Mormonism in Europe.

A London cable says: The Government of Switzerland is imitating the example of its Austrian neighbors, in waging war against Mormon propagandists. The Federal Council at Basel has formally resolved that the work of Mormon missionaries in Switzerland is a great and growing evil, and that their converts or dupes are plundered and outraged after being deceived from home. Strict repressive laws against Mormon sectaries have been enacted and their first results have just appeared. Two Apostles of the Latter-day Saints, one of whom is a German and the other a Swiss, have been arrested at Anrau and its suburb Zonflagen, and in accordance with the new law they were sentenced to pay a fine of 100 francs each and to spend twenty-five days in the Communal Jail. These two culprits have been very successful in procuring converts and are said to have recruited hundreds of women among the peasants as well as many among the higher class. Among the recent converts to the new faith were two rich maidens of Zonflagen of uncertain age, who converted all their property into cash and started for America under the leadership of a Swiss Apostle. They were arrested in his company and compelled to return home.

Some anxiety was felt about the price of United States bonds pending the recent Presidential campaign. Opinions were very much mixed as to the effect the election of either candidate would have on the market value. The bias was of course largely political. Friends of the Republican candidate believed the election of the Democratic candidate would depress the price, and vice versa. The more conservative elements in both parties believed the result of the election would have little influence, no matter how decided. One thing is certain: The bonds are now higher than just before or just after the election. There were sales in New York a few days ago at 122 and upwards, and a small lot is reported sold in San Francisco at 122, seller 90. This carries delivery very near in auguration day, and indicates confidence in a sustinment of values. These bonds have sold as high as 125. This was just previous to the payment of the quarterly interest April 1, 1884. In the panic last May they fell to 116. Two causes are now operating to enhance their value. Demand from the banks to replace called 3 per cents and the plentiful supply of money in New York.

The Commissioner of Pensions in his report to the Secretary of the Interior, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1884, states that at the close of the year there were 322,756 pensioners—of which 218,956 were army invalids; 75,836 widows and minor children and dependent relatives; 2,616 navy invalids; 1,988 navy widows, minor children and dependent relatives; 3,898 survivors of the war of 1812, and 18,512 widows. Those who served in that war added to the roll during the year. The net increase to the number on the roll was 19,098. The average annual value of each pension was $106.75 and the aggregate annual value of all pensions $34,456,600, an increase over like value for the previous year, $2,211,407. In the aggregate since 1861, 927,922 claims have been filed and 545,130 have been allowed.

The people of Roslyn, L. I., celebrated the anniversary of the birth of William Cullen Bryant by setting out trees to his memory on the village green, an aged servant of Mr. Bryant assisting.

Some boys smoking cigarettes near a pile of cotton in Goldsborough, S. C., November 16, caused a fire which destroyed twenty-five business houses at a loss of $250,000.

It is estimated that the debt of the public debt for November will not be much over $1,000,000. The decrease is due to the reduction in the revenues for the month and heavy payments made on account of pensions of over $8,000,000.

A well-known resident of Warsaw, New York, is said to be dying from the effects of paralysis, superinduced by wearing a pair of extremely tight boots some three years ago, since which time pains in his feet and legs have never ceased.

The price of natural gas has been reduced in Pittsburg from forty to thirty cents per thousand feet, with a rebate of ten cents for prompt payment. The reduction is said to make the cost about equal to the cheapest coal that can be bought.

The late Sir Erastus Wilson's munificent bequest to the Royal College of Surgeons is expected to reach the sum of £200,000. It is reported that a large proportion of the bequest will be devoted to founding an establishment for scientific research for the use of practitioners and advanced students.

The Chicago health authorities are considering the advisability of closing the public schools in consequence of the prevalence of diphtheria. The disease has also taken somewhat of a hold in Pittsburg, fourteen of the sixty-six deaths in that city last week being accredited to it. A recent Newark, N. J., mortality report ascribes eleven deaths out of a total of seventy to that disease.

At a demonstration at Paris lately of Workingmen and Socialists, several advocated massacre and robbery of the rich. Two speakers who advocated moderation were kicked into the street. Shopkeepers in the vicinity of the meeting closed their places fearing violence and pillage. The police were unable to disperse the assemblage and were obliged to call on the military. The troops then took possession of the streets.

About Blaine.

The Philadelphia "Times" has two columns of Augusta specials on Blaine's home life. They declare positively that Blaine did not want the Presidential nomination. This is attested by his neighbors. It oppressed him more than most people will ever be able to understand. He almost faltered in the presence of the great responsibility thrust upon him. He had not expected the use of his name in the convention, which he had permitted in order to defeat Edmunds and Arthur, would result in his nomination. Instead of controlling the convention for some one else, as he anticipated, that body controlled itself for him and he found himself with a jewel that he did not want. In a few days Blaine's family will go to Washington for the winter, simply following his rule of the last twenty years. There they will follow their customary habits of life, and receive and be received as though they had suffered no disappointments. People who expect to find him sour and ill-tempered after this defeat, have reckoned without their host. The other class who thought he would weaken, and decline in health if he failed to reach the Presidency, may be prepared to see the same fresh, breezy man as when he was on the highest wave of public favor. He intends to remain in public view, and it is more than likely he will accept a seat in Congress after his literary task has been completed. Either Senator Hale or Congressman Milliken would retire to give place to Blaine, and in return, Hale could become Governor. Frye would not yield unless compelled to, and it would keep Blaine busy to beat him if he tried. There is a general feeling here that the matter can be arranged to accommodate all the statesmen.
