Died with My Face to the foe.

A single shot, followed by a loud shriek, told us that one of our best men, Bradley, was wounded. He proclaimed his agony with a loud voice, turning over on his back, and commenced kicking so vigorously that the surgeon had difficulty in getting in reach of him. "Poor fellow," said the doctor, as he saw a white liquid oozing out, "She is the Quinsia, I'm afraid it's fatal," and he commenced opening his coat.

"Oh, my God," said Bradley, "I'm a dead man, I'll never see my mother again." "The occasion will be remembered as an interesting one," said the doctor, "and a striking people and those who so nobly volunteered to aid them, paused from their sad labors to exchange for the first time their sentiments of gratitude, sympathy and mutual appreciation which were developed in the course of the common labors in one of the most terrible plagues that ever afflicted any community."

"Doctor," asked the wounded soldier, feebly, "will you write to my mother and tell her that I died bravely doing my duty, with my face to the foe, and that I thought of her when I was dying?"

"Yes, yes," said the doctor, with dim eyes and a husky voice, "I will write to her, and tell her, too," but suddenly springing to his feet, with an indignant angry voice, added, "Why, confound it, man, you're not hurt a bit; it's only your canteen that's shot, and that's the water from it; get up, will you?"

Bradley raised up slowly, felt himself all over, and with an exceedingly foolish countenance, crawled back to his position, amid the uproarious laughter of the regiment.

For months after that, on the march or in camp, and sometimes in the stillness of the night, you would hear a voice in one direction demanding "What shall I tell your mother?" and perhaps a half-dozen responses would be heard, "Tell her I died with my face to the foe," and then "Canteen" Bradley would come out and angrily hunt for the man that said it. He seldom found it, but he would hunt for it.

The Oldest Horse in the World.

Twenty-nine years ago last spring a horse was brought from Vermont to Boston for sale, being 11 or 12 years old. Strange as it may appear, that horse is still living; and is now 40 or 41 years of age. He was purchased at that time by the late Cyrus Reed, of Lexington, and is now owned by his son, John Reed, one mile from the Lexington depot. Notwithstanding his great age, he has been most wonderfully preserved, and is able to perform light work, and is often seen on the road, working as faithfully as he did a quarter of a century ago. He was fortunate to have been born in an age when speed was not the only requisite for a good horse, otherwise his bones might long since have been mingled with dust; but he bids fair to live several years longer. To stand before this venerable old horse and ponder upon the events he has passed through, and to realize that he is the only survivor of all the horses born in 1838, makes us feel like paying respect to his age, and like calling upon the society with a long name to secure him against all labor for the future.

Our Dumb Animals.

Romance of Crime.

A story comes from New Orleans that an old lady of Iberia, La. lately sold her house for $2,000, the net of sale and mortgage of money pending before two witnesses. The same night two negro burglars broke into the house and demanded the money. She gave it to them but begged them to let her have one hundred dollars of it. They refused, and she wanted to pay the debt. They finally consented to let her keep the hundred dollars. They then ordered her to make some coffee. In doing so she brought herself of some strychnine she had in the house, and quietly dropped it in the pot of steaming coffee, and placed it on the table. This they drank in a jolly mood, each having nine hundred and fifty dollars in his pocket. But in a few minutes the tables were turned. One gave up his ghost where he sat at the table in his chair, and the other got up, staggered off a few feet and tumbled off into eternity. The old lady recovered her money, and on examining the persons of the black robbers, they proved to be the two witnesses to the act of sale, both white men, blackened for the occasion--both her neighbors, and one was her cousin.

Gratitude of Shreveport.

At the outbreak of the yellow fever in Shreveport, three physicians of New Orleans (Hurd, Riley and Finney) volunteered their services; and during the prevalence of the epidemic they devoted themselves to the relief of the suffering. On the 28th of October, when they were about to return to New Orleans, the Howard Association of Shreveport presented to them an address of thanks, and tendered to each a check of $1,000. Dr. Finney, on behalf of himself and colleagues, says: "The occasion will be remembered as an interesting one, and a striking people and those who so nobly volunteered to aid them, paused from their sad labors to exchange for the first time their sentiments of gratitude, sympathy and mutual appreciation which were developed in the course of the common labors in one of the most terrible plagues that ever afflicted any community."

Twelve Miles of Gold.

The coinage at the Philadelphia Mint for the month of October exceeds in amount any coinage ever executed there or at any other mint in the same time. There was delivered by the Coiner to the Superintendent in double eagles $11,010,000, and in silver and base coin $19,385. During the month the Coiner made one delivery of $1,200,000 in gold, the largest delivery ever made in one day. The time consumed was one hour and twenty minutes. Considering the weight of this amount--over two tons--this was rapid work. The weight of the double eagles coined during the month was nearly 38 tons; and the several pieces laid in one line, one against the other, would make nearly twelve miles of gold.

The Greatest Despot.

In searching John McLean, of New York, to the State Prison for life, for the murder of Michael Lavin in June last, Judge Brady made some very wholesome remarks. He said: "There are a class of persons in this community who think they have only to become intoxicated to act with impunity everywhere. As I look upon it, the drunkard is the greatest despot in this country. He seems to stalk over the country wherever he pleases, to the terror of everybody whom he meets. You became intoxicated voluntarily, and you put yourself in a position dangerous to the community. That is no excuse for the crime. Your crime is one that must be punished severely. The City of New York must be made secure against all persons of your illegal disposition."

Not Ready to Die.

This is no fabrication of an irreverent secular journal, but from the orthodox Memphis Presbyterian:

Traveling in his buggy alone, not long ago, in going to one of his appointments, one of our good brethren in the Presbytery of Memphis overtook a "footpad" with his carpet-bag in his hand. The roads were muddy, and he was just at the time about entering a dry bottom. With the post-horse, which he is noted, he asked the pedestrian, an anti-stranger, if he would not take a seat in his buggy until, at least, they had crossed the mud and the mire. The pedestrian was surprised, and the conversation was for a time free and easy, about the country and general.

Over, the good brother, with a view to make the conversation profitable, asked the stranger if he was ready to die. Not knowing the character of the person who had invited him to a seat with him, and misapprehending his meaning, and suspecting foul play, he waited not to reply, but sprang from the buggy immediately, and ran for life through slush and water. The clerical brother, wishing to assure the stranger that he meant no harm, called to him at the top of his voice, to stop! But this only hastened his speed, and like a scared hare, he ran until beyond hearing and sight. In his hasty flight he left his carpet-bag which our brother has now in his possession, being the richer for his faithfulness by the addition of a coarse shirt, a pair of thread-bare trousers, and a little "back-
