TWO ARRESTED FOR INNER TUBE THEFTS

George Smith and Robert Gill, two young men, were arrested yesterday by officers Wilkerson and Duncan. The men were found loitering on the railroad tracks near Eleventh street, and were taken to the police station and booked on charge of larceny.

They are suspected of having been the parties who entered a number of local garages in the city on Sunday evening and stole nearly fifty inner tubes from automobile tires. A number of the rubber tubes were found in their possession. All of the auto owners who lost tubes in the raid of Sunday night are asked to visit the men in the city prison, and if possible, identify the men or some of the property found in their possession.

All of the garages entered were private ones, and among those who have reported thefts of inner tubes are: J. W. Abbott, A. E. Hackett, D. D. Conbran, James Caster, S. T. McDowell, Joseph Thalheimer and W. P. Wood.

According to the statement of Mrs. J. W. Abbott, the thieves must have worked with a great deal of cunning, for the lady states that she slept on a screened porch that was located but a few feet from the family's garage, and that she heard no sounds during the night that would indicate that the garage was being burglarized.

The men were preparing to sell the rubber to a junk dealer and had removed the brass valves from the tubes.

ALL PROSPERITY BASED ON THRIFT

Individual Thrift to be Developed by the Annual Observance of Thrift Day February Third

Much is now being said on the subject of preparedness—preparedness for war, with all of its horrors, distress and human loss. A measure of preparedness for individual happiness, content, old age and the future welfare of dependent ones is equally, if not more, important. If we are impressed with the idea of preparedness for a possible emergency, we will be all the more impressed with the necessity of making provision for those things which fall to the lot of all individuals who continue to live.

Now is the opportune time for every individual to enlist in the movement for a thriftier nation. Our country has entered upon an era of prosperity which promises to surpass any we have hitherto enjoyed, and while good times in themselves do not of necessity mean that thrift will be practiced to a larger extent, yet it is at such times that individuals are better able to give time and attention to the devising of ways and means for their continuance.

The plan of designating February 3 as "Thrift day" has as its foundation the idea of turning the constructive thought of every individual, irrespective of his particular vocation or earning capacity, in our nation of one hundred million people toward the elimination of waste in its every form. Nor is it the idea that only on that particular day should attention be directed toward conservation, but rather that it should bring about a prevailing tendency and ability to use with cleaner vision methods for greater thrift on every day in the year and mark an actual start in observing the acknowledged ways and means to this end.
