NEVADA STATE ITEMS.

STAMBUK—Jack Sipples and James Castello (better known as "Beaugard") had a dispute in the International saloon about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, says the Virginia Chronicle of Wednesday, which terminated on the sidewalk in the former inflicting a pretty severe wound on the latter with a small pocket knife.

THE PARTICULARS, we learn, are about as follows: During the illness of the late John F. Keller, and while deceased was lying ill at the engine house of Virginia Engine Company No. 1 (of which company Sipples was steward), Sipples claims to have given Beaugard some money with which to purchase something for Keller to eat, and that instead of putting the money to the use intended, Beaugard lost the money at the gaming table. We know nothing of the truth of these charges, but give them as gathered on the street. The men met in the saloon, as stated, yesterday afternoon, quarreled awhile and came or were about coming to blows when they were ejected. On the sidewalk the quarrel was renewed, when Sipples, who had an open penknife in his hand, made a thrust or up-cut at Beaugard, the point of the knife clipping a small piece from one of the lower ribs, penetrating the pantaloon and ripping the skin up the left side of the abdomen for a distance of about three inches, leaving the membrane enclosing the bowels exposed to view. The wound was dressed by Dr. Frank M. Conn, and Beaugard was subsequently taken to the County Hospital. Sipples was arrested and placed in prison to await the result of the wound.

FROM A DESCRIPTION of the new Eberhard mill, as published in the White Pine News, we glean the following: The length of the whole structure covering
