LEGISLATURE MARKS

roduced by Mr. Newbury of Cochise, for the appropriation of $1000 for Herman J. Parley and $120 for Mrs. K. Holmes with interest from May 12, 1914, when the incidents occurred that put them in need of relief. It is recited in the bill that on that date Parley was the owner of nine head of well-bred cattle and Mrs. Holmes, the owner of three head all of which were in pasture. They were poisoned and killed by fifty pounds of white lead which had been placed in the pasture by two male inmates of the Fort Grant state industrial school.

A bill will be introduced today by Mr. McLean of this county providing for the burial of indigent dead members of the military forces of the United States who served in the civil war, the Spanish war or the Philippine insurrection, if the dead leave no surviving relatives in the state or if their relatives are unable to afford them decent burial. The membership of the indigent in such organizations as the G. A. R., the United Spanish War Veterans or the Army of Santiago shall be evidence to the board of supervisors that they are entitled to such burial.

The House Whole Committee
 The proceedings of the day in the house were ended by a session of the committee of the whole in which a half dozen measures were considered and sent on their way. House bill 23 to transfer to the state historical fund $3000 which had been set aside by the first state legislature for the purchase of a work called "The North American Indian," but which was never used for that purpose, was favorably reported.

Similar action was taken on a house bill providing for the renewal of judgments. A bill limiting the beginning of personal actions within a period of five years was also favorably reported.

Similar action was taken on the bill of Mr. Flannagan authorizing superintendents of Indian schools and Indian agents to issue marriage licenses and perform the marriage ceremony. The licenses are to be issued to the agents in bulk by the county authorities of the counties in which schools or agencies are located. Credit shall be given the superintendent or agent when they remit the fees for such service or return the licenses unused.

The Senate
 In the morning session the senate, passed the Drachman bill authorizing cities and towns to aid chambers of commerce or other commercial bodies by appropriating 1-2 of 1 per cent of the valuation of the city or town for the encouragement of immigration or for advertising the resources of the community or for encouraging new industries. Two bills, duplicates of measures brought into the house the day before were introduced.

The Committee of the Whole
 In the morning the board of public welfare bill, to replace the board of control was considered in the committee of the whole and was recommended to take the regular course. That does not necessarily mean that the bill will ultimately pass but generally such an order is construed to be similar to a favorable report. The bill developed no serious opposition or criticism.

children were smothered to death in subterranean chambers, where they had hidden when the tent colony burned.

Lawson said the only reason the operators granted the miners anything was because "they had seen the handwriting on the wall, placed there by the unions."

As Lawson testified he held in his hand copies of twelve Colorado mining laws. Each of these, he said, had been broken many times by the operators. The operators realized, he asserted, that the unions not only would force them to obey the statutes, but would prevent them from importing vast numbers of workers from southern Europe who had never seen a mine before, then paying them what they pleased, working them as long as they pleased, and keeping them in a state of poverty for the rest of their lives.

Jerome Green, secretary of the Rockefeller Foundation, formerly a member of the personal staff of Rockefeller, Sr., occupied the witness stand at the morning session and part of the afternoon. He defined the practices and policies of the Rockefeller Foundation and the aims and ideas of its founders. He admitted the foundation could within the scope of the charter granted by the New York legislature do many things incompatible with the "general interests of the public" such as conducting a propaganda against organized labor or a campaign against compensation for workmen. But he declared there was not even a remotest possibility that such a thing would ever happen.

Questioned about living conditions in the Colorado mine regions, Mrs. Dominick said the prices of goods at the stores of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company were higher than elsewhere and for that reason miners frequently went to nearby towns for supplies. She asserted that one miner was discharged when he was caught with a trunk full of supplies purchased outside the mining camps.

Mrs. Dominick described the alleged shooting at women and children during the trouble between miners and the militia. She said the militiamen had demanded from one of the miner leaders named Tikas, the production of a certain miner who was not in the camp. Shortly after Tikas so informed them, the witness said, she heard a bomb exploded and looking out of her tent she saw militia men riding toward them.

Tikas told us to scatter as the militia had machine guns," the witness testified.

"About fifty or sixty of us, women and children were standing on a hill when they started to shoot at us."
