Sailing Over the Boundless Waves

Albuquerque is unlike a whole lot of cities in this dear old world—for which her inhabitants are duly thankful but she has added to her eccentricities now by owning one of the biggest balloons in the country.

The balloon cost $1200 and trimmings. It happened this way: When the fair association made a contract with Joseph Blondin, aeronaut, to operate a balloon during the big fair it bought the balloon for him, expecting to more than pay for it out of the aerial trips. It would have made good no doubt only the inflating apparatus wouldn't work. Albuquerque had plenty of hot air—all kinds of it—but this was a gas balloon. On the last days of the fair the big balloon made one trip filled with city gas and Rio Grande sand for ballast. Then it returned to earth and likewise to Albuquerque.

The question that now confronts the city is: What will we do with it? Some of the fair officials want to sell it to Taft, but he is too busy killing Philippine mules with autos. Others think a good way to utilize the balloon would be to inflate it with city gas, load it with all the knackers in town and set it adrift. This worthy plan would be all right except for the fact that it costs $200 to inflate the balloon and all the knackers in town aren't worth that much one way or another.

A staid merchant, who rides a bicycle, suggests that the balloon be placed in the city park for the small boy to stick pins in, instead of the tires of his bicycle wheels.

The Citizen hasn't any suggestion to make. This paper is accustomed to taking a stand one way or another on every question of vital importance to this community. It is a duty the Citizen feels called upon to perform. But when it comes to a balloon—a great big bag with a wicker basket, settling down amongst us, the Citizen is at least as to just what course it is advisable to pursue. All this paper knows about it is that we've got one more balloon than we really have any particular use for. It don't inconvenience us any and we may eventually be able to operate it so as to carry our good citizens across the mud holes on Central avenue—of course, that's the solution of the thing. That's where the Citizen stands on the matter. By all means, let's turn the balloon over to Martin Tierney, our street commissioner, for use in case of emergency. The Citizen was about to say that any one really wanting a balloon could have this one, probably on reasonable terms, but come to think of it Albuquerque really needs that balloon until our new system of canals and lagoons is completed. Anyhow a big balloon its lots more unique than gondolas or row boats. Certainly, why not? Let us keep the balloon. As Aeronaut Blondin said of the air currents, "It's an ill wind that blows nobody good."

Did you know that in the cities, many of the largest business men are advertising by means of want ads. The want ad business of the larger papers forms the biggest department in the advertising line, and brings more results than any other form of advertising. With the exception of the big department store ads of price lists. This is a hint to the Albuquerque man or woman who wants something.

Aren't you glad you're not a bee. Another one of those bothersome old scientists says: It is said that bees must take the nectar from 2,000 clover blossoms to make one pound of honey. This means that they must make 2,750,000 trips from the hive to the flowers. And when the price of honey is taken into consideration it will readily be seen that the price of bee labor is too cheap.

A New York actress said that a pig was preferable to a millionaire and, too, a big fat porker auto riding on the seat beside her where a well known millionaire formerly sat. The actress may be right and against she may not be but at that—most actresses prefer to take their pork in chops and let the millionaire foot the bill.

What mollycoddles the Albuquerque boys are getting to be. They now play basket ball indoors and dance afterwards instead of manfully fracturing arms, legs and skulls on the gridiron. Probably the Albuquerque girls will now devote their time to sewing since the boys usurped their only real game.

Professor Headlee, of the Kansas Agricultural College, spent two weeks looking for green bugs in Pawnee county. No one seems to know why he wanted green bugs, but perhaps he could have seen a few if he had only patronized one of Larned's numerous drug stores.

Kansas City is engaged in a heated debate as to whether or not it wants Tom Johnson, Cleveland's re-elected mayor to speak there or not. It is said on the quiet, that Johnson isn't giving the matter any great amount of attention.

Chicago has given her telephone system away to a little bunch of special privilege grafters to keep for 20 years at fair prices. Of course, the aldermen will not be affected. They use the inexpensive frank.

They have raised the price of milk and shaves at Cottonwood Falls, Kan. Strong City, the neighboring town is going to take similar action with fish hooks and stick candy just to keep even.

It is barely possible that a part of that tribe of people recently discovered in Alaska is composed of individuals from different sections of the country who have "mysteriously disappeared."

A Kansas woman was accidentally shot in the head and killed while kneeling by a cook stove, which goes to show that the worst don't always happen while kneeling at the altar.

Cigars six inches in length are sold in the Philippines. With one of these in Uncle Joe Cannon's mouth at the usual angle he should easily carry de sixt' ward for president.

Thus far no reports have been received from Richard Pearson Hobson or Richard Harding Davis on the manner in which the Ute Indian uprising should have been settled.

A Colorado man killed himself to get away from his wife and she at once committed suicide also. Friends of the couple are now wondering which one won out.

Jim Hill says the recent financial flurry comes from people hoarding their money. Possibly some of them were hoarding it so they could control a few railroads.

If fresh eggs sell at five and one-sixth cents each in Albuquerque, which they do, how many cackles will it take to make the average rancher a millionaire?

Wall street's financial stringency doesn't appear to have affected the price of Rio Grande alfalfa in the least, for which we are all duly thankful.

The club women of Topeka are cooking without the use of fire. Topeka is a good town for attorneys who make a specialty of divorces.

The government is going to try and make the Ute Indian work. The best way will be to put him on a foot ball team or the war path.

The report that a western farmer sold his wheat crop for $70,000 is enough to turn the heads of some of the headliners in vaudeville.

When a Kansas druggist says a medicine is good for the liver he is always sure to make a sale. Kansas is a prohibition state.

LOOKING FOR A GOOD TIME?

There are about as many conceptions as to what constitutes a "good time" as there are individuals, but there is one place in New Mexico, not very far from Albuquerque, where 99 out of every 100 people find what they are looking for. That place is the Valley Ranch, at Pecos, New Mexico. Fresh country produce in abundance, horses to ride or drive, dogs, guns, traps, tackle, all at your disposal. The finest hunting and fishing in the territory. You can live in a house, a cabin or a tent, and come and go as you please. You'll find plenty of company there, agreeable and refined, if you are socially inclined, a favorite resort for ladies. Conditions ideal for recuperating, reading, hunting or loafing. You CAN'T SPEND MORE THAN NINE DOLLARS A WEEK ANY WAY YOU FIX IT. Inquire at The Citizen Office for further particulars, or address The Valley Ranch.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Schwentker, 515 West Roma avenue, was visited last night by the proverbial stork, who took occasion to leave a little girl. Mr. Schwentker, who is general agent for the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance company, was around passing out cigars today in honor of the event.

The gangs, which were employed in the local yards of the Santa Fe railway tracks and putting in a new platform in front of the station were laid off Saturday. The checks of the men ranged from thirty cents to $1 and were paid at the passenger ticket window. There were over 200 men in the gangs laid off.

The "Little Johnny Jones" company arrived from El Paso this morning on the early train. The players occupied two tourist sleeping cars and there were two baggage cars crammed full of scenery. A man arriving from El Paso this morning, who witnessed the Saturday afternoon performance of the company, says that "Little Johnny Jones" and his entire company are artists. The chorus is large and well drilled.

As a result of the breaking of a water main in the northern part of the city, and the subsequent shutting down of the plant while the break could be repaired, yesterday morning, a number of bath tubs went unused and a large majority of the people of the city washed their faces in water taken sparingly from the kitchen lavatory. The death of water created a greater panic than the Sunday closing of the soda fountains.

EMINENT MISSIONARY DIES AT ST. JOSEPHS HOSPITAL

Rev. E. S. Lyman, of Montreal, Canada, prominent in undenominational circles in this country and Canada, died Saturday morning in the St. Joseph hospital from an operation which was performed a week previous.

He passed through Albuquerque recently on his way to Old Mexico to do missionary work. Two weeks ago he was taken sick at the City of Mexico and returned to this city. He was taken to St. Joseph's hospital and the operation was performed which later resulted in his death.

Rev. Lyman was a graduate of Yale, unmarried and aged 66 years. Services will be held Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock at Borders undertaking parlors under the direction of the North Fourth street Gospel Mission with which he was identified. Burial will be made at Fairview.

BURGLARS ATTEMPT DAYLIGHT ROBBERY

Burglars broke into the grocery store of M. Dragole, 300 North Broadway, in broad daylight yesterday morning, but were frightened away before they had time to take anything. An attempt was also made to enter the residence of Mr. Dragole, which adjoins the store.

Entrance was gained to the grocery store through a rear window. The screen was removed and the glass broken in the window. The window opened to a rear room of the store and the door to the store was locked. The burglars entered the rear room, but it is believed were frightened away before they had time to break into the store.

A screen was removed from a back window of Mr. Dragole's home and an attempt made to raise the window, but the intruders were frightened away by members of the family.

DAILY SHORT STORIES

THE REWARD

"Ki-yi-ki-yi!" yelled a little black dog as he fled from the missiles of subbrante Jones and dogged around the corner of neighbor Jackson, house into Philmot's tidy lawn.

Aaron Philmot, an eccentric bachelor, 45, was particularly proud of his beautiful lawn, and Jones expected the little stray dog to meet his doom.

But Philmot was not brutal. As the frightened canine rushed across the lawn and leaped upon the porch, a peculiar compassion filled his heart and he took the stranger into the house.

That night as the kindly bachelor sat beside the hearth and petted his new found friend, a notice in the evening paper attracted his attention.

"LOST, STRAYED OR STOLEN—A small black dog with a brown spot over the left eye. If found advise and receive reward. J. L. 121 B-st."

The description tallied exactly with the dog he had rescued. With a feeling akin to sorrow, for his heart longed for the affection manifested by the little fellow, Philmot went to his desk and wrote in his frank, bold script:

"J. L.—Call at 2906 C-st, and you may have the dog advertised in this evening's paper as lost.

"Yours truly,
"AARON PHILMOT."

The following day he was surprised to receive a sweet-scented missive, addressed by a feminine hand, and, opening it, he read, with some curiosity, the following:

"Mr. Aaron Philmot, City. Dear Sir—Will you please bring, or send, by the first train, the dog mentioned in your advertisement for your time and trouble will be made.

"Yours truly,
"JESSE LE SEURE."

With mingled feelings of trepidation and anticipation, Philmot set out on his errand the following evening, just as the twilight shades were falling. Beside him, secured by a small rope, trudged the terrier.

As it was quite a long distance, however, his fluttering heart had somewhat regained its composure by the time he reached the correct number on B-st, and he noted the surroundings as he sauntered up the brick walk that led to the house. It was a small house set well back in the yard, and the giant oaks cast a gloom about it. However, a soft, mellow light from within promised a cheerful interior.

He rang the door bell and listened. In an instant he heard someone walking, and a lady, opening the door, bade him enter. She was middle aged, but her luxuriant brown hair had in the slightest tinge of gray. Her face was fair and full, and her large eyes brown, and withal she charmed the bachelor of 45 as though he were a schoolboy.

"I have returned the terrier," he said, as he entered.

"Oh, I am so glad," she answered sweetly. "He saved me from death at the time my husband was killed three years ago, and I am very much attached to him."

The conversation then drifted to the tragedy and from there to current topics. Ere he was aware of it, two hours had flown and yet he was loath to go. But the mantel clock kept warning, and with an effort he arose.

"Come again, Mr. Philmot," she said with a most bewitching smile. "With pleasure, if I may," he answered.

CLAIM JUMPERS" AT WORK IN HELL CANYON

Hunters Discover Man Destroying Monuments But Trespasser Escapes.

While a party of hunters from this city were in the vicinity of the Mangano mountains, fifteen miles southeast of the city yesterday, they noticed a man tearing down the landmarks around mining claims, which had been staked out by prospectors. The woman of the party, who first saw the man, started after him with her shotgun ready for action, but he escaped into the timber before she could discover his identity. The monuments were restored and the owners of the claims notified of the alleged "claim jumping" today.

BERNALILLO COUNTY DISTRICT COURT

Joe Morello filed suit today against Joseph Kuhn to recover $329 on a note. Both are from Gallup.

Dr. D. H. Carnes occupied the stand today in the trial of Joseph Schmidt against the Southwestern Brewery and Ice company for $25,000 damages for injuries received while in the employ of the company. Dr. Carnes attended Schmidt when injured. The trial promises to arise over several days in the district court.

J. D. Emmons was granted a discharge in bankruptcy this morning by Judge Abbott.

H. P. Hall, of Gallup, was granted a temporary license to practice law in the Second Judicial district court this morning. Mr. Hall has been retained in several McKinley county cases coming up in the district court.

MORTUARY

Joseph M. Critchlow, Jr., aged 24, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph M. Critchlow, of Tusula, Pa., died yesterday of tuberculosis at the home of his mother on South High street. Mrs. Critchlow and her son came to Albuquerque last June. Mrs. Critchlow will leave this evening with the remains for their home in Tusula.

Mrs. Nellie Bulger.

Mrs. Nellie Bulger, aged twenty, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Bulger, of Baxter Springs, Kan., died this morning of tuberculosis at the St. Joseph sanitarium. Her brother will leave this evening with the body for the home in Baxter Springs, where the funeral will be held.
