Excursion Steamer Blown Up.

New York, Aug. 28.—A dispatch says the excursion steamer Riverdale has blown up at Twenty-second street, North River. All the animals in the city were called for. It is said fifty lives were lost.

About 3:50 this afternoon the people who were in the neighborhood of the foot of Fourteenth street and North river were startled by a sound of explosion coming from the direction of the river. Looking out in mid-stream, they saw the Hudson steamer Riverdale enveloped in steam, and, in less than six minutes afterward, she keeled to one side and capsized, opposite Sixth street, having floated that far.

About fifteen different tugs, from this city and Hookens, hurried to where the explosion took place. The tug, which was on board when she left the foot of Harrison street for Haverstraw. Some of these were hurled into the air and fell back into the water. Others were compelled to jump into the river to escape the hissing steam that gilled all parts of the vessel, or to avoid being gilled with her. The cause of the disaster was the explosion of a boiler, which was amidships. When the boiler burst, the air was filled with flying debris and broken woodwork. The pile-house was smashed like a tin can and toppled over into the water.

About fifty people were killed, some blown in air, and others met their fate by being drawn down with the vessel, which was sinking rapidly. Those who were floating or swimming in the river were picked up by the boats that came to their rescue. Three dead bodies were also brought in by the boats. Mrs. Sisson, of Tarrytown, New York, an unknown man whose body was taken to the morgue; a boy whose identity has not been ascertained was also taken to the morgue. The injured are: Howard Gardner, the evangelist of Youkers, New York; John Kelly, deck hand, arms broken; John Moran, deck hand, legs and side crushed; Thomas Scott, passenger of Brooklyn, scalded; John Smith, mate, left hand crushed; John Giles, of New York, badly injured and externally critical; George A. Davis, fireman of the boat, badly scalded. The engines, several engines and a boiler and ladder company stationed nearest to the scene of disaster, were called out without their apparatus, and did good service.
