

LOST IN THE WOODS
NEAR GRAND CANYON

THE FLIGHT OF TWO WAITRESSES OF EL TOVAR HOTEL.

One Was Rescued, but the Other Was Still Missing at Last Advice.

C. T. Hirst, with his wife and four children, have returned from a very pleasant outing at the Grand Canyon. They made various excursions along the rim, through a very beautiful country, a part of which is heavily wooded, and also made the trip down the canyon. Like all preceding travelers, they report the scenery as incomparable with anything else on earth that they have ever seen.

During their stay, or toward the last of it, an incident occurred that they are very much concerned in learning the sequel to, as it may have resulted in the death of a young woman who was in the employ of the El Tovar hotel. Last Saturday afternoon two of the waitresses at the hotel, whose names they did not learn, secured Indian ponies for a ride along the rim of the canyon. They went further than they had intended, became separated and then both got lost. When they failed to return on time in the evening, rescue parties were sent in search of them. One of the parties found one of the girls about 1 o'clock Sunday morning. She was unharmed, but was frantic with fright and could give little clue to the whereabouts of the other one. The second girl had not been found when the Hirst family left for home Monday morning, notwithstanding there were numerous rescue parties searching for her and doing all that could be done to find her. The hotel management was greatly exercised and doing all in its power for her relief, offering a large reward to any one who would find her.

The rescued girl said that they had gone along the rim or near it through the woods toward Dripping Springs, when they came to a little gulch or canyon. One of the ponies jumped across it, but the other demurred and would not leap. That separated them and they went along some distance trying to find a place where they could get together again. They finally became separated and that is the last she had heard of her companion.

The rescued girl was suffering more from fright than anything else, for, though she was hungry, she had not been gone long enough to experience any harm from her fast. Mr. Hirst said he did not see her after her return, but had talked with those who did. It is not likely they suffered for water, as it could probably be obtained from the little side canyons if they knew where to look for it, and the weather in that locality is cool. In fact, the nights would probably be uncomfortably cool in the open without protection. The other girl, however, even if no other accident had overtaken her, she probably would not be in a deplorable condition from lack of food and rest before now, unless some of the search parties have rescued her. When Mr. Hirst left the country was being scoured by both whites and Indians, but if she had succeeded in working her way out, it is quite possible they might pass close to her and yet fail to find her.

A LOT OF TROUBLE
ABOUT A DAIRY COW

How a Texas Live Stock Inspector Started Something.

Unless Dr. J. C. Norton, territorial veterinarian, gets word to the contrary very shortly, he has got to take the train for a town in western Texas to give expert official and professional testimony in the case of a cow which has not got tuberculosis. The case would be amusing if it were not so serious to those concerned and so much of a nuisance to other people not materially concerned.

In September a year ago a man named Edgar shipped a dairy cow from a point in Oklahoma to his ranch near Cochise station in Cochise county, where he is engaged in dairy farming. When the animal reached the Texas town she was held up by the local live stock inspector, along with others, on the suspicion that she had tuberculosis. The inspector alleges that he applied the tests and found a diseased condition, whereupon he refused to permit the cow to proceed. The railroad authorities wired to Dr. Norton asking if the cow could be brought to Arizona. The doctor, knowing that the detention was at the instance of an inspector, wired back that if she had a certificate of health when shipped to let her come as he could not stop her anyway until she reached the territorial line.

The cow had the certificate and was delivered and the Texas inspector began proceedings in the United States court against Mr. Edgar and the railroad company for shipping a diseased animal. The doctor heard no more of the matter until a month ago, when Mr. Edgar sent for him to come and examine the cow. He did so and found her without disease. Since then she has produced a fine calf and the Edgar family is using the milk and regards it as fine. Nevertheless the case in the United States court must be disposed of and the doctor has been summoned to appear and give testimony, along with Mr. Edgar, who is a poor man and who dislikes being put to such expense.

The doctor has learned since that the inspector was merely a temporary official acting for the regular inspector who was out of the state at the time. He cannot understand how he secured a reaction on the tuberculin test which he is supposed to have used, unless he did not know how to use it properly. Anyhow he is willing to swear that the cow is now a perfectly healthy animal.

MAJESTIC.
Miss Jane Wenzler-Urban, the clever sourette secured for the new Majestic show, which opens Thursday, September 29, according to Los Angeles papers, is making a big hit in "Strongheart." The bill now on at the Burbank, Willis West was certainly fortunate in securing this little lady for "Dogg" Echlin's big musical show, and Leroy Kinslow's new singing and dancing specialty makes a sure hit. Tonight will be the last chance to see Jimmie Lee as "Casey, the Fiddler," and in addition to the regular performance the last chorus girls' contest of this company will take place. Great rivalry exists among the girls and this contest promises to be a hot one. Thursday night, "Too Many Wives."

GRAND.
"Casey, the Fiddler," is drawing big houses. The opening farce, "A Happy Home," is full of hoary laughs from start to finish. Seven big musical numbers were introduced during the show, and Leroy Kinslow's new singing and dancing specialty makes a sure hit. Tonight will be the last chance to see Jimmie Lee as "Casey, the Fiddler," and in addition to the regular performance the last chorus girls' contest of this company will take place. Great rivalry exists among the girls and this contest promises to be a hot one. Thursday night, "Too Many Wives."

COLISEUM.
The new bill, as usual, was witnessed by two packed houses, and each act brought shouts of applause and many encores. The first number, Al Wheeler, English comedian, was well received and was followed by Lillie and Adams, in a comedy turn entitled "In Politics." This act was full of excellent comedy and was called back time after time. This act has spent many years in vaudeville and also in the circus, and Mr. Adams comes from a family of performers dating back a long time. The last number was the La Salle Trio, presenting a novelty acrobatic act, introducing some very clever tumbling and acrobatic work. There will be a new line of pictures on tonight which will give an excellent bill for this evening.

MRS. KIRKLAND AND DAUGHTER RETURN.—Mrs. Kate Kirkland has returned home from the east, accompanied by her daughter, Miss Bertha Kirkland, who has been studying music in Paris during the last year, and whom Mrs. Kirkland met in New York City. Mrs. Kirkland's trip was primarily her annual tour of the eastern markets as buyer for the millinery department of the New York store. She visited all the large millinery centers and purchased a larger and better stock than ever before, which will be on display as soon as the season opens.

It contains over 38,000 words and phrases in common use among the English-speaking peoples, and more than 800 instructive pictorial illustrations, definitive aids to the comprehension of words, scientifically accurate and artistically exact, which were made especially for the work. The high standing of the Editor, JAMES CHARLES FENWICK, L.H.D., is a sufficient guaranty for the accuracy, comprehensiveness, and general excellence of the work. In his treatment the Editor has kept constantly in mind the necessity of giving in the simplest form the Orthography, Pronunciation, Definition, and Derivation of all words that are not self-defining.

What some noted authorities say about it.
President Martin Kellogg, M.A., LL.D., University of California, Berkeley, Cal.: "An enterprise which can not fail to meet with wide acceptance. I approve especially the full account of derivations."
Gen. James Grant Wilson, President of the American Authors' Guild, and well-known Author-Editor: "Superior to any similar volume that has yet come under my notice. I fail to see any feature of the work that can be commended."
The St. Louis Globe-Democrat, St. Louis, Mo.: "For its size the work is very complete and inclusive; the definitions are vital and inspiring to new thought."
The Philadelphia Times, Philadelphia, Pa.: "The pronunciation is clearly marked, and there is much condensed information in etymology. The illustrations, also, are remarkably good."
