What James J. Hill says about Saving

"If you want to know whether you are destined to be a success or a failure in life you can easily find out. The test is simple, and it is infallible:

"Are you able to save money?"

"If not, drop out. You will lose. You may think not, but you will lose as sure as you live. The seed of success is not in you."

We feel that way about it, too. We believe that the best employe is the one who saves.

By this we do not mean that you must save a large part of your earnings. But surely when you are offered an opportunity to bank as little as twenty-five cents a week in a good, strong bank, you can easily give yourself the chance of starting the saving habit in this easy way.

TRUSTEES' ELECTIONS IN SPECIAL ROAD DISTRICTS

NO. 1 ROAD DISTRICT TRUSTEES ELECTED The trustees of Special Road District No. 1 are: George A. Onley, one year. L. S. Thompson, two years. S. G. Whitten, three years.	M'DOWELL ROAD'S NEW BOARD CHOSEN The trustees of Special Road District No. 2 are: Wm. Crighton, one year. R. C. Stanford, two years. W. K. James, three years.

At yesterday's election of two trustees in Special Road District No. 1, L. S. Thompson, of the corner of Central and Virginia avenues, was selected for the short term, and S. G. Whitten, who lives on Osborn road west of Central avenue, received the long term. The reason there were two vacancies to be filled was because Colonel E. M. Lamson's successor last year failed to qualify, and he served the extra year.

The vote was light, due probably to the state of the weather and the fact that there was no competition for the offices. Among those who received scattering votes were Gordon Tweed and Colonel Lamson, the reand his opponent, Mr. Thrift, 12.

The election was held at the Hurley residence, and only a few members from the immediate vicinity voted.

The importance of the McDowell road was never better shown than during the rain storms of the last few days. Practically all of the traffic from the northwest and all the Mesa and Tempe traffic was diverted over the McDowell road. Attention was forcibly called to the poor condition of the three blocks next to Central avenue, when an average of ten cars a day were stuck in that unimproved stretch after the mud had begun to dry up a bit. The rest of the McDowell road has been well cared for by the district and by the city. Pavement and oiled road stretches make it one of the two roads in the county that are passable in wet weather.

The last half mile, however, is within Road District No. 1, and that district has concentrated its attention on the Central avenue boulevard to the exclusion of all feeders.

WHAT JOHN BROWN SAYS OF THE REV. H. B. DELAYE

John E. Brown, who conducted the union evangelist campaign in Phoenix last March, says concerning Delays and Pfaffenberger, who are to begin revival meetings at the First Methodist Episcopal church today:

"Evangelists Delays and Pfaffenberger are not an experiment. Through many campaigns and often under the most trying circumstances these men have demonstrated their fitness for the field. From every source—from pulpit and press—there has come a constant flow of congratulatory and commendatory material. In planning this advance announcement for the field, we find it difficult to know what matter to choose and what to omit. These men have filled several engagements for us—union engagements—and every engagement has resulted in far-reaching results, and in heartfelt thanks from the pastors for securing such reliable and efficient help. The success of these men has been uniform. The fields in which these men have labored are cordial for their return. Delays is in a class all to himself. He isn't sensational, shuns the appearance of vulgarity, and has no hobbies. He is clean, intellectual, aggressive and a constant mine of happy surprises. He draws men, hold men and wins men. Withal, and most important still, he knows God.

Mr. Pfaffenberger is a happy second to Delays. They fit each other and together they fit the field. Prof. Pfaffenberger knows how to sing and knows how to get others to sing. He is a gentleman of the first water, and impresses people at once with his clearness and consecration.

These men are destined for the top. They have the gift for leadership in things religious, and their

GERMAN PLAN OF CAMPAIGN

Evolved Three Years Ago and Contemplated a Turkish Menace Against British Possessions in Egypt and the East

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 2.—Dr. Rohrbach, one of the Berlin professors, wrote as far back as 1911, in a book entitled "The Baghdad Railway," published in Berlin at the time mentioned—One factor will determine the possibility of Germany emerging victorious from a war with England, and that is whether we shall succeed or fail in placing England in a perilous position. A direct invasion of England across the North sea is altogether out of the question; the project of a German attack on English soil is a fantastic dream. It is incumbent upon us to devise a means of striking England in a vulnerable point, and in our quest for such a means we reach a sphere of action in which the relations between Germany and Turkey and the position of Turkey herself become supremely important to German foreign policy. There is only one place where England can be attacked and mortally wounded and that is Egypt.

The loss of Egypt would imply for England not only the end of her dominion over the Suez Canal and of her associations with India and the Far East, but would probably also signify the loss of her possessions in Central and East Africa. The conquest of Egypt by a Moslem power, such as Turkey, would, moreover, jeopardize England's domination over her sixty million Mohammedan subjects in India, and would also be detrimental to England's relations with Afghanistan and Persia. Turkey, however, cannot dream of reacquiring Egypt until and unless she becomes mistress of a rich net of railways in Asia Minor and in Syria, and until, with the progress of the railway in Baghdad, she finds herself in a position to resist an attack of England from the direction of Mesopotamia.

"The Turkish army must be increased and improved, and Turkey must strengthen her economic and commercial position. The stronger Turkey becomes the graver will be the danger that she will constitute for England. The policy in Turkey, which is being so eagerly pursued by Germany at the present time has no other object than to secure for ourselves the support and co-operation of the Ottoman Empire in face of the existing danger of a war with England."

STATE OFFICIALS FILE OFFICE OATHS

Governor Hunt, Secretary of State Osborn, Supreme Court Justices and Others Will Be Sworn in Tomorrow.

All the state officials chosen at the recent election, whether re-elected or taking office for the first time, have filed their oaths of office with Secretary of State Sidney P. Osborn, and will be sworn in tomorrow at the state house. The law requires that each official file his oath at least one day before taking office.

The oath of office will be administered to Governor Hunt and Secretary of State Osborn tomorrow by Chief Justice Franklin of the supreme court. The secretary of state administers the oath to the other officials, with the exception of the justices of the supreme court, one of whom administers the oath to the others. The governor will take the oath in the supreme court chambers at 10 o'clock.

Just how long each justice of the supreme court will serve will be determined tomorrow, when members of the state's highest tribunal meet to cast lots as to length of term. The one receiving the short term thereupon becomes chief justice.

Governor Hunt, who went to Florence New Year's day, will return this afternoon in order to take his oath of office tomorrow.

unusual success, thus far, but fulfills the prophecy of their friends, that these men are called and equipped for large service in the wide field of evangelism.

HOW TO DANCE THE MODERN DANCES

By John Murray-Anderson

(Author of "Social Dancing of Today," Frederick Stokes & Co.)

Having passed through the varied stages necessary to its growth, ballroom dancing is probably in its very best form now.

The writer has seen just as good dancers in Phoenix as in the large cities of the east, but their style—that which immediately followed the banishment of the "Turkey Trot"—is as obsolete as the Dodo.

The dances of Today are simpler and in better taste. They are as easily learned as the "Two-Step" and the "Waltz." Familiarity with them will add greatly to the enjoyment of dancing and open up unlimited possibilities in what is not the least, but one of the greatest of arts.

To standardize the dances in a community of this size would be an easy matter, and to set a standard in Phoenix would be to set a standard for the whole state.

In offering these lessons the author makes no claim to infallibility. He has tried to embody in them the true character of each of the dances as determined by time—the only Supreme Standardizer, and to describe as simply and accurately as he is able, the steps and variations which prevailing fashion has ordained.

FIRST LESSON

Technique
Very few students of social dancing know anything about technique and although there are plenty of good teachers, many of them also are without technical training. Knowledge of the following rudiments of the Art of Dancing is essential.

The Position of the Feet in Dancing

FIRST POSITION—Stand with heels together and toes turned out at an angle of 45 degrees. The classic Ballet prescribes an angle of 90 degrees.

SECOND POSITION—Separate the feet by sliding the right foot to the side.

THIRD POSITION—Draw the heel of the right foot in front until it touches the instep of the left.

FIFTH POSITION—Draw the right foot back until the heel touches the toe of the left foot.

All dance steps are built upon these five positions and only the movement that can be reconciled to one or other of them is above criticism. As an illustration the student is asked to consider the dancing position which applies to walking. Each of the new dances has its walking step, which should always be executed in the Fourth Position. Ninety per cent of the dancers one sees in a ball room "waddle" along with their feet in an exaggerated Second Position.

Either written or verbal descriptions of the dances can only be made explicit by use of the accepted designation. They apply as much to the "One Step" as to the most intricate "enchainment" of a Pavlova. Constant reference will be made to them in the course of these lessons.

Relative Positions of Partner in Ball Room Dance

CLOSED POSITION—That in which the individuals face one another with shoulders parallel. The man holds the lady's right hand in his left, and his right arm is around her waist.

NOTE—The man's left and the lady's right arms may be held either straight out on line with the shoulders, or bent at the elbows and held high above the heads in the manner which has become popular with the introduction of the "Tango" and "Maxixe."

For dances other than the Brazilian variety the author recommends the straight arm as being in better taste.

SIDE POSITION—That at which the partners still face to face and holding as before, are placed one by the side of the other.

OPEN POSITION—That in which the partners are side by side, but both facing the same way.

CLOSED STEPS—Are those executed in a "Closed Position."

SIDE STEPS—Are those executed in a "Closed Position." this age of Suffrage but it may be accomplished by determination.

OPEN STEPS—Are those executed in an "Open Position."

As a general rule a dance is started on the man's left and the lady's right foot.

Most of the steps call for a gliding movement in which the fall of the foot alone passes lightly over the floor. Weight is not always a question of avoidance. Shuffling with heel down creates heaviness in a dancer.

Award Dip have no place in a play by any.

Choreography. Preliminaries disposed of, we are ready to study the dances themselves. The first to be considered is extremely bad dancing form. It is essential to the successful will be the standardized "Hesitation progression of any dance that the Waltz." It will be fully dealt with in next week's lesson.
