SATURDAY MORNING, MAY 20, 1916

Friendship that flows from the heart cannot be frozen by adversity, as the water that flows from the spring cannot congeal in winter. —James Fenimore Cooper.

The Progressive Statement

At a meeting of the progressive executive committee on May 19 a statement was issued at the request of progressives throughout the country, as to the course the party should take in the event that the republican national convention should be controlled by the reactionary element of the party and the offense of 1912 should be repeated.

We quote from the statement: The republicans and independent voters in general have responded understandingly to the sentiments expressed in the statement issued by our national committee last January.

We again pledge our party to approach a consideration of the issues involved this year without any desire to revive partisan bitterness. If the republican convention is responsive to the patriotic spirit that brought the republican party into being and made it dominant for a half century, it will meet this crisis in a spirit of broad patriotism that rises above partisanship.

There is here no demand that the republicans shall surrender anything to the progressives that cannot be surrendered without advantage to the republican party and the country. There is no insistence that the republicans shall choose a member of the progressive party as candidate for the presidency.

The republican leaders must know that of all the men who have been considered in connection with the nomination for the presidency, Colonel Roosevelt is the only one who can surely easily be elected by the combined effort of republicans and progressives; there are other candidates who could probably be elected by such a combination of effort and for the election of certain other candidates beside Colonel Roosevelt, progressives would do their part.

It rests with the republican leaders in control of the convention to declare, on or about June 7, whether there shall be a continuation of democratic rule. The fortunes of the democratic party will be determined this year at Chicago and not at St. Louis.

The Show and the Newspaper

A curious controversy has come to an end in New York. The New York Times criticised severely certain plays given by the Shuberts. Thereupon the Shuberts refused to admit to their theaters the dramatic critic of the Times.

The Shuberts cannot be blind to the value of advertising. The New York Times is one of the great newspapers of the country. For a time there was a suggestion of advertising in the daily discussion of the right or wrong of the Shuberts' attitude.

This seems to be the opinion that the Shuberts have been late in arriving at. An adverse theatrical criticism does not ruin a good play; it awakens discussion among theater-goers as to whether the play is good or bad and the crowds settle the matter by going to see.

The War on Paper

The Germans and French are fighting their battles in the press dispatches. Each is trying to prove that the other is already whipped. Better proof would be afforded by prisoners taken and strongholds or territory occupied.

of certain newspapers of their superior service, when in the last as well as in the first analysis, their quality is determined not by claims but by the character of the service, their printed pages which are open to all to read and judge.

When either France or Germany conquers, it will be unnecessary for the conqueror to waste any ink to inform the world of that event. It will be a matter concerning which there can be no dispute or misunderstanding unless the war should end in a draw or a "dog fall" and then neither shall have won, whatever either may assert to the contrary.

Conservatism, observes an exchange, will persist in spite of radical progress. The latest anachronistic performers were three old-fashioned men in Pennsylvania, who managed to get themselves more or less damaged the other day by the skidding of a horse-drawn vehicle.

The statement on Wednesday by Mr. Bryan that he would not attend the national democratic convention as a delegate is rather confirmatory of reports we had heard of the results of the late democratic primaries in Nebraska.

Now appears a scientist with a secret for taking the scent from gasoline. We should be more interested in a discovery that would take several cents from the prevailing price of the stuff. We can stand the smell.

RALLIED AN ARMY CORPS

When the war broke out Colonel Pettain was put in command of a brigade in the first army corps, though he still kept his rank of colonel.

Just before the battle of Marne he was promoted to general of division and was sent to rally the remnants of the third corps, badly disorganized during the retreat by General Sauret's inefficient handling.

Pettain, general commanding the sixth division of infantry, has, by his example, his tenacity, his calm under fire, his incessant foresight, his continual intervention at the right moment, obtained from his division during fourteen days of consecutive fighting a magnificent effort, resisting repeated attacks night and day, and the fourteenth day, in spite of his losses, repelling a final very violent attack.

BIRDS AND MEN

None of the wild birds in New England is as nearly domestic as the robin and no other bird fits into the scenery better or is more welcome in spring. It is a bird of uncomparable courage or it would not arrive here before the snow leaves, and it develops a fine sense of ownership.

After all, the bird and the man are much alike; the bird has a brief period of loveliness and nest-building and then it works from sunrise till sunset to care for the family. So does the man, if he is the right sort. Fall comes and the bird faces the possibilities of starvation or of sudden death from some of its enemies and the man faces the increasing possibilities of pneumonia or apoplexy.

FABLE OF THE O. F. B. M. AND THE UNDERTAKER

Once there was an Old Fashioned Business Man whose Business got Sick. He fretted and worried, but that did not help. His Son, who was interested in the Business Slightly, wanted to call in Dr. Ads, but the O. F. B. M. said no, he wasn't much for New Fangled Things.

So, the Business got Sicker and Sicker and the O. F. B. M. Worried more and more, but he would not Listen to Reason.

One day, a tall, lanky Fellow came into the office of the O. F. B. M. with a Paper. "In the Business Undertaker," he said, and he seemed real Good Natured about it, too.

Where the People May Have Hearing

THE TIME OF FILING
Wickenburg, Ariz. May 17, 1916.
The Arizona Republican, Phoenix.
Herewith find an article clipped from your issue of May 16, in which this statement is made concerning reports to the Arizona Corporation commission:

"The law provides that all reports shall be in the hands of the commission on or before the first of June."
Herewith also find a printed copy of Paragraph 274, Chapter X, Revised Statutes of Arizona, 1913, which clearly recites the following:

Paragraph 274, Chapter X, Revised Statutes of Arizona, 1913, reads:

"(a) Every corporation organized under the laws of this state, and every foreign corporation doing business in this state, except purely charitable, social, fraternal, benevolent and religious institutions, not used or held for profit, shall, during the month of June in each year, pay an annual registration fee of fifteen dollars. Such fee shall be paid to the Corporation Commission, and shall be paid irrespective of any specific license or other tax imposed by law upon such corporation for the privilege of carrying on its business in this state or upon its franchises of property.

"(b) At the time of paying such registration fee, every such corporation, domestic or foreign, shall file with the said corporation commission a report subscribed and sworn to by its president and secretary showing:

"It is thus plainly to be seen, that the statement may be filed and the fee paid any time in June and not of necessity on or before the first, as published by you.

Having therefore, sounded a false alarm and needlessly alarmed the public on so important a matter, it would seem your plain duty to insert a correction in your next issue.

JOSEPH O'CONNOR, Wickenburg, Ariz.

OH YES SIR! SEND A FEW CANS

Charles F. Howard, of Lake Odessa, Mich., was a salesman on the road when he lost his hearing two or three years ago, now he is taking up a systematic study of advertising as the best means for cashing in on his selling experience. He's sure he will make a go of it, for he has the prescription in the form of a motto on the wall of his office and here it is:

"Success comes in cans. Failure comes in cans. So please send me a few cans."—Associated Advertising.

LOSES HOME, SUES FOR HER EMOLUMENT

Rosa Bates, Housekeeper, Claims Tillman Ozias Promised Her Home and Mrs. Ozias Changed Plan

Rosa Bates, housekeeper for Tillman Ozias for fourteen years, wants $1250 with interest for her services to him in that capacity during the years 1902-1903 in Florida. She figures her service at the rate of one dollar a day.

Mrs. Bates took the witness stand in Judge Lyman's court yesterday and after overcoming her timidity in the unnatural surroundings, told the court her relations with Ozias. She said she had been informally adopted by Ozias, who had asked her whether she wanted wages or a home for the rest of her life. She replied "A home is what a woman needs," but when she was put out of the home she said she felt her wages were due. Her own marriage in 1905 had not interrupted the home, in fact she said Mr. Ozias stated he would be glad to have a son and Mr. Bates had been connected with Mr. Ozias and they had all lived together.

They had Mr. Ozias had married. The wife came home. "What occurred after she came" asked Judge Dean of his witness.

"Oh, everything!" she answered. "Until the coming of Mrs. Ozias she had been treated kindly. An appeal to Mr. Ozias for further kindness provoked the response that his wife was mistress. She left the home when she was ill, when she had to be helped on the car by the conductor and a group of high school girls. She no longer had the home so she sought the alternative—wages.

Joseph E. Morrison for the defense asked the witness if she had signed a receipt which cancelled Mr. Ozias' indebtedness to her. She admitted that she had after borrowing Judge Dean's spectacles and then asked if she might explain.

"I did not have my glasses with me and when I asked what I was giving I was told, 'Sign it, it will secure you some in cans.' So please send me a few cans."—Associated Advertising.

J. M. Ruggles, in whose office it was signed, stated that when Mrs. Bates had placed her signature to the receipt she had said, "I am signing my death warrant but Mr. Ozias has been very good to me."

Mrs. Ozias refuted Mrs. Bates' statement that she had not been kind. She declared that she did not know Mrs. Bates was ill when she left their home, 348 North Fifth avenue.

The court announced that the case would be taken under advisement and at once proceeded with the suit brought by Mr. Bates against the same defendant for a partner's share in his property. Little headway was made in this case, owing to the lateness of the hour when the first case was concluded and was continued until this morning.

MICHELIN
MICHELIN Red Inner Tubes
have a world-wide reputation for durability for the following reasons:
1st: Michelin Red-Rubber Tubes are compounded of certain quality-giving ingredients which prevent them from becoming brittle or porous and which preserve their velvety softness indefinitely.
Michelin Tubes are red because these ingredients make them so; but red in itself is no sign of superiority, for there is a "Dyed-Red" as well as the "Michelin Quality-Red."
2nd: Michelin Tubes are not simply pieces of straight tubing with their ends cemented, but are formed on a ring mandrel to exactly the circular shape of the inside of the casing itself and consequently fit perfectly.
Michelin tubes when in service are neither stretched on their outer side nor compressed into wrinkles next to the rim. Thus tube-destroying creases are avoided, and pinching, due to careless fitting, is practically eliminated.
