SENATOR CLARKE DIES AT HOME OF APOPLEXY

[Republican A. P. Leased Wire] WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Senator Charles C. Clarke died at his home in Washington today of apoplexy. He was 67 years of age. Senator Clarke's revolt against the eight-hour bill was a typical manifestation of a stern independence which characterized his attitude throughout the thirteen years of his senatorial career. Many times he was the leader in opposition to measures proposed by his party. The climax of his independence was reached when he led the democratic revolt against the ship purchase bill, which gave new life to the republican filibuster against the measure and made its passage impossible. When the bill was re-introduced during the last session, however, with the government ownership and operation features to which Senator Clarke objected, revised and modified, he supported it.

NEED OF PROMPT ROAD MAINTENANCE

[Republican A. P. Leased Wire] DENVER, Oct. 1.—There are a good many persons who really believe in the maintenance of highways, who have the very mistaken opinion that little money need be spent for several years on a new road which has been constructed at a heavy cost. As a matter of fact, there may be heavy expenses during the first five years, which are called maintenance, but really form part of the completion of the improvement. It will often be necessary to remove slides from banks which have been cut into at the time of the original work.

CITIES CONCERNED IN RURAL HIGHWAYS

[Republican A. P. Leased Wire] MARKSVILLE, La., Oct. 1.—There is an occasional complaint that people living in cities, unless they own automobiles, have no concern in rural roads and should not be taxed for their improvement. An interesting light on this point is shed by an editorial in the "Daily Town Talk" of Alexandria, La., which reads as follows: "Attention has again been called to the almost impassable condition of the road to Marksville. One of the worst places in this road is the Bayou Marie swamp and the hill in that section, which is almost impassable for teams. Parties coming through there today state that the road is too bad for travel now, and that in the fall and winter it will be much worse. The condition of this road is a disgrace to the state. It is stated conservatively that a thousand bales of cotton will be diverted from here to Marksville this season on account of the condition of the road, and less it is improved at once. Every progressive town has a board of trade or its equivalent, which strives to attract rural trade to the town's shops. If the roads leading to the town are so poor as that described in the quotation, a check is not only placed on the trade from the farmers but the number of thrifty farms is kept down, for no intelligent man desires to isolate his family in lonesome solitude by living where conditions are like those on "the road to Marksville."
