GERMANY'S WINES.

Sixteen Hundred Varieties to be Exhibited at the World's Fair.
German wine growers and dealers are making great preparations for a display at the exposition. Already two hundred and eighty exhibitors are registered who intend sending sixteen hundred different samples of wines grown in Baden, Alsace, Hesse, the Rhine provinces, Wurtemberg, under the care of a representative committee of wine growers and dealers from Coblenz and Deidesheim and Bingen and Kreuznach and Mayence. A sum of over twenty thousand dollars has been subscribed, partly by the German states and cities, with which a fine exhibition hall in German renaissance is being built on Midway Plaisance. On the walls will be pictures of the finest scenery in the wine-growing districts of the Rhine and the Mosel by artists of reputation from actual sketches made especially for the exposition. Among the noteworthy views will be the Germania memorial statue and the castle of Ehrenfels, while plaster reproductions of both will heighten the effect. Other pictures will give the noteworthy objects of interest in the wine-growing districts of Baden, Alsace and Wurtemberg. The different methods of growing wine will be represented, and the samples of each kind will be appropriately grouped and marked according to rules intended to show uniformity and effect. Maps will show the exact position of each district, and the building will be lit by electricity and made attractive both outwardly and inwardly. A good handbook will describe the qualities of German wines, and a restaurant will supply them, as well as German national dishes. The French wine producers have followed the example of their German rivals, and are now trying to organize a collective exhibit.

For Bronchitis

"I never realized the good of a medicine so much as I have in the last few months, during which time I have suffered intensely from pneumonia followed by bronchitis. After trying various remedies without benefit, I began the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and the effect has been marvelous, a single dose relieving me of choking, and securing a good night's rest."—T. A. Higginbotham, Gen. Store, Long Mountain, Va.

La Grippe

"Last Spring I was taken down with la grippe. At times I was completely prostrated, and so difficult was my breathing that my breath seemed as if confined in an iron cage. I procured a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and no sooner had I begun taking it than relief followed. I could not believe that the effect would be so rapid."—W. H. Williams, Cook City, S. Dak.

Lung Trouble

"For more than twenty-five years, I was a sufferer from lung trouble, caused by coughing so severe at times as to cause hemorrhage, the paroxysms frequently lasting three or four hours. I was induced to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and after taking four bottles, was thoroughly cured. I can confidently recommend this medicine."—Franz Hoffmann, City of Cuba, Kans.

BRUIN WENT THE PACE.

He Was Cross and Abusive When in His Cups, But He Meant Well.
Big Jackson is dead, and as a result the heart of King McManus is bowed down beneath the weight of unutterable woe. Jackson was a big, shaggy, black bear, but he was a hale fellow in his way, and there was not a man in all the Potrero who could cope with him when it came to drinking whisky, says the San Francisco Examiner. He could drink from morning till night, go rolling to his bed in the corner of the yard, and get up in the morning fresh as ever. From his youth he was a rollicking blade, with a good dash of the Bohemian in his makeup, and early in life he started to travel the pace that kills. His friends had foreseen for a long time that there could be but one end to it all, and when Jackson succumbed to the grim destroyer they shook their heads knowingly and said with one accord: "I told you so."
Sunstroke was the immediate cause of his death, but alcoholism reared its hideous head behind it all. Disipation had sapped the strength of a once robust constitution, and the other day came the end. As usual, Jackson was in his cups. During the forenoon he poured whisky into his stomach in liberal quantities, and the consequence was that by the noon hour he was very drunk. Then he became ugly and boisterous, as was his wont when drinking, and he was thrust out in the small back yard to sleep off the effects of his potations. The day was hot and Jackson's blood was aflame when evening came he was dead. Sunstroke, the doctor said, and his life must have gone out hours before they found him.
When it was found that Jackson was dead, King McManus was sent for. He had been the latter's favorite for years, and it was deemed fitting that the monarch of Potrero should be given the opportunity to show the last honors to his pet.
"Give him the best send-off you can, boys," was the king's admonition, "and don't spare any expense. Jackson was a thoroughbred, and nothing is too good for him. Send the bill to me."
And so McManus's followers gathered in to attend the rites. There was a wake such as only the Potrero order knows, and when it was all over the body of Jackson was laid to rest in a grave dug for him on the top of Irish Hill, overlooking the scene of many a jolly carousal. Nor was there any lack of mourners. Jackson had made a host of friends in his dissipated career, and they stood about his graveside to do him such honor as they could.
"We planted him just like a human being," said one sympathizer. "And why shouldn't we? He wasn't the best bear in the world, for he drank like a fish, was often cross and abusive, but he meant well, and never played it low on a friend in need."

GREATEST IN THE WORLD.

An Immense Bridge to Span the Mersey at Liverpool.
It is proposed to build an immense bridge over the Mersey to connect Liverpool with Birkenhead, and the designs of the structure are already in existence. According to descriptions in the Liverpool newspapers, the bridge will be of the arched suspension type, in three spans, the roadway being suspended from an arch instead of the usual chain. Each span will have a clear waterway of 1,100 feet, the center span having a clear headway of 150 feet above the water. The ordinary spring tides. Possibly it may be considered advisable to have one large central span of 1,500 or 1,600 feet with two smaller side spans, so as to give more room for maneuvering a large ship not under absolute control. The plans allow for a clear roadway forty feet in width, sufficient for at least four lines of wheel traffic, and two outer footways, each 7 feet 6 inches wide. The promoters further claim that an overhead electric tramway can be constructed along the center of the road, supported on center columns in a somewhat similar manner to the New York elevated railway. The total estimated cost of the bridge and its approaches, including a sufficient sum for the purchase of property and compensation to owners, but exclusive of additional approaches and the overhead tramway, is $1,750,000. It is stated that at present there is paid for the conveyance of goods and passengers across the river by lighters, ferry steamers and the tunnel, $195,000 a year, of which $105,000 is paid for goods traffic alone. The promoters estimate that the income of the bridge would be not less than $165,000 a year.

Falcons as Letter Carriers.

Falcons may be used as letter carriers in place of homing pigeons. M. Smokoff, a lieutenant in the Russian army, has contributed to the Revue des Sciences, the result of some experiments in training falcons to carry dispatches. Compared with pigeons, falcons are in more than one respect superior as carriers. A pigeon travels from eight to ten leagues in an hour, while a falcon, it appears, can cover fifteen leagues in an hour, and keeps up this rate of speed for fifteen hours at a time. The falcon can also, of course, be entrusted with a heavier budget. He is less easily affected by atmospheric changes, encounters fewer dangers on the way and can rarely become the victim of an enemy stronger than himself.

Suicide and Insanity.

An epidemic of suicide has prevailed in Buda Pesth and other Hungarian towns lately. In Buda Pesth alone seven suicides occurred in one day some two weeks ago. The number of cases of insanity is also increasing so rapidly that the hospitals and asylums are crowded. Physicians ascribe both phenomena to the scarcity of pure wine since the phylloxera. In consequence of which the people drink a made-up liquid composed of substances pernicious to the brain.

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—Latest U. S. Gov't Report.

A prisoner by the name of Wilcox, tried to escape from the prison Sunday afternoon. He was sent to the office on an errand, but in place of returning to the gate, he ran down the bank and jumping into the river swam to the California shore, where he was seen by two of Jose de la Osa's little girls, who gave the alarm, when P. B. and Albert Hodges, who had been crossing some cattle over the river and Ben Heyl, followed his tracks and found him a few rods distant, in some thick brush, lying on the ground trying to cover himself with leaves and small brush. They ordered him out and down to and across the bridge, where they met two prison guards, who were already after the would be escape, as word had been sent to the prison by Mrs. Matt Flynn, whose little boy also saw him when he jumped into the river. He was misled at the prison before the word of his escape reached there, and the guards were looking for him. It was less than half an hour from the time he started for the office, until he was again in prison. Wilcox was serving a two years sentence for forgery, committed at Wilcox. He is a large muscular man, insulting and desperate, and feared by all of the other prisoners. A few days in the dark cell will give him a chance to ponder over his case, even if it does not subdue him.

Specimen Cases.

S. H. Clifford, New Cassel, Wis., was troubled with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, his Stomach was disordered, his Liver was affected to an alarming degree, appetite fell away, and he was terribly reduced in flesh and strength. Three bottles of Electric Bitters cured him.
Edward Shepherd, Harrisburg, Ill., had a running sore on his leg of eight years' standing. Used three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes of Bucken's Arnica Salve, and his leg is sound and well. John Speaker, Catawba, O., had five large Fever sores on his leg, doctors said he was incurable. One bottle Electric Bitters and one box Bucken's Arnica Salve cured him entirely. Sold by W. T. Gonder & Co., druggists.

The so-called Sells & Rentfrow circus, which pretended to perform in Los Angeles yesterday, was a downright fraud. It came very nearly starting an old-fashioned riot in the Angel City; and only the efficient efforts of the police force prevented the victimized people from wreaking their vengeance on a set of fakirs.—Los Angeles Herald.
