

Barley-Malt Best Hops No Corn

One reason for the superiority of the Anheuser-Busch brews is, they contain no corn, an ingredient that cheapens the cost of brewing and injures the quality of the beer. The mark of purity—

JOINT STATEHOOD.

Arizona and New Mexico Would Make an Empire State.

REASONS WHY THEY SHOULD BE UNITED

Editors Citizen.

There is a great deal being ventilated during these hot days about statehood of New Mexico and Arizona, separately and jointly, and it is the general consensus of opinion that joint statehood would be preferable to nothing at all, although separate statehood would be more satisfactory to both territories, and as a last resort, rather than be still left on the ragged edge of the union to be buffeted and kicked around like a poor boy at a frolic, it would be better to have forces in solid poalanx and march to victory. This movement may not be popular with small fry politicians and those ambitious aspirants for office whose private and public records will not bear ventilating before an honest public, but it will be approved and advocated by all honest, unprejudiced political aspirants, and all other good citizens who have the interest of the territory at heart. Laying aside all prejudice, and looking the facts square in the face, it would be a grand triumph for both territories. Instead of two helpless, feeble dependencies subject to all kinds of selfish jobberies, we would have one grand state, an empire rivaling the great state of Texas itself, with our own chosen representatives and senators, whose tenure of office would depend upon the faithful performance of the duties which they were elected to fill; able congressmen who would have the right and whose duty it would be to stand upon the floor of congress and claim and demand a hearing in all matters pertaining to the great state of Montezuma, Arizona or New Mexico, as the case may be. Why, in less than two years this state would be hailed all over the union as the great state of Montezuma or empire of the west, just as Texas is now talked of as the empire state of the south, or the great state of Texas. Then, you say, we can divide if we so stipulate, at some future time, but allow me to say that you will never want to divide it. They could not today get a corporal's guard in Texas who would agree to reduce its territory by one foot, and it would be the same way in this state. The people would be proud of their state, and the west would be proud of it, and the whole nation would be proud of it. The joint combination would found into such prominence, and give such an immense impetus to trade, progress and prosperity, as to place her in the front ranks of great states, and with her boundless resources of wealth, push and energy, she would easily maintain a most enviable position among the other great states of the union. Give us one great state or two small ones, either is far better than a helpless, dependent territory, a subservient, grovelling beggar for small favors from the general government, when we are by all rules of justice and right, entitled to as much consideration as any state in the union, and this we should be in a position to demand. Our delegates from Arizona and New Mexico are as able men as the average congressman, and are both intelligent advocates of statehood.

One is a republican, the other a democrat; these gentlemen are willing to take their chances before the electors of their respective territories; they understand the difference between a great self governed, independent state, and a cringing, crawling, dependent territory. When our representatives do screw up their courage to ask the self constituted nabobs of the capital for any consideration for the benefit of their constituents, they are usually met with the interrogation "Who in the — are you?" "Honored sir, I am the delegate from New Mexico." "Oh, yes; I see, I see; you are the same tramp that has been knocking at my door for the last half century! Have we not often told you to get out; that we do not want you?" "Oh, yes, noble sir, but our people still think that they have some rights which the government, great as it is, should respect. We enlisted in the war for the union, and gave our full quota of blood to save the nation. We responded to your call in the late Spanish war, and if any of your great states have furnished any better, braver, more intelligent fighters for the honor and glory of the flag, please, kind sir, point out the time and place."

But the autocrat, not being able to answer, gives the delegate a cold potato and tells him to go—to go way back and sit down. "Some day, in the far distant future, when you have spent $300,000,000 in storage reservoirs, and have your fertile plains under irrigation, and in a high state of cultivation, then, perhaps, we may let you in, but don't bother us any more; I refer you to the Deming Headlight."

See that paper's able article in the issue of the June 27, in opposition to statehood; it's a corker, and should make that brilliant editor governor."

Like all other feeble opponents of self government, the Headlight, for want of any plausible argument against statehood, must fall back on that old-time, worn fling at our native population. And right here, I arise to say, that I have been in New Mexico over twenty years, and it has been my pleasure to know many of the leading Mexicans in this territory, and candor compels me to say that for intelligence, integrity and good citizenship, they compare most favorably with our own. And then, all this hue and cry about the native element banding together, taking all the offices, and sending the country to the demitition bow-wows, is the merest rot. These people are as much divided, politically, as we are, and fight each other in a political campaign just as hard as we do; note the result of our recent elections. Larazola, one of the most popular and brightest young Mexicans in the territory; and Bernard Rodey, an American, and an Irish-American at that, beat him by an overwhelming majority; and two years later my esteemed friend, Hon. H. B. Fergusson, shared the same fate. This does not bear out the idea that our native citizens will club together regardless of political principles, and swallow the territory, body and soul. Take the Oteros, Manzaneras, Chaves, Lunas, Larazolans and scores of others whom I could name, among prominent Mexicans, and I will stand them up in a row against an equal number of their paler faced brethren, who oppose statehood, on any such flimsy pretexts, and I venture to predict that the comparison will not be odious.

Give us joint statehood—a great state, a great people. It will insure great progress, honor and respect and great wealth.

Capital will flow in for investments, and build up our country so rapidly that many of our pioneers will live to see the magic transformation.

Caution! This is not a gentle word—but when you think how liable you are not to purchase the only remedy universally known and a remedy that has had the largest sale of any medicine in the world since 1868 for the cure and treatment of consumption and throat and lung troubles without losing its great popularity all these years, you will be thankful we called your attention to Boschee's German Syrup. There are so many ordinary cough remedies made by druggists and others that are cheap and good for light colds perhaps, but for severe coughs, bronchitis, croup—and especially for consumption, where there is difficult expectoration and coughing during the nights and mornings, there is nothing like German Syrup. The 25-cent size has just been introduced this year. Regular size, 75 cents. At all druggists. J. H. O'Reilly & Co.

YOUNG GARCIA DROWNED.

Another Swimmer Lost His Life in the Rio Grande.

The Rio Grande claimed a third victim yesterday afternoon, when a 17 year old youth named Garcia was drowned near the elevator, about fifty feet from the Texas bank.

The boy was in the water with several companions, but all of these ran away after he lost his life and made no effort to find the body.

Garcia was a strong swimmer and appeared to be master of the current, but threw up his hands and cried for help.

W. T. Cunningham of South El Paso street and several railroad men rushed to the boy's assistance, but saw him sink like a piece of lead. Believing that he would rise again to the surface, they ran down stream, watching the water, but the lad came up no more.

It was the general belief that he had been seized with cramps or caught in a powerful suck hole.

Garcia's clothing was deposited at the Stanton street bridge and his parents called there last evening to get them. They lived in Chihuahua.—El Paso News.

His Last Hope Realized.

From the sentinel, Gebu, Mont. In the first opening of Oakland to settlers in 1889, the editor of this paper was among the many seekers after fortune who made the big race one fine day in April. During his traveling about and afterwards his camping up on his claim, he encountered much bad water, which, together with the severe heat, gave him a very severe diarrhoea which it seemed almost impossible to check, and along in June the case became so bad he expected to die.

One day one of his neighbors brought him one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as a last hope. A big dose was given him while he was rolling about on the ground in great agony, and in a few minutes the dose was repeated. The good effect of the medicine was soon noticed and within an hour the patient was taking his first sound sleep for a fortnight. That one little bottle worked a complete cure, and he cannot help but feel grateful. The season for bowel disorders being at hand suggests this item. For sale by all druggists.
