A SPICY INTERVIEW.

Hon. Ben Corning, Candidate on the Greenback Ticket, Talks with a Reporter About His Brother's Wife—Sheep Raising—Politics, Etc., Etc.

Mr. Ben Corning, the greenback candidate for the Legislature, and a brother of the Mr. Corning whose wife was reported to have de-camped with a young man named Ramsey and nineteen hundred head of sheep, yesterday called on an EXAMINER reporter.

"Take a seat," said the reporter. "Thank you," said he, sitting quickly down and taking from his pocket a copy of the EXAMINER containing a report of Mrs. Corning's alleged departure.

Up to that moment the reporter, who had not previously met the G. B. standard bearer, did not know with whom he was talking, but the truth now flashing on his mind it was with mixed feelings that he said, "Is it not?"

"Well, no," continued Mr. C. "It ain't correct. I know my brother's wife is a h—l of a woman. She wore britches down to Waco and so on, but she didn't get away with nineteen hundred head of my brother's sheep. No sir'ee."

"How do you suppose the report got out?" enquired the reporter. "D—no," my brother moved nine hundred head of sheep over the river because 'scab' had broken out in our neighborhood, and I guess that's the way it got out."

"Is it true that Mrs. Corning has left the country with Ramsey?" "No, I guess not. But I don't know much about it. My brother's home is within a stone's throw of where I live, but I haven't been there. He's been away from home, sick. I didn't call specially to ask a correction. It don't make any difference one way or another, and you can do as you like about it."

"It was reported," continued Mr. C., "that I was the man whose wife came to Waco with a pair of breeches on, but I wasn't, you know, and that report has made for me over a hundred votes. That's the way things go in politics. By the way, have you a list of Gerald's appointments?"

The reporter handed him a copy of the EXAMINER which contained the desired information. He reads and comments: "Ballard's store, October 17th, 2 p. m.; Perry 23rd, 11 a. m.; Comanche Springs, 23rd, 8 p. m., two places in one day, ah! ha! Crawford 24th, and so fourth and so fourth. Let's see, here's Shackelford, for the Saturday before the election. Well, I'll try and be there; at least I'll be there or thereabouts."

"Politics seem to be kind of warming up, don't they? What's the news from the Ohio, Indiana and Iowa elections?" "Our latest returns," replied the reporter, "are given in this morning's EXAMINER. It appears that the fight has been almost wholly between the Democrats and Republicans, and it yet remains to be seen which party has carried the greatest number of districts. The Greenbackers, Socialists, etc., seem to have polled a merely nominal vote."

"Yes I read them dispatches, Mr. Reporter, but they ain't reliable you know. The fellows that sent them are in cahoot with men that's betting on the election or something of the sort. I want to see the general drift of things, but d—d if I'm depending on them dispatches."

With this Mr. Corning took up his hat to leave. "Won't you sit longer," said the reporter. "No, I thank you. I never stay in Waco five minutes after my business is finished. I live near the Falls county line, and being nearer Marlin than Waco, I do all my business and trading at Marlin, only coming to Waco when the courts or something of the kind brings me here. The roads ain't very good and its kinder up hill work for me to come to Waco anyhow?"

"Good-bye Mr. Reporter." "Ta ta Mr. Corning." Mr. Corning has not been a resident of the county very long and consequently is not generally known. He having stepped to the front as the G. B. candidate for the most important office in the gift of our people, we publish the above interview in full to the end that those feeling an interest may form some idea of what manner of man he is.

Crosse & Blackwell's Pickles.

Just received by JNO. F. MARSHALL.

W. H. WATKINS.

Waco, Texas.

Here and There.

Mrs. Grundy says, tell a man the truth about himself and he will hate you, particularly if he affects to despise flattery. Madam G. sometimes makes very truthful observations, though in the above she has evidently made a mistake in the sex.

Mr. Golledge yesterday called on a number of parties who had subscribed money in support of the Fire Department of which he is secretary and treasurer. It can be said to the credit of those upon whom he called, that every one of them paid promptly and cheerfully. He will finish the list to-day.

Houston Telegram: "Yom Kippur;" Galveston News—"Yom Kippur;" Waco Telephone—"Yom Kippur;" Victoria Advocate—"Yom Kippur;" Marlin Bell—"Yom Kippur;" other exchanges—"Yom Kippur;" "Yam Slipper;" "Dom Skipper," etc., etc. All these names and many others have been perpetrated on the recent Jewish Yom Kippur.

Cotton comes in lively and business is brisk.

Pecan picnics are on the tapis.

Memphis Avalanche: Parents have deserted children, and children parents, and husbands their wives, but not one wife a husband. This tribute to woman's devotion is found in a column descriptive of the plague horrors of Memphis.

Christina Mann, the sheep owner who was fined in Justice Massey's court for driving a diseased herd, has taken an appeal to the county court.

See Mr. H. N. Alkinson's notice of a farm for sale. It is an excellent farm and is in one of the best neighborhoods in the county.

It was reported on the streets last evening that a telegram had been received to the effect that a young man well known in this city had shot and killed a man in Bryan. No such telegram was received, and the report therefore is probably without foundation.

The weather continuing as warm as June, the people hereabout are beginning to think perpetual summer is at hand. A good frost for more than one reason would now be a very welcome visitor.

"W. D. M.'s" poem in this morning's EXAMINER is pretty, and will be read with interest.

An egg merchant yesterday fell in a ditch on Austin street and broke a basket full of his stock. As he picked up the half dozen that escaped breakage, there was a desire plainly written on his face to throw them at the heads of parties who were standing around laughing at him.

A Presbyterian church sociable will be given this evening at the residence of Mrs. Ed. Rotan on South Third street. Members and friends of the church are cordially invited to attend.

The accomplished Miss Annie Helm, of Robinsonville, is in the city visiting her sister, Mrs. John F. Sedwick.

Mr. Bell Brooks, a very clever young man who formerly resided in this city, but for some time past has been living at Bremond, will travel as advance agent for the Leon Minstrels. He goes in a day or two to Bremond, where the company will play during fair week.

Elder W. E. Hall returned Wednesday evening accompanied by his fair Virginia bride. The EXAMINER joins with his numerous Waco friends in extending to them a double welcome. They will at present reside at Col. O. M. Battles on Franklin street.

Mrs. M. A. Twells and her daughter Mrs. Katie Beach, of Hillsboro, are visiting the family of Col. A. A. Casseday and other friends.

Mrs. Judge Banton entertained at her residence on Speight street last evening a large company of her young friends. Every one present had a pleasant time of course. Young people never fail to enjoy themselves at Mrs. Banton's.

Just Received.

Rio and Java coffee, Coffee A. sugar, Fresh Macaroni, d&wtc HUMPHREYS & EATON.

Taylor's.

Price's and Charm Baking Powder at C. N. Curtis, in halves, pounds, three pounds and five pound packages.

Not Bettered.

M. T. Miller, the saloon keeper who was fined twenty-five dollars in Justice Massey's court for a violation of the Sunday liquor law, does not seem to have improved his case by going with it to the county court. The jury before whom he had a hearing in the higher tribunal assessed his fine at the same amount. Costs and all now amount to twenty-two dollars. The only other case disposed of in the county court yesterday was that of Milford Smith, a negro, who was fined ten dollars for staking his horse in another negro's field.

Daily Arrivals.

Of the latest styles of ladies and nurses, fall and winter hats, very beautiful, at LESSING, LYONS, SOLOMON & Co's.

Married.

BROWN-GOLDWELL.—At the residence of the bride's father, near Navasota, at ten o'clock, Thursday morning, October 10th, by Rev. Dr. J. M. Cochran, Mr. Wm. B. Brown, of this city, to Miss Mattie Goldwell, of Navasota.

Mr. Brown, who is one of Waco's leading and most esteemed young men, arrived with his lovely and accomplished young bride, on last evening's train. They will reside for the present with the family of E. P. Massey, Esq., on North Second street. Every indication of a happy and prosperous life is presented now, in the morning of their union and may joy go with them through a long succession of years.

HENSLEY-GOODE.—At the residence of the bride's brother, R. J. Goode, Esq., in this city, Thursday evening at 8 o'clock, by Rev. Alpha Young, Mr. Harry Hensley, to Miss Louisa Goode, all of Waco.

The EXAMINER congratulates the newly wedded pair. May their sea of matrimony never be disturbed by even so much as a ripple of discontent, and when they have lived the number of years allotted to them on this earth, may it be their pleasure to look back over a life time of uninterrupted happiness.

Thanks for a salver of the choicest and rarest cake.

Treasurers of Memory.

'Tis the evening of the Sabbath, God's hallowed day of rest! And the sun is slowly sinking In the far of crimson west.

Now the vesper bells are calling, With their low sweet solemn chiming— Come ye weary, heavy laden, 'Tis the evening of the Sabbath.

On the brow so broad and lofty, Rests the burning brand of Cain; In the eyes the soft and tender, Shines a world of bitter pain.

And with the waning sunlight, Whose beams now softly fall, As part the great and tender, And dance upon the wall.

Comes a flood of by-gone memories, Which for a moment cease, Their mantles off the present, And he lives amid the past.

Yes a shining angel leads him Back through the wasted years, Down to his happy childhood, With its fleeting joys and tears.

Bells ring out their sweetest chiming, And every heart a note smother, For his heart is stirred by memories dear, As he thinks of his angel mother.

He's thinking of the happy time, When at her loving side, He planned a glorious future, With youthful hope and pride;

And on his head her white hand fingers, As she looks with pride and joy, On the happy face of her darling, Her bright-eyed beauty's boy.

He hears her singing softly, The prayer of Christ, her Lord; And the sweet glad hymn so solemn, Has touched a tender chord.

The hues of life have faded, Since he heard those words before; He has the sweet glad hymn so solemn, And he hears her God no more.

Yet as he listens to melodies, That were sung in the long ago, The fast faded fountain of memory, Wash forth with their murmuring flow.

Again on a Sabbath holy He kneels with the worshippers there, In the grey old church in the valley, As they humbly bend in prayer.

He hears the words that fall his ears, And listens with wildly beating heart, As the passion of Christ is told.

His face is lit with a holy fire, As he seeks the soul he never saw; When the risen graves their dead give forth To show his wondrous power.

By fearful horror the world is rocked, As a rood by the northern blast; On the level of the sun refused, His glorious light to cast.

And now the sermon is ended, The choir is singing a song, And the angels through the western windows Rest on the world-tipping throng.

He lights the cheek of the fairest, And lovingly kisses the old; And the silver hair of his mother Is changed to a crown of gold.

He watches the pastor's smiling face, The glance of his loving eye, And silently wonders if one so good He would be called to die.
