

much of the spathy prevalent in the cause of...
The attempt at legisla-which many of the best and warmest friends the cause, believed to be very important, if not necessary in its utmost success, has failed, and this failure, much of the interest felt for the of that one beneficial lesson has been learned as far as temperance is concerned, political action is not necessary or even desirable for carrying forward moral reformation—the restraints and the inducements necessary for the morals of a people lie beyond legal enactments and penalties.
Some addresses were made of a character calculated to interest the audience and to induce action to carry forward this work of benevolence.
The least interesting among the exercises of the evening, were the performances of the of singers, accompanied by an excellent orchestra.
Sacred music harmonized with efforts for regeneration of our race.

A LOG CABIN SKETCH.

FROM REAL LIFE.

Suppose some hard-money man, Thomas Benton for instance, on his return from Washington, in passing through Indiana, finds the banks of the Wabash a log cabin, nested among the trees of the ancient forest, on southern declivity of one of the points formed by the winding of the river, and presenting a view of land and water interspersed. A barn and well cultivated fields indicate the owner had been prosperous in life. A traveller soon hears the ready summons enter, in answer to his knock. He finds a bearded man cleaning his rifle—who, after intermitting his work, says to him, "Set down, stranger, and make yourself at home. Our dinner will soon be ready—I will clean my rifle, as I always do when come in from hunting. I have just sent the boys to bring in a buck that I shot this morning."
That rifle of yours, friend, is an old affair—I don't see how you could hit a buck with it."
"It is like its owner, old enough to be better." In saying which, the old man hangs his gun in a wonted place, lights his pipe, sits down the traveller and asks him the news. His reply says to him,
"I have glorious news for you. We have passed the Sub-Treasury bill, now you know no more better times. No more banks—no credit—nothing but gold and silver money is already flowing up the Mississippi, I will soon be up your river; then every man will have a long net-purse, and the hard-money will be seen shining through the mesh.
Then this old rattlesnake of a cabin will be down, and you will build a nice white house. It is for a gentleman to set down in when come to see you. I expect to be along again, then we will have a talk about that coward down at North Bend; by that he will be well fixed in his log cabin, making hard cider to within an inch of his ear."
The old Hoosier lays down his pipe. Says "Stranger, I know Gen. Harrison; me and were raised in Virginia, tho' he is but a year to me. We were both out under Mad Anthony, up on the Maumee, when we had a fight after St. Clair's defeat. You have heard of it, I reckon, afore now. It was in the fort. I was a private, and Harrison was but a youngster for an officer—he was sent out to Mad Anthony, and the way he led orders up and down was not slow—saw him when he rode up to that troop of Albany, in York State—I can't think of his name, something—he was a 'Cornet, and carried the flag—Remissaler, that is it. It was with one of your purses to see those troop-charge upon the red skins along the long line—it was for all the world like a wolf out on the prairie—and the two legged troops would run nearly as fast and keep at it. They were all taken care of, and we no trouble from them for several years.
That, on the march down I took a fancy to this place where I now live, I thought the land and built this house that you call a cabin.
I paid for all of it, and I never saw any silver and gold that you talk of during the time. We used to have United States notes then, that was just as good as any money. My land is just as good, and so is my house, and they will both last as long, as if I had been paid for in sub-treasury money.
I know you will be well enough. My children, mean the young ones, were born here. My sons were well grown when we moved from Virginia. My old woman likes the place, and she every thing snug and comfortable—she is welcome to all my house affairs, and she is not to much. My rifle provides our meat—you talk about that rifle—old Gen.
Harrison said, when he came along here on his trip to the North to join Harrison in Canada the last war, that they had just looked at King's Mountain in the old war—"There they had, says I. My father carried it there, and I have heard him say fifty times that he never could see any difference between a red coat, an Indian, or a deer. I don't pretend to shoot as my father could, he shot under Morgan; but you may understand this, when you hear the crack of an old hunter's rifle, you may know there is something besides noise going on, and they vote as straight as they shoot. You may think you are grey about Harrison, I know him when he was a boy, and I have heard of him since. I don't know much about his fighting in the last war, my boys can tell you all about it, they went off with old Gen. Shelby and helped to give the red coats a dressing in Canada—as to the Election you talk of, I voted for old Hickory twice; I always liked him; when there was any fighting going on, he was always sure to be in the midst of it—since he went home to Nashville, somehow nothing goes right. There are so many experiments, and new notions getting up, that I cannot expect to see the end of them; and I shall try a shot with Old Tip—he can't do much mischief, because, like myself, he is getting rather old you know—and as to my old house, you can talk against it as much as you please, that will not change my liking for it; but when my boys come in, you must not let them hear you, for if they do, you'll walk into next week in half-a-minute.

JACKSON'S LAMENT.

Blair and I called on our Van,
To see what he would do,
To rid us of that pesky man,
They call old Tippecanoe.
Oh dear, old Tippecanoe,
I fear the Hick'ry'll be forgot, For Buckeye Tippecanoe.
Some lazy loungers would do nought, But I've done that too,
I don't care how soon they are caught,
But—there's old Tippecanoe.
Oh, dear, &c.

There's Benton, he is wide awake,
And John Calhoun is true,
But they ne'er dreamed how all would shake,
At the name of Tippecanoe.
Oh, dear, &c.

There's Kendall drives his team along,
And Pickens keeps in view,
But who shall stop the courier strong,
That sweeps with Tippecanoe.
Oh, dear, &c.

When I went off, and left the chair,
I told them what to do,
And never thought, my faithful Blair,
Of this old Tippecanoe.
Oh, dear, &c.

For now he comes and brings his plough,
And puts the coultter through;
There's joy upon each farmer's brow, They hail old Tippecanoe.
Oh, dear, &c.

The war-worn soldier joins the cry, I hear the sound 'tis true,
And vict'ry's note is rising high,
Like that of Tippecanoe.
Oh, dear, &c.

The hardy Fishers' winding horn Proclaims them all, true blue, They've left us to a Hope forlorn, And gone to Tippecanoe.
Oh, dear, &c.

The sailor boys are up a tree, Oh Paulding, making tow,
The Navy Tars are gone to sea, But bound for Tippecanoe.
Oh, dear, &c.

The 'Cobblers' take their thread and awl,
The nation's rips, to sew,
And close as wax, they're sure next fall,
To stick to Tippecanoe.
Oh, dear, &c.

The people all united stand,
And sick enough of you, They're marching in a solid band,
To the field of Tippecanoe.
Oh, dear, &c.

Like Proctor, we are all undone,
And like Tecumseh too;—
Their fate is warning us to run, Nor dare old Tippecanoe.
Oh, dear, &c.

Oh dear old Tippecanoe,
I fear old Tippecanoe,
No foe can stand before the man
They call Old Tippecanoe.

gainst the bill distributing the income of the school fund to the several towns, made the order for to-morrow morning.

Resolutions. By Mr. Warner, directing the committee of ways and means to ascertain the amount of the interest of the school fund, and the proportion which each town would receive on a division of the interest, adopted; authorizing a loan of $20,000 from the school fund to the University of Vermont, laid on the table; from the senate, for the adjournment of both houses on Tuesday next, laid on the table.

Bills introduced. By Mr. Swift, in addition to chap. 8 of revised statutes, referred to com. of ways and means; by Mr. Sabin, to extend the right of trial by jury, to fugitives from justice in other states, referred to judiciary committee.

Bill appropriating $2000 for a geological survey of the state, ordered to a 3d reading.
Bill from the senate, taxing steamboat stock, passed. Bill amending 7th sec. 87th chapter revised statutes, ordered to a 3d reading.

Mr. Swift called up the bill relating to banks on which various amendments were made, and which was under consideration when the house adjourned.

Friday, Oct. 23.

SENATE. The engrossed bill to provide for notice before indictments of highways, was taken up and after some discussion passed, year 16, days 13.

Reports. By Mr. Short, for com. on education, against the resolution to prevent all but the regular physicians from recovering their fees; by Mr. Norton, for committee on finance, in favor of the bill to pay for military services on the northern frontier, passed.

The committee on claims was discharged from the consideration of the bill to pay M. L.
Church, and the same was referred to military committee.

The bill to pay back part of the license money paid by M. M. Chamberlain was taken up and passed.

Mr. Miner introduced a bill in addition to military laws, read twice and referred to select committee of three—viz. Morse, Howe and Wheelock.

The senate then went into the committee of the whole on the bill relating to banks, and made some progress, when the senate adjourned.

HOUSE. The treasurer communicated a detailed report on the state of the school fund, from which it seems the present amount of the fund, including interest up to Oct. 19, 1840, is $149,135.51.

Petitions referred. Of J. Batey and 255 others, to judiciary committee; of Vermont anti-slavery society, to same committee; of John Gildea, to general committee.

Bills introduced. By Mr. Hodges, from committee on ways and means, assessing a tax of three cents on the list of 1840 for state treasury—authorizing the treasurer to borrow not exceeding $30,000, ordered to a 2d reading; from the senate, extending jurisdiction of justices of the peace, referred to judiciary committee; providing for the union of school districts, referred to general committee; in relation to high-ways, referred to committee on roads and canals.

Reports. By general committee, bill repealing 63d section 25th chapter revised statutes; by select committee, against the petition of Edward Phelps, and he had leave to withdraw; against bill relating to the sale of spirituous liquors, and it was referred to the select committee on so much of the governor's message as relates to the condition of the country; by com. of ways and means, bill in addition to chap. 8 of the revised statutes, ordered to a 2d reading; against senate bill to prevent fraudulent attachments, and it was rejected; by com. on military affairs, bill to pay the town of Alburgh $667.18, ordered to 3d reading.

The senate came in, and both houses met in joint assembly to make county appointments, as follows:

Washington County.
John Spaulding, Assistant Orson Skinner, Justices.
Isaac Silver, sheriff.
James Pitkin, high bailiff.
John L. Buck, state's attorney.
George Worthington, judge of probate.
Joseph Howes, Wm. S. Clark, Zenas Wood, jail commissioners.

The senate retired and the house proceeded to the consideration of the bill relating to banks. After considering the first 17 sections, the committee rose, reported progress, and the house adjourned.

The Sub-Treasury—A sort of grinding machine, peculiarly adapted to fattening Uncle Sam's hogs—for the keepers, not content with common toll, steal the whole grist.

"Three in a Bed."—One of the resolutions adopted at a Whig meeting in Concord a few evenings since read thus:—

"Resolved, that we congratulate the Whigs of our sister States, Vermont and Maine, upon late signal triumph over the combined forces of the office holders and office seekers, and that New Hampshire will yet prove herself a sister worthy to lay in the middle."

The Tories have set a "snoozing" alongside of Miss Swain and Mrs. Sippi, but the moment cold weather comes on, she'll jump out of bed "in the twinkling of a bed-post," and get into a separate couch long with Louisa Anna.—Charmont (N. H.) Eagle.
