"Telephone" shouted the office boy, "Telephone!"
"Who's here?"—Is that Ford, squeaked a female voice.

"Yes marm! Yes marm!" I answered, thinking an order for $1500 worth of furniture was next in line. "What can I do for you?" "I want to see you," came the reply, "and I've got a little settlement to make"—Right there I saw my finish, just as a dying sinner sees his long lists of commission and omission line up, "ere he quits this land of suffering"—I don't really know whether an electric spark emanates from one world, and starting along a wire passes entirely through the anatomy of the intended victim, but this I do know: I recognized that voice, and notwithstanding the chilly frost which circled throughout my system, I stammered, "I'm just leaving for Prescott on pressing business"—"Plenty of time before the train," she joyfully replied, and I'll be up and see you"—"With you?"—"Possibly, but will be from the rear marm, or I miss my guess." "Marsh!" I yelled. "I'm off for Prescott; there'll be a lady here shortly looking for me. Tell her I have to take the car to Mesa, and hurried off on an auto."

"Give her anything she asks for, with a promise to have sent to her on demand, and say, 'old boy, she's got a gun'—I don't think she carries it where ladies usually carry change, but if you will find out, I'll pledge myself your lasting devoted servant." I heard about it afterward—"She came, she saw, she conquered"—"Marsh, I'm all right. Now she says she couldn't give a cool pair of his breath for my whole frame."—"Barkis is willin'!"
