A party was enjoying the evening breeze on board a yacht. "The wind has made my moustache taste quite salt" remarked a young man who had been for some time occupied in biting at the hair that fell over his upper lip. "I know it," innocently said a pretty girl. And she wondered why all her friends laughed. "People are so childish," she remarked.

HILLS GOSSIP.

Items of Interest Noted Down by a Lady Correspondent.

New York Graphic.

BLACK HILLS LEGAL TENDER.

Speaking of gold, I must tell you that gold dust is legal tender here to any amount from five cents up, and it is amusing to see ladies shopping with their bottles of gold dust, in place of dainty portemonnaies and crisp greenbacks. It takes some time to get accustomed to this currency, and even now I am not able to count my change. I am obliged to look wise and trust to the honesty, or more often the dishonesty of the shopkeeper.

THE LUXURY OF BEING CLEAN.

The Chinese have looked upon in great numbers and one sees their quaint signs all over the town—Sam Sing, Wing Lee, Ok Kee, Kung Wah, etc., washing and ironing—and I must give my testimony that whatever they do they do well. When I first arrived here I found that clean linen was a luxury to be indulged in sparingly, but opposition in trade has finally reduced the price of washing to $3 a dozen, and, from the appearance of most persons, I should judge that only the few could afford that.

A CHINESE PARTY.

Preparations for some festivity seemed to be in progress yesterday at a Chinese wash-house, within range of my window—a tea party or kettledrum, I should suppose—or several gorgeously attired Chinese women severally wended their way there. They were arrayed in gay-colored loose trousers, flowing silk blouses, lined and faced with bright colored gold pins and ornaments in their black hair, and the out ensemble—bliss eyes and bright silk kerchiefs on their heads—looked precisely like the picture one sees on a five-cent fan. I hastily seized my opera glass (relic of civilization), and encased myself behind my curtain and gazed with intense interest while the tiny cups of tea were passed around, the various dishes of sweetmeats tasted, and lastly, the opium-pipes lighted, and passed from mouth to mouth till the chattering gradually grew less, and finally ceased as they were in turn overcome with stupor. When they recovered from its effects they took their departure, chattering noisily, no doubt expressing themselves politely and volubly in Chinese concerning the charming time they had had, and how much they were indebted to Mrs. Ok Kee for such a delightful entertainment. There is a good deal of the same kind of humbug all over the world.

CAMP ODDITIES.

There are many odd people here, and many nice people too. It takes all kinds to make a mining camp, you know—bankers, speculators, judges and capitalists, elbow miners, gamblers, people who have been in penitentiaries, and people who ought to be there. Butternut trousers, woolen shirts and top boots is the prevailing style here, and any other costume is the exception. Among our notabilities I might mention "Trail Pete," "Buckskin Charley"—an Englishman, whose name before he disappeared his immense patrimony and retired from civilization was Reginald Grant Dalton—"Tooth-wick Joe" and the Uter boys, these last two being desperadoes, with Auburn curls reaching far below their carriage bells, and better known by the sobriquet of the "sorel-haired twins," and many others too numerous to mention. Most of these are restless spirits, who have been in every camp in America—California, Nevada, Idaho, Montana and Utah; they have all killed their man or two, fought Indians, fared and starved, and now agree that "America is played out. Railroads, telegraphs and such new fangled notions have spoiled 'round." And many of them are talking seriously of taking a prospecting trip to South Africa, not that anything particularly rich has been found there, but they must go somewhere out of civilization, and they have completely exhausted America.

A DEADWOOD ROMANCE.

To be successful in a mining camp requires a peculiar fitness for the life. Many of the large army of "tenderfeet" and "pilgrims" who flocked here from the east last spring, expecting to peck up nuggets of gold in the streets, have returned home disappointed and disgusted. Others still remain without the means of returning, and willing to do anything to keep from starving. Among the many waiters at the Welch House here is a quiet, gentlemanly young fellow, whose refined face and manners show plainly his superiority to his occupation. After watching him attentively for a day or two, I started him with the question: "How long have you been a waiter?" He flushed and replied: "Madame, this is my first experience." On making further inquiries I discovered that he was a college graduate, and belonged to a good and wealthy family east. His father failed, and he took charge of a high school in Elmira, N. Y. The Black Hills fever broke out, and he with others started for Deadwood to make a fortune. On his arrival he soon discovered that his luxurious student life had not fitted him for such an experience. He could find nothing to do, and as at last resource accepted the position of hotel waiter, hoping to earn enough in that capacity to enable him to retrace his steps home. He still takes my orders and serves my steak and coffee with a courtly grace better suited to a drawing-room, and is gaining more experience of life and people than he ever dreamed of during his more prosperous days. I feel sorry for him, but his experience is only one of many here.

TIE BELLE OF THE BLACK HILLS.

Central City, has the advantage of us all in one respect—she can claim, as a resident, the only young lady, in the Black Hills. When I say young lady, I mean it in every sense of the word. She is eighteen, lovely, accomplished and charming. Her fame has extended far and wide, and it is needless to say that she can have her choice of all the unmarried men in the Hills, and many of our young bankers, lawyers and capitalists would be considered eligible anywhere. However she turns a deaf ear to them all, and sighs over the ill-fortune which walled her family to this barbarous country. If some good, bright sensible girl would make up her mind to come here, what splendid matrimonial opportunities she could have to choose from.

There is no further news of the express robbers. Of the money stolen $40,000 was consigned to Wells, Fargo & Co., New York, and $30,000 to the New York National bank of commerce. The money stolen from the passengers aggregated nearly $2,000.

The Louisville Courier Journal's Richmond, Ky., special of the 20th says: A year since Jasper Manpin shot John Buman at Kingston, Madison county, wounding him. Manpin was indicted and his trial was set for to-day, but the case was not reached. This evening the parties met in the streets in Richmond, each accompanied by friends, when firing began, and Jasper Manpin, John Buman, Obvis Ballard and Wm. A. Cornelison were killed. The survivors were arrested.
