Arizona at the World's Fair.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat of Dec. 30th, devotes considerable space to Arizona's exhibit at the Exposition, from which we make the following extracts:

The collection of mineral specimens is simply wonderful, and must be seen to be appreciated. To attempt a description of the many valuable mines represented would occupy too much of our present time and space, although later, during the continuance of the Exposition, we shall endeavor to describe some of the most noted. In the collection may be seen a very excellent quality of cotton, some 3,000 pounds, from Salt River Valley, Maricopa county, Arizona; also some fine bunches of sugar cane from the same locality.

One very novel feature of the exhibit is a collection of petrified or silicified wood from what is known as the petrified forest of Apache county Arizona. There is nothing like it in any of the exhibits of the Exposition.
There are several tons in the collection, pieces of trees of different lengths and diameters, varying from four inches to four feet in length, and from three inches to three feet in diameter, which from the colors and appearance must have belonged to different varieties of trees before transformation.

Some of the pieces are most beautiful, being set in every conceivable color, and in fantastic shapes, each different from the other. Some of the pieces of what was once wood are also covered with beautiful quartz and amethyst crystals. These agatized pieces when cut and polished by a lap-idary make the rarest ornaments.

Withal, the Arizona exhibit is extremely interesting and instructive.

Bancroft, the historian, is one of the most noticeable figures in Washington society. The remarkable preservation of his vigor at the advanced age of 84 years is what makes him most interesting. He is not the most charming conversationalist in the world. He fairly roars as he talks. He appears always as if he were addressing some one a dozen yards away. He shoots several sentences at a friend in a high key, and then, without sitting or listening to anyone else, he moves to address some one else. He calls as much as the most active society young man. He darts in and out of the leading houses of the town with a light step that is almost offensive in its exuberant agility. The veteran still has a slim, erect figure.—Chicago Journal.

In his letter to the amateur journalist, Robert J. Burdette offers some sage advice regarding the starting of newspapers. Says he: "If he start a newspaper in a town where nobody wants a paper, or where there are already five papers in a two-paper town; or, if a long-primer man tries to run a nonpareil paper; or, if he try to run an eight-column paper on a two-column basis; or, if he skin his home advertisers and cut rates for foreign ads; or, if he start out by giving a three-dollar puff for a ten-cent comb; or, if he start a paper because he has failed at everything else—then, indeed, hath he bitten off more than he can masticate, and his paper, beloved by the gods, will die young and fresh."

The Rev. Dr. Patton observes that the Scotch "are the only people who ever successfully solved the problem on this little planet of how to combine punch and piety." This is pretty well put. Their punch, like their piety, is strong and genuine. The remark recalls the reproachful commentary of a Canadian Episcopal bishop, of Scotch birth upon his treatment at the table of a certain rector in Boston: "They were all good people and most kind, I am sure; but do you know, my dear," said the old gentleman, "they gave me water to drink at table and upon going to bed, as if I had been a horse."

He was an Arizona man. With steady hand he filled the can; for, as was usual with him, he filled the chalice to the brim. Appalled, affrighted, and dumfounded to see the wholesale liquor raid, the gentleman behind the bar, in trembling tones, exclaimed:
"Look here! You are mistaken, pard, I'm thinking. That isn't cider you're drinking!"

The stranger's face grew dark and sad, he looked as though he had it bad.
In tones of grieving, mild rebuke, he said, with a reproachable look:
"You're mighty right, stranger, good heavens! I wouldn't drink that much cider for fifty dollars." Ex.

It is a singular fact that some of the ablest men in the Forty-eighth Congress never had the benefit of a college education. Messrs. Edmunds, Bayard, Pendleton, Wilson of Iowa, in the Senate, and Carlisle, Curtin, Kelley, Randall and Hoaglan, in the House, never went to college.

The Cowboy's Dog.

(From the Dodge City (Kan.) Globe.) Among the attraction in St. Louis during the recent session of the Stockmen's Association was little "Brownie," a dog bearing upon his body a cloth texture, upon which was imprinted various cattle brands. This little fellow could be seen everywhere with an air of self-confidence that would at once impress the stranger as an animal both strange and rare. In point of sagacity he is truly wonderful, performing various feats, such as gaping, sneezing, etc., when being ordered to do so in ordinary voice. He will also act as the bearer of notes in various parts of Dodge City, his home, apparently and in fact knowing his citizens by name. And stranger than all else, and as incredible as it may seem, you may take a deck of cards from them promiscuously upon a table, indicate a card by name, and he will select it from the number. Many other tricks are executed by this wonder of the canine race no less unac-countable than the foregoing.

While the "City of the Plains" can boast of things novel and strange, nothing is more so than little Brownie.

Which Was the Prisoner?

After the battle of Kernston, when Jackson with his broken columns, was slowly retreating up the Shenandoah Valley, there was a great deal of miscellaneous fighting between small detachments of the opposing armies.
Robert Smith, a Confederate, was quite active on the advanced line of reconnaissance. Robert, we regret to say, was unduly fond of fire-water, and many were the bold efforts he made to get it on doubtful ground. Upon one occasion he captured a Yankee strag-gler and led him triumphantly off towards the Confederate lines. Passing a spring the two stopped to take a cooling draught and sat down to rest.
The prisoner pulled out a concealed flask and hospitably offered Smith a drink. The courtesy was highly appreciated and very soon, while swapping yarns, the bottom of the flask was reached.

"Come," said Smith, "it is better we were going. I must take you to headquarters." "That's cool," said the Yankee, "from a prisoner, too." Both were fuddled, but Smith particularly.
"Did not I capture you?" said the Confederate. "Not by a d—d sight!" said Mr. Yankee. "I captured you."
"How is that?" said Smith, and down they sat and argued the question.
Just as Smith was about to yield to the overpowering logic of his prisoner, another Confederate arrived and settled the question.

Tom Pepper and Artemus Ward.

(From the Virginia City Enterprise.) Tom Pepper, who is known as "the peerless procreator of Nevada," led a Bohemian life here years ago. One day, hearing of Artemus Ward's arrival at the International Hotel, in breathless haste he rushed away to interview the great humorist. He ran at once to Ward's room, and knocking, was instantly admitted.

"Artemus Ward, I believe?" Artemus signified that the guess was a good one.

"I am delighted to meet you," cried Tom—"delighted to meet you, sir."
"And I have the pleasure of seeing?" and the smiling Ward looked a whole line of interrogation points.

"I am—I am—that is my name is" —gaped Tom—"my name is. Well, just wait a moment till I think," and Tom ran out of the room and closed the door behind him, leaving Artemus standing in the middle of the floor.

After a few moments in the hall, Tom rushed back toward the astor-ized Ward with extended hand and glowing face, crying: "Pepper, Pepper, sir! I'm Mr. Pepper—Tom Pepper—better known as Lying Tom Pepper."

Hington—Ward's agent—was out at the moment. Thinking he had an insane man to deal with, Artemus smiled the most cheerful smile then at his command. He declared he had often heard of Mr. Pepper, and was delighted to meet him. At the moment he was about to change his socks; would Mr. Pepper be kind enough to withdraw and call round again in half an hour. Mr. Pepper would, and did.

When Mr. Hington came in Artemus had a fearful story to tell about his adventure with a crazy man. Afterward, when Ward came to know that a sense of his greatness as a humorist had so overcome poor Tom as to cause him to forget his own name, the rival lecturer declared it was the greatest compliment that had ever been paid him.

Colonel Robert Ingersoll's fee of one hundred thousand dollars from ex-Senator Donny, for defending him in the Star Route trials, has awakened some interest among the members of the bar; but there are New York lawyers whom such figures do not surprise.

English and Foreign Labor Compared.

(From the London Times.) Recently Mr. J. S. Jeans, the Secretary of the Iron and Steel Institute, read a paper at the Statistical Society, Royal School of Mines, Jermyn street, on the comparative efficiency and earnings of labor at home and abroad.

Taking his figures from the census reports of 1881, he computed that the 14,000,000 people belonging to the wage-earning class in the United Kingdom in that year earned a total sum of £580,000,000, the average being about £42 per head, which was an increase of 10 per cent on the sum computed by Mr. Leone Levi to represent the average earnings of the working classes of this country in 1867.

A large number of details were given respecting the earnings of the working classes abroad in comparison with those of the United Kingdom, and the conclusion came to on an analysis of official returns as to the wages for each of the leading countries of the world was that in the United Kingdom the average wages paid were 45 per cent under those of the United States, 42 per cent above those of Germany, and 68 per cent above those of France. It was also shown that between 1850 and 1883 the average earnings paid in a large number of leading industries in the United Kingdom had increased to the extent of 40 per cent, while in France, during the same interval, the average increase of wages was 53 per cent in Paris and 65 per cent in the country. In the United States within a much shorter interval —viz: between 1850 and 1883—the increase of wages had been practically identical with that in the United Kingdom, viz: 40 per cent. A comparison was made of the proportion of wage-earning families and children relatively to the whole population in the leading industrial countries of the world, showing that women were more largely employed in Austria and France than in any other country, and that the largest number of juvenile workers was to be found in the United States.

General Jason L. Brown, of Missouri, a well-known local statesman, called at the executive mansion in Albany, the other day, to give the governor some pointers about his cabinet.

While he was waiting in the anteroom he accosted a man who had just come into the room and was glancing over a paper. "I suppose you are here on the same errand that I am?" he remarked. "I don't know," replied the stranger, pleasantly. "What errand are you on?" "I'm going to tell that old chump in there how to fix his cabinet." "No, I can't say that I am on that errand." "Maybe you ain't a politician?" "No," returned the stranger, politely. "I'm the old chump," General Brown will not be in the next cabinet.

General William Preston, of Kentucky, was dining some time ago with Sir Garnet Wolseley, when the latter asked if the South could not have held out longer. "As a mere matter of physical endurance, yes," replied the general; "but do you know, sir, that in the four years through which we passed, the South alone, with its few millions of people, lost more men in battle than England did in all her wars from William the Conqueror to Queen Victoria?" General Preston was chief-of-staff to General Albert Sidney Johnston, and held him when he breathed his last at Shiloh.

Travelers on the red hills, says the Hamilton, Tex., Policy, have often shuddered at the sight of horned toads, which are as numerous as blackbirds.
The ugly creatures are much dreaded, but a Chinaman put in all last summer and fall gathering them. Recently he made a shipment of 2,000 of the toads to San Francisco, from which place they will be sent to China. The toads are there converted into various kinds of medicines, which sell very high. For the cure of chills and fever they are said to be the finest things known.

An exchange gives the following version of it: "Breathes there a man with soul so dead, who never to himself hath said: 'I'll go and paint the city red?' And when the inky night has fled, rose from his hard and painful bed, and said: 'O heavens, what a head!'"—Peck's Sun.

It has been found that the emeralds in the diadem of the Empress Eugenie, recently sold, are bogus. An English nobelman bought them for $200,000.
The money has been refunded. Paris Figaro asserts that the Empress knew that some of the stones in the diadem were worthless.

Underground wires, telegraph and telephone, 285 miles in length, are operated in Washington, D. C. It is said, without trouble of any kind.

CLEANINGS.

"Fiery Gizzards" is the picturesque name of a post-office in Tennessee.
The total number of patents granted for agricultural inventions is 55,962.
The Mormons mean to be up with the times. They are having the Bible revised.

Superior blankets are now being woven of cow hair. Only the longer hair is used.

Nearly twenty-five thousand women are engaged in glove-making in England alone.

There is said to be nearly 28,000,000 barrels of petroleum stored in tanks in Pennsylvania.

The women in the Isle of Man are allowed to vote upon proving the ownership of $25.

It is reported that King Tuihan has murdered 475 of his relatives since he ascended the throne.

Niwonland, which is one-sixth larger than Ireland, has a scanty population of only 250,000 souls.
