has been here before and Phoenix knows that he handles his line as a head liner.

Wednesday night the bill will be changed to "The Spooners." On Friday night those holding 35 cent seats will be given free admission to the "afterwards" dance.

Not According to Program.

Owing to the extreme diversity in the make-up of a vaudeville bill, in which a dramatic playlet may be preceded by a black-face act and followed by a bobson who walks the tight rope, many are the amusing incidents that occur during performances. When William Hawtry and his company were acting a melodramatic sketch entitled "Compromised," at the Colonial theater, the act following on the bill was a troupe of trained elephants. One night, at the climax in the action of the playlet, when Hawtry, in the role of a rascally husband, was abusing his wife, one of the elephants began to trumpet loudly behind the scenes. The audience began to titter, but Hawtry, trained by experience to cope with such a situation, cried out at the top of his voice: "Our child is crying!" and the audience relished its laugh far more than it would have enjoyed the interrupted dramatic moment.

Mrs. Dressler, according to a story she tells on herself, while appearing in vaudeville, was once similarly followed on the bill by a trick elephant known as "Tessie." She was No. 7 on the bill and the elephant was No. 8. On Monday afternoon when Miss Dressler flounced out upon the stage to do her turn, she was nonplussed at the exceptional wave of laughter that convulsed the audience. She had expected that her 300-pound self in a baby frock would induce considerable audible smiling, but the prolonged heartiness of her reception frankly puzzled her. She glanced down to see whether anything was wrong with her costume, but nothing was. She ran her eyes over the audience, but there was nothing unusual to be seen there. Then her glance fell on the placard at the left of the stage announcing her act and she realized at once the reason for all the laughter. The boy had made a mistake in the sequence of the acts and had headed the weighty Miss Dressler as "Tessie, the world's greatest elephant."—From "The Ten Commandments of Vaudeville," in the July Bostonian.

JEANETTE VAN REYPEN HOUSEHOLD LETTER

The Preparation of Cold Lunches in the Warm Season.

Sandwiches are the chief reliance for any sort of cold lunches, hence are especially in demand at this season of the year. They should be daintily made of the best ingredients, and if they must be kept some time for traveling or other purposes, each sandwich should be wrapped in paraffine paper.

White, graham or brown bread, or small fine grained rolls, such as the Parker House rolls, are best for this use. Whole wheat and rye bread are also excellent. The bread should be at least one day old and of fine grain. A five cent loaf cuts to good advantage. The loaf should have the crust cut off and trimmed to good shape before the slices are cut. The butter should be spread on the loaf, and the bread then cut into even slices about one-eighth of an inch thick. The second slices, used for the upper covering, do not usually need spreading, but must be cut off and fitted over the first slice at once to avoid mismatching rough edges. Next cut the slices into the desired shapes. One cut across the loaf will make two squares, a second cut diagonally will make four triangular sandwiches. For jelly and extra dainty sandwiches the bread is cut very thin and rolled into long oblongs, which are often tied with ribbons, individually or in packages.

The butter for sandwiches should be the best and soft enough to spread easily. Sometimes the butter is worked into the neat paste. What are called "sandwich butters" are frequently used. They are made by rubbing the butter to a cream, combined with anchovy paste, mustard, pate de fois gras, tarragon, chopped parsley, etc.

Poultry, Game, Ham, Poultry, game, ham or any other meat can be pounded to a paste, and mixed with butter seasonings and French or Mayonnaise dressing. Chicken made into a paste, mixed with the mashed yolks of hard boiled eggs with milk or cream, and a little butter and seasoned with salt and pepper and a few drops of onion juice, makes a delicious sandwich.

Fish Sandwiches.

Anchovies, sardines or any fresh boiled fish pounded to a paste with a white or other sauce, or with mayonnaise, with a little chopped pickle added, or shad roe seasoned in the same way, make excellent sandwiches.

Egg Sandwiches.

Hard boiled eggs, cut into slices, sprinkled with salt and pepper and spread on buttered bread with chopped parsley or sliced egg between lettuce leaves with mayonnaise, or hard boiled eggs chopped fine with white sauce placed between layers of buttered bread are all good.

Spanish Sandwiches.

Spread buttered graham bread with mustard, then with a layer of cottage cheese, then with chopped olives spread with mayonnaise.

Raw Beef Sandwiches.

Scrape the raw beef, spread it between thin slices of plain bread, sprinkle with salt and pepper. Place sandwiches on a toaster and put over coals until heated, serve hot.

Brown Bread Sandwiches.

Flake one cupful of cold boiled salmon, and mix it to a paste with one tablespoonful of mayonnaise dressing, adding a more than ordinary portion of salt and cayenne pepper if you like a rather sharp seasoning.

Cut Boston brown bread in thin slices and spread with fish, adding thin slices of cucumber that have been allowed to soak for a short time in cold water salted and made acid with vinegar.

Press a second thin slice of bread over the first and cut in pointed sections like a pie. Garnish the dish with sprigs of parsley.

Lettuce Sandwiches.

Select nice, tender, crisp lettuce, wash and dry well, and make up just before serving. Butter bread on the loaf, slice thin and insert lettuce between the two pieces, adding a little mayonnaise dressing, cream cheese, nuts or other salad material for flavor as desired. The plain lettuce is sufficient, however, and it should be torn not cut to fith the sandwich.

Cucumber Sandwiches.

Are made after the same method. The cucumbers should be small and sliced very thin, and should be drained dry after they have soaked ten minutes in cold water. Mayonnaise or French dressing may be used for these sandwiches.

Cheese and Nut Sandwiches.

Take equal parts grated cheese and English walnuts pounded to a meal. Moisten with sweet cream or olive oil, season with salt, and spread between thin slices of buttered bread.

No. 2.—Grate or chop fine half a cup of pecans. Beat half a cup of Edam cheese and mix thoroughly. Add half a salt spoon of paprika and salt to taste. Spread paste on single slices of thin bread cut into squares or triangles.

RACE AROUND LONG ISLAND.

New York, July 19.—One of the most interesting contests of the year is the race around Long Island, which will be held under the auspices of the Colonial Yacht Club of Manhattan. The contest is for cruising power boats and the start and finish line will be off the anchorage of the organization on the Hudson river. The start will be made early in the morning of July 31. The boats are expected to finish some time on Sunday, so business men will lose very little time by competing in the contest.

WEATHER TODAY.

Washington, D. C., July 19.—Forecast for Arizona: Partly cloudy with local showers Tuesday and Wednesday.

Concerning Currants.

The best currant in the world for the table is the white grape, and it is also one of the most prolific, while the shape of the bush is nearly perfect. I do not know where this variety originated, but I have it in bearing this forty years. A seedling named White Perfection is said to be even better, but that is not yet proved. White grape is finer for jelly but its acid is so delicate and its flavor so high as to make it pre-eminently the currant for the table.

The points we have to look after in planting currants are: (1) Form and growth of the bush; (2) size of the berry and quantity borne by each bush; (3) flavor of the berry. In 1907 and 1908 I made carefully compared data on these points. White grape will yield on a mature bush from four to six quarts. White Dutch will yield from three to four quarts; Red Dutch the same or better. Fay will average four quarts, and sometimes touch five; while Versailles, a currant very similar to Fay, will do about the same. London Market, handsome in the bush, will rarely yield over four quarts. Victoria and Prince Albert will not do as well. My own seedling, Red Giant, went as high as six and seven. Rarely White Grape reached the figure of Red Giant. These two stand at the front in prolific bearing, with fruit of about the same size and very nearly equal quality. In form of bush and growth they are once more close rivals. I place them emphatically at the head of all currants that I have tested. Red Giant, however, is a stouter bush, standing from five to seven feet high, and having a very perfect spread of its limbs.—E. P. Powell, in The Outing Magazine for July.
