which have recently been made by Ouster's Black Hills expedition in that hitherto unknown region.
This is important, as Bismarck is the nearest point to the Black Hills, and will be the point where expedithere is a direct and well-marked trail, made by the return of Ouster's expedition.

The Tribune is the only weekly newspaper in the United States which sent a Special Correspondent with Ouster's expedition.

ATTRACTIVE FORM.

The Philadelphia Ledger, in speaking of this Popular Newspaper, says:

"The Bismarck Tribune, a weekly newspaper published at Bismarck, Dakota Territory, has just completed its first year's existence. It is a bright and remarkably well-edited sheet, and would compare not unfavorably with many of the more presented journals of the Atlantic coast. It is one of the best of American journalism, how such a highly printed and ably conducted newspaper comes from the midst of a territory which a year ago was inhabited only by Indians and wild animals."

Black Hills!

THEY YIELD ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS PER DAY PER MAN!

Gold, Silver, Copper, Tin, Lead and Plumbago.

INDIANS READY TO TREAT FOR THE SALE OF THE BLACK HILLS.

Four more Black Hillers, named Warren, McDonald, Williams and Thomas, arrived at Fort Laramie on Saturday.
They bring many specimens of gold.
They reached bed-rock in one place where water is abundant, and where they estimate one hundred dollars per day per man can be taken out.

They bring specimens of silver which old miners estimate will yield two thousand dollars per ton, and claim it is the purest they ever saw. They also bring specimens of plumbago, lead and copper, and represent that there is more gypsum in the Hills than ten railroads can haul away in fifty years.

They claim the existence of tin.
They expect to return immediately with men and provisions.

It is reported from the lower agencies that the Indians are ready to treat for the sale of the Black Hills.

ing the election of a Republican Governor.

Pinchback resolutions are taking up logg government in Louisiana. The final vote on Pinchback's case will be

Gen. Sherman is reported as saying that expeditions will be kept out of will be put in the field with instructions to intercept expeditions, by force of arms if necessary, and troops will be sent to remove those now in the Hills as soon as the weather will permit.

Gen. Terry expresses substantially the same views as Sherman.

Preparations are still being made on an extensive scale at Sioux City. Yankton, Sioux City and Cheyenne are contending routes, each depreciating the route of the other. Sioux City shows the route via Cheyenne to be impractical for reasons urged by Capt. John Smith, of Bismarck, and insists that the route via Yankton and Randall is only fit to go to hell on, while the Sioux City route is admitted to be over one hundred and fifty miles further than via Bismarck.

The Sioux City Journal is scattered all over the country—a thousand extra

There is considerable excitement in Minneapolis and St. Paul and several

A Strange Story.

The San Francisco Excelsior tells the following curious story: When the Confederate army, under General Lee, was forced to retreat from the trenches at Petersburgh by the Federal army, President Davis hastily ordered about $34,000, the property of the Bank of Virginia, and of the Confederate States bank, to be removed to Washington, D. C., Georgia, and to be conveyed to the trans-Mississippi department, if possible, there to make a final stand.
The treasure was carried down to Charlotte, N. C., where the railroad ended. At this place it was decided to leave the money belonging to the Bank of Virginia in keeping of its officers. The rest of the money, belonging to the Confederate States, was placed in wagons and the retreat continued. The brigades of Generals Bush, Duke, and Yankton, who had succeeded in occupying from East Tennessee and had arrived at Charlotte a few days before, were placed under the orders of Gen. Braxton Bragg, to take an escort to the treasury, and the command proceeded southward to Washington, D. C., Georgia, was reached. At this point information was received that the Federal Gen. Wilson had captured Macon's brigade, and in the line of retreat to the trans-Mississippi department. The news soon got among the men. They became demoralized, and a rush was made for the wagons containing the treasure.
It was especially divided among them, the officers being unable to restrain the men. Among the lucky one were two soldiers belonging to Yankton's brigade, from Macon, Georgia. One of them was named Albert Stevens, and the other we will call J. E. Jones. They had charge of a wagon containing $125,000 in gold, and when the panic spread among the soldiers and the cry was "Macon, get out," they retained their presence of mind, and drove off into the woods, where they divided the money, making some $75,000 a piece, and separated. Stevens taking his to his home in Tennessee, where he buried it, confiding in hiding place to his mother, a very old lady.
Finding that it would be dangerous for him to remain in Tennessee, owing to the unsettled condition of things there, the people being equally divided on the question of the war, he went to Georgia, where he found Jones, who had bought a small place and was quietly waiting until it would be safe for him to return home. Stevens stayed awhile with Jones, and then went off to another part of Georgia to visit some relatives. Before going, however, he informed Jones about the hiding of his money, and his mother's knowledge of whereabouts. As soon as Stevens was gone, Jones mounted his horse and made a believe for Tennessee, and the place where Stevens lived.
Arriving there, he presented his mother's mother with a forged letter purporting to come from her son, alluding to a silver thousand to Jones, which the old lady did. Jones then started direct for California.
Arriving there, he purchased a large tract of land in Mineral County, land being low at that time, and has since amassed a large fortune in addition to his ill-gotten gains, and is now highly respected, and a member of the church.

In the course of time, Stevens having ascertained that it would be safe, started for home, possibly dreaming of a future life of ease and comfort on some blue grass farm—raising fat cattle and blooded horses—this being your average Kentuckian or Tennessean's idea of an earthly paradise. On reaching home he soon found out his loss. Backing on his revolver, he secured the saddle seat and went in search of his faithful friend, willing to shoot him on sight, and only recently ascertained his whereabouts. He is now in correspondence with a prominent lawyer of this city, and an attempt will shortly be made to bring Jones to account through the courts.

An Extreme Exposure.

A Washington correspondent writes:
"I remember seeing two very ridiculous extremes at one of the large entertainments in the city. A certain foreign minister has a daughter whose fairly like proportions move the scales to a generous two hundred and eighty pounds. She is considered a great beauty in her native land, where quantity is admired in addition to quality. Mlle religiously appears at all the entertainments, elegantly arranged in silks and laces, her dresses made in the extreme of the décolleté mode. One evening in descending from the dressing-room I found what I supposed to be a group of ladies in evening costume, but which proved upon nearer approach to be the fair demoiselle in question herself. Her triple chin rested upon her bosom, and her arms were marvels of flesh. She had a carriage for her private use, with doubly strong springs, and the sofa on which she rested during the evening bowed itself with Christian resignation to the weight imposed upon it, although, if it had had speaking powers, it would undoubtedly have joined with Cain in his agonizing cry: 'My burden is greater than I can bear.' While standing near this portly damsel, there entered the room a creature which, from her attire, I supposed to be a woman, but whose gauntness of figure and marked deficiency of outlines suggested the reappearance of some unhappy skeleton, whose restless longings for the gay scenes in which it had once mingled the strength of vault or coffin-lid could not confine.
These bones, covered with an ebrucolored parchment, shivered into numberless tiny wrinkles, came airy into the room, dressed in a delicate canary colored silk, made so low in the waist that the ribs could almost be counted, and se-short in the sleeves that the humerus would have afforded youthful students in physiology excellent illustration of the number and size of the arm-bones.
Around her neck she wore an elegant neck-lace of rubies and pearls, and bracelets of the same beautiful gems, swung round and round the apologies for arms. A point lace shawl was thrown off her shoulders, and an elegant lace fan was gracefully waved in the air by this animated corpse. Her hair was arranged in puffs, surmounted by a point lace head-dress. Her eyes were sunken so far into their sockets that I doubted their existence, and her cheeks seemed busy feeling for the teeth, which nearly a century gone by, supported their plumpness. This individual I learned, was the wife of a distinguished judge, some years younger than herself, and that she was, although suffering from ill-health, as devoted as a young girl to social pleasures, and, like a veritable Mrs. Skewton, shocked the sense of propriety in every right-minded person by her appearance in public in such painfully indecorous and disgusting toilets. Fashion has no right to dictate unbecoming or improper by-laws. The pretty, smooth, white shoulders of very young girls suggest nothing but admiration but the saints forbid that I should ever again gaze upon such an ancient flash, except, perhaps, in some expedition through the Smithsonian, where mummies are exposed as curiosities merely."

Our Russian fellow citizens have a method of punishing offenders against the peace of society, which has least the merit of saving to the public the costs of litigation. A young Russian belonging to a family who reside in lower Yankton was detected in stealing a pocketbook containing two dollars. We presume he was granted an impartial trial which led to conviction upon which he was sentenced to receive eighteen lashes upon his bare back. The punishment was duly inflicted in the presence of a large number of his countrymen. The culprit was stripped sufficiently to uncover his posterior portions, then laid upon his face, and the eighteen stripes were laid on vigorously by a stalwart brother Russian, armed with a yellow willow whip. The affair was conducted with great solemnity.—
Press and Dakotian.

A castle thief was arrested in Detroit a few days ago, and the Sheriff on searching him, found packed inside of his hat the following maxims from a newspaper: "Remember that truth is a jewel; do not covet it; respect old age; be content with what you have; live so that men will take your character as an example." In consideration of the excellent principles governing the man's life, the Court allowed him to retain his prized slip during his year's sojourn in the Penitentiary.

We learn from the Woman's Journal that the mother at the birth of a child the better the child's chances to rise in the world. We would learn it, rather if the proposition were correct, which it isn't. It is the work of some advanced maiden who hasn't yet given up her hope of a husband and a family; but we wish to warn her right here that she can't fool anybody.
