

Change of Publication Day.

The TRIBUNE will be issued hereafter (skipping to-morrow) on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday in order to meet the mails.

Frank Rande, the Western Ruffian who was arrested in a pawnbroker's shop in St. Louis a few days ago after having fatally wounded one police officer, slightly wounded another and received a bullet in his own breast, seems to be a very remarkable character. His murderous career has been marked by a recklessness and daring which indicate an entire ignorance of fear, and even now that his fate is sealed, while the terrible doom of death by Lynch law at the hands of an infuriated people stares him in the face, he declares his only wish to be that he might have a club in his hand when the ceremony takes place, so that he might brain a dozen before he died. That this is no idle bravado is proved by the fact that he has before now faced and fought angry crowds. In August last, when he robbed the house of a Mr. Beldin, in Illinois, and was pursued by about twenty men, he killed Mr. Beldin, badly wounded another, and effected his escape. At St. Elmo, in the same State, he faced the town, shooting down three persons and making good his fight. Yet, fiend as he is, he is said to be well connected, to have received a good education, to write well, to love poetry, and to have in Pennsylvania a wife and child, those generally humanizing ties. "Frank Rande" is, of course, an assumed name. He is described as a handsome man, of good height, unusually powerful frame, wonderful activity, and an eye and chin that denote power and determination of character.

Now, what is it that has prevented Frank Rande from being a hero instead of a brigand and an outlaw? The accident of birth? The contaminations of evil associations in early life? Vicious training and the lawless indulgence of unrestrained passions? He has the makings of a hero in his compositions; manly strength, intelligence and the most reckless courage. He has even some notions of chivalry. "I never wronged a woman," he says to the Western reporters. "and I never killed a man who did not face me and fight me." When he was wounded and arrested he rallied at the officers, who, enraged at the shooting of their comrades trampled upon and denied him water, as cowards. At last one policeman took charge of him who laid him in an easy position, placed a coat under his head and gave him water to drink. "He treated me said the bravo, "as one brave man treats another." What a slight change in the revolving wheel of fortune might have made such a man capable of great deeds and have ranked him among those whose names are sounded to posterity through the trumpet of fame! How trifling a variation in fortune's lottery might have made a Frank Rande of many a chronicled hero, and graced him at his death with the noise of Judge Lynch instead of the laurel crown.

The general commissioner of the land office is preparing a bill for the sale or disposal of timber and timber lands in accordance with the recommendations of the secretary of the interior and himself in their annual reports, which will provide for the withdrawal of all lands chiefly valuable for timber and not suitable for agricultural purposes from the operation of the homestead and pre-emption laws and from liability to be taken by any of the various kinds of land scrip heretofore provided by law. The bill will also provide for the sale of timber of certain kinds, reserving the soil with a view to the renewal of forests. It is therefore obvious that speculators and others who wish to use Sioux halfbreed scrip upon pine lands will have to do their scripping this winter and as soon as practicable.

During the extra session of congress one thousand seven hundred bills were introduced in the house alone. Of these nine hundred and fifty asked for appropriations for various purposes, making an aggregate of $79,000,000. Of these appropriations bills six hundred and fifty were for the relief or indemnification of private individuals, corporations or states, making an aggregate in round numbers of $11,500,000. Nearly three hundred bills were introduced appropriating in round numbers, in the aggregate, $36,500,000, for such purposes as improvement of rivers and harbors, building of United States houses, etc. The appropriations asked for the improvement of the Mississippi river and its levee system, alone amount to over $12,000,000.

Geo. P. Flannery's success in selling lots at present and during the past fall is an emphatic indication of the faith the average citizen has in Bismarck. He has disposed of several hundred at private sale and is still selling at fair prices.

In his thanksgiving sermon, Talmage said: "If the senatorial politicians do not stop stirring up the old national feud, there will be in a year or two an arrival in a Liverpool steamer at the New York dock, of an American who has got tired of traveling in foreign parts, receiving the highest honors ever bestowed upon an American. He will go to Washington and take the chair in the White House. He will tell them who is to be president in 1880."

D. A. Baldwin, President of the West Wisconsin Railway, recently hung himself in New York. He was very rich but had poor health.

General Ord wants more troops to guard the Rio Grande frontier. He says the present forces are quite inadequate.

The President's message is well thought of throughout the country. It has strengthened him with the people.

TERRIBLE HARDSHIPS.

Suffering of the Boys in Blue on the Plains—Facts to Make Democratic Congressmen Blush.

A soldier belonging to the 3d infantry, which recently marched from Corinne, Utah, to Montana, several of the companies being ordered to Helena and the balance of the regiment to the new post at Missoula, writes a letter to an ex-army officer, describing the hardships endured by the troops during the tramp of over six hundred miles. The men of this command were ill prepared, by reason of their long residence in New Orleans, for the rigors of early winter in the Rocky mountains, and their sufferings were acutely intense. During a part of the journey they were exposed to a violent snow storm, with the thermometer fifteen degrees below zero. Not an officer or soldier in the regiment was provided with either overshoes or gloves. Not a few of the men were nearly bareheaded, and added to the agony of freezing feet was the additional torture of being forced to grip the cold steel of muskets with naked hands day after day. When the regiment left New Orleans there was not $5 in the possession of the officers or men. The women and children belonging to the command, including the wives and offspring of the officers, numbered thirty-two, and transportation for these, of course, had to be secured at individual expense. The writer says that but for the timely aid of friends, who, understanding the pecuniary condition of the rank and file, advanced a little money out of their private means, those dependent and destitute followers of the camp must have suffered abandonment in their time of greatest need. On the march northward from Corinne several of the women and children fell sick under the terrible exposure and for weeks their lives were almost despaired of. The transportation outfit allowed the command was limited to three ambulances. As there was not a dollar in money in the regiment, the simplest wants of the sick could not be gratified, as the isolated ranchmen and hunters in that country refused to part with anything when the cash was not forthcoming. Finally, as the regiment was nearing the end of their march, ragged, footsore, penniless and shivering, some of the officers sold their pay rolls for cash, but not without the sacrifice of a discount of 25 per cent. on the dollar. The writer of the letter says that the despot of an African province would be too thoughtful and humane to heap upon his subjects such an indignity as this government has put upon its army. He thinks the government has disgraced itself no less than its soldiers by cruelly neglecting to provide for their decent comfort.

SPOTTED TAIL AND RED CLOUD Their Bands Have Reached Their New Agencies on the Missouri—The Story of the Stampede Confirmed—2,000 Indians Now Running at Large.

J. S. Roberts, representing F. D. Yates, trader for Red Cloud's band of Indians, arrived here yesterday, and from him we learn the following items: He and his supplies reached the agency at the mouth of the Yellow Medicine Creek November 24, and he was followed next day by the agent The Indians, numbering about 6,000 souls, did not go all the way down to the agency but camped six miles therefrom and scattering from that point twenty miles west.

The telegram from Washington in regard to there having been a stampede among the moving Indians was true, only the number was too small, there having been 2,000 of them instead of 1,700 as reported. They left Spotted Tail's band November 14, and went over to Red Cloud's band, staying about a week, and it was this that ran the latter body short of rations. The Indians that stampeded belong to the Tinneco-jous and other northern tribes, and when they left the Red Cloud band they said they would go up to Cheyenne agency and stay there this winter, but that they would not return to the Spotted Tail party. They have since been heard of among the Hills above the Yellow Medicine, and it is altogether likely there is a considerable amount of suffering among them, for they had no rations to amount to anything and there is nothing in the country to support them. If they go to Cheyenne agency there will not be enough provender there to spare them any great amount, and the probability is that they will have to be driven down by force to New Spotted Tail agency at the mouth of the Niobrara, where arrangements have been made for supplying them. The bad weather of winter will probably make them somewhat more tractable than they would be in less rigorous seasons of the year, which fact was taken into account by Gen. Sheridan in determining the date of the removal of Spotted Tail and Red Cloud to the Missouri, and the circumstances show the wisdom of his plan.

Mr. Roberts heard from a gentleman who left Spotted Tail agency last Sunday, that the Indians destined for that place, numbering over 6,000, had reached the agency that day.

DISAPPOINTED.

The President Disappointed at the Course of the Democrats.

The president has expressed his disappointment at the action of the democrats in forcing party lines to be drawn in the senate. In conversation with a gentleman on Saturday, he stated that he had hoped that nothing would arise in Congress this session to provoke party or sectional animosities, and was the more disappointed because it had been commenced by the Democrats, and by the very men who have been so profuse in their professions of peace to him. From what was intimated by the President, it was understood that he had been so affected by the proceedings of last week that the senate republicans will not be required to send any more caucus committees to him. In conversation with two cabinet officers, your correspondent learned that the intentions of the president toward the democratic party, and his opinions of the beneficial results of his pacification policy, was undergoing a rapid change.

The Square Thing.

The Bismarckians did the square thing with Chief Joseph and his Nez Perce (nose pierced) followers. They stopped over at Bismarck on their way east under the charge of Gen. Miles and were feted and banqueted and honored till they couldn't rest.
