

CANADA AND ALL OTHER BRITISH DOMINIONS ARE NOT FOR ANY INCONCLUSIVE PEACE

(Republican A. P. Leased Wire)
NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—In an address tonight at the 119th dinner of the New England Society of New York, Sir Robert Laird Borden, premier of Canada, said that while Canada hopes that the events of the next year will lead to an abiding peace, she is "fully determined to spare no effort to make triumphant the cause of the allies—the freedom of the world."

Recounting what sacrifices Canada has already made, Premier Borden said it today stood ready to make still more "firm in the conviction that humanity's struggle against the enthronement of force above right will not be in vain."

Premier Borden was cheered enthusiastically throughout his address, which was the first delivered by him in the United States since the outbreak of the war.

After a toast to President Wilson was drunk amid cheering, President Francis Lynde Stetson, introduced former Senator Theodore E. Burton of Ohio, who spoke on "our fathers' days and ours." Senator Burton reviewed the history of New England from the days of the Pilgrims.

After reverting to his own intimate associations with New England life and the part that Canadians played on the side of the Union during the civil war days, Premier Borden told how Canada had redeemed the pledge made to the United Kingdom at the outbreak of the present war.

"We take part in this struggle because the destiny of the world wide British commonwealth is our destiny," said the premier, "because as one of its greatest nations we are determined to preserve our power and influence and because we conceive that as one of those nations, there is for us the highest opportunity to advance the cause of humanity and civilization, to do our part worthily in the world's war."

Canada's authorized force is now 250,000 men, the speaker said, and he added that more than 200,000 are already under arms. He then referred to the generosity of the Canadians in contributions to Red Cross, Belgian Relief and other funds, and the success of the recent $50,000,000 loan as conclusive evidence that the Canadian people were determined with the mother country "to carry on the struggle to a successful conclusion."

It was the first public address delivered by Sir Robert in the United States since the beginning of the war, and it follows closely upon his visit to England and France for official conferences as to Canadian participation in the conflict. After reviewing his own intimate associations with New England life and ideas, he outlined the relations of Canada to the European war. He said: "I do not propose to argue or affirm the justice of our cause. The great controlling facts have been firmly established and they are widely known. The Canadian people are impressed with the most earnest and intense conviction that our cause is just and it will prevail. Undoubtedly it concerns the power, influence and destiny of our empire. But we are convinced beyond all question that this conflict is of vastly wider dimensions and that the determination must exercise a profound influence upon the world's future."

"All the lives sacrificed and all the treasure expended in the struggle will have been in vain if humanity must still endure so intolerable a restraint added to the staggering burden which this conflict will itself entail upon the warring nations. Such a peace would be the result of an inconclusive peace. The people of the British dominions are animated by a stern resolve that there shall be no such outcome. There is for the future peace of the world that we fight to the end."

"It shall be to the honor of the British race as long as the world is remembered that the principle upon which is founded the governance of our empire bound together all its far-flung dominions and all its people of various and divergent race, language, creed and ideal, by ties which proved even stronger in war times than in peace, liberty and upon the principles of the treaty and the theory of automatic government applied wherever conditions permit and to the most generous extent that experience can possibly suggest. This is the supreme reason the empire is strong in the day of trial."

The outbreak of the war found Great Britain utterly unprepared for military operations upon the tremendous scale which has been found necessary. Communication between our scattered possessions is hampered, our navy and our air force are untrained and untested. The fighting power of the empire is concentrated almost wholly in the navy. Apart from every other consideration the absolute lack of adequate military preparation for this war speaks for itself and unanswerably proclaims that the dominions which owe allegiance to the British crown earnestly desired to avoid war.

"Such indeed was the ideal of the Canadian nation; but in common with the empire spirit of our people which tested proved worthy of their highest tradition. Within six weeks after the outbreak of war a force of nearly 25,000 men was assembled, thoroughly armed, equipped and organized in every branch of military service. Its journey across the Atlantic in a great armada of steamships began on October 2, 1914. Nearly 100,000 Canadian soldiers have since gone overseas and during the past ten months they have poured across the ocean at the rate of more than 2,000 per week. Our authorized force is now 250,000 and more than 200,000 already are under arms."

"The war national spirit has been adequately responsive to the nation's needs for courage and devotion. I point to the Canadian at Ypres, at Passchendaele, at Arras, at Vimy. For self-sacrifice, I see the women yielding their dearest at the country's call and concentrating their lives to all missions of mercy. For the beautiful generosity of our people I need but mention $6,000,000 for the patriotic fund, $2,000,000 for the British Red Cross Society, $2,500,000 for our own Red Cross and kindred societies, more than $2,000,000 in other patriotic contributions from provinces and individuals; $5,000,000 in food products and other supplies useful for war purposes placed by the dominion and the provinces at the disposal of the British government. Men of great financial experience believed that subscriptions by the public at large to the recent $50,000,000 loan would probably reach $10,000,000 and could not exceed $15,000,000. The public added $70,000,000 to the $10,000,000 and the total subscriptions ran close to $110,000,000."

"Realizing to the full the tragedy of this war, we in Canada pray that the whirlwind of this may weave the mighty exodus of the next twenty months into an abiding peace. But there is with us the most intense conviction that the cause for which we fight does truly concern the freedom of the world and that there can be no enduring peace until it fully prevails. Interwoven with this conviction is an equally intense and unflinching determination to spare no effort and shrink from no sacrifice necessary to make so great a cause triumphant. Finally, we have faith that this war heralds the regeneration of our civilization, founded, as it is said upon so many centuries of aspirations, endeavors and sacrifices; faith also that the humanity's struggle against the enthronement of force above right will not be in vain."

TRYING TO MAKE AN ALIBI FOR MAT SCHMIDT

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Dec. 22.—The testimony of seven witnesses was offered today by the defense in the trial of Matthew A. Schmidt, on a charge of murder, to controvert evidence of the prosecution which tended to show that Schmidt rented and used the launch Pastime to obtain the dynamite alleged to have destroyed the Los Angeles Times building, October 1, 1915. It was this explosion which cost the lives of twenty persons, that resulted in Schmidt's indictment.

Douglas Burroughs, of Oakland, one of the owners of the Pastime, testified that he saw and talked with two men who came to rent the launch September 19, 1915, and that he talked with the larger of the two about an hour, explaining to him how to run the boat. He stated he was "positive" neither of the men was Schmidt. He said the larger of the two gave his name as Perry, which was the alias declared by the prosecution to have been used by Schmidt at that time. The witness said the man with "Perry" gave his name as J. R. Brier, the name said to have been assumed by J. B. McNamara, who afterward confessed to placing the dynamite under the Times building.

This testimony was introduced to offset that of E. Howard Baxter, the other owner of the launch, who testified for the prosecution that Schmidt "resembled" one of the two men whom he dealt with in connection with the renting of the boat.

Paul J. Stupersky, who conducted a cafe at Sausalito on San Francisco bay in 1915, and his wife, Mrs. Emma Stupersky, of two men visiting their place about September 20, 1915, in the launch Pastime. Both declared Schmidt was not one of the men. Stupersky stated that they changed the name of the boat to the "Teetotal" while at Sausalito. This was in line with the theory of the prosecution that the purchasers of the dynamite disguised the launch in this manner.

Frank Horin, Thomas J. Corah, Frank Miskel and David Williams, who were employed along the San Francisco water front, testified to seeing the Pastime in charge of one man at the Howard street and the Harrison street wharves one night late in September, 1915. All were certain that Schmidt was not the man. Witnesses for the prosecution identified Schmidt several days ago as the man who brought the launch to the Howard Street wharf the afternoon of September 24, 1915.

The testimony of Mrs. Maud King Stewart, a prosecution witness, that she knew Schmidt in Los Angeles in the summer of 1915 under the name of E. A. Perry, was contradicted today by H. Mooney, of this city. Mrs. King testified today that she met Schmidt "Perry" at a cottage occupied by Anton Johannsen, a labor leader of Los Angeles. She said she accompanied Mooney to the home. Mooney testified today that Schmidt was not there and also that there was no man there by the name of Perry.

The defense assailed the reputation of Donald Vosa Meserve, the witness who testified for the prosecution that Schmidt made admissions to him relative to the part he was alleged to have played in the destruction of the Times building. This was done through the testimony of Mrs. Catherine, Mrs. Anna Stone Lewis Hattman, Ami Learner and Michael Bombard, all of whom testified that Meserve's reputa-
