JEFFRIES HAS TRODDEN A CAREER OF MANY VOCATIONS HE IS CONCEDED TO BE A PUGILIST IN A CLASS OF HIS OWN—AN UMPIRE FOR SPORT.

Two hundred and forty pounds of well preserved bone and muscle dropped off train No. 8 Saturday evening. This six feet, four inches of brawn, was met by a reception committee from the office of the fair association, and James J. Jeffries was scratched on the register of the Alvarado.

The skeptical would then believe that the world's greatest prize fighter had really consented to come to the New Mexico fair; and they will believe that James J. Jeffries has really come for the purpose of umpiring the base ball tournament, when long Benn, the Brown's lanky pitcher sizes up like a "chigger" beside the man with the indicator.

Jeff took a hurried dinner at the Alvarado and at 9 o'clock showed up at the Casino, with Mrs. Jeffries and a number of sporting men from the coast. Marlon Whiting handed the champion a bunch in her song "Back to Buffalo." Jeff smiled the same as he did that eventful night at Coney Island. He seemed very much pleased with what he saw and heard.

Jeffries is no late sleeper and he was up early yesterday morning for a tramp. A scout up about the foothills got a bit of his wind. He was out to the fair grounds in the afternoon and witnessed some bronco busting by a bunch of Diamond A cowboys. They even rode a mule named Maude with out accident, and Jeff was more than pleased.

Boltermaker, prize fighter, capitalist, real estate agent and umpire is the career James J. Jeffries has trod in a decade of years. Jeff was a union man and he still retains his card. He is a prize fighter in a class of his own. He made a quarter of a million in the business. Jimmy Britt game him $1,000 last week to sit by the ring side and see him get licked by Nelson. Jeff has made fabulous profits out of his real estate business. He is umpiring the twenty-fifth territorial fair base ball tournament at the urgent request of friends, and because his veins are filled with sporting blood.

James J. Jeffries has retired from the prize ring until the world produces a fighter in his class.

AMERICAN COUPLE BLESSED BY POPE

BRIDE AND GROOM VISITED THE VATICAN AND THE PAPAL BLESSING WAS GIVEN TO THEIR MARRIAGE—BRIDE SAW DEAR, KIND FACE AND WAS NOT FRIGHTENED.

Dr. J. J. Cody of Boston and his pretty young bride of three months have received the nuptial blessing from His Holiness, Pope Pius X, and are the only newly married American couple to enjoy this distinction. They spent their honeymoon in Europe, and through a strange chance were enabled to receive the papal blessing at the vatican in Rome, July 10th.

"When we left Boston on the afternoon of our wedding day," said Dr. Cody, "as he waited at the White Star steamship dock in Boston for the custom house men to go through his trunk and his wife's, we had no idea of being blessed by the pope. We did not believe that it would be possible.

"When going through the vatican we did not understand all we saw and could not ask anyone to explain things to us, as all the people around us seemed to be Italians.

"After a while we saw an American priest, to whom we spoke. He was interested when he learned that we were just married, and said he would try to arrange through Mgr. Besetti, the master of ceremonies for us to receive the papal blessing.

"I felt very much awed in the presence of the pope," said Mrs. Cody, "as her husband turned his attention toward their trunks. 'But he had such a dear, kind face that I was not at all afraid. We knelt before him and he gave us in a low, musical voice his blessing. He spoke in Italian, so we could not understand what he said. Then we were permitted to kiss his ring. When he was told that we were on our honeymoon the pope seemed much pleased."

Dr. Shambay and Dr. Donahue, of Des Moines, Ia., who were at the vatican to receive the papal blessing were instrumental in securing the honor of the nuptial blessing for Dr. Cody and his wife.

A MARVELOUS CHILD SINGER Bebe Lorraine, whose voice, it is claimed, has no parallel in musical history, is the latest aspirant for operatic honors, and the coming season will serve to introduce her to the opera goers as the exponent of Wagner and Gounod.

This little girl is in her sixth year, and her voice is a contralto of wonderful purity and mellowness. She has been under the tutelage of Carl Praeger.

BEBE LORRAINE. Her, a famous master, for the last year, and her training has given her a technique phenomenal in one so young.

As the child has great intelligence, added to a childish beauty, when she sings Elsa in "Lohengrin," and the Marguerite in "Faust," it is expected that she will cause a decided sensation in grand opera.

The range of Bebe Lorraine is of four and a half octaves. She with ease goes from the lower contralto E to G sharp, which is more than an octave above the highest soprano F above high E, which brings the child's voice within three notes from the end of the piano keyboard, which is considered little less than marvelous by the critics who have heard the little one sing.
