vote was put upon the engrossment, and the Bill was ordered to be engrossed—141 to 57.

The question returned upon the passage of the bill, and the floor was given to Mr. Rockwell, of Mass., who spoke nearly an hour in opposition to the admission of Texas as a Slave State, and concluded his remarks with a motion to re-commit the Bill to the Committee on Territories with instructions to report a proviso that there should be no slavery in Texas, or any involuntary servitude except for punishment.

The Speaker decided that the motion to recommit was in order, and the House, after some, sustained this decision by a vote of 102 to 77. The decision was then reversed by a vote of 96 to 83, and the effect of it was to cut off all debate and to bring the House to a direct vote upon the passage of the bill. The vote upon the passage was 141 to 56.—The usual motion to reconsider was then made and lost, and the Bill declared to be passed.

WAR WITH THE UNITED STATES

has been the leading and most exciting topic of the press and the public during the last fortnight, although the more pacific tone of the American papers received by the Steamer Caledonia, on Saturday, last, has within the last three days considerably allayed the war panic. Government is, however, I am assured by different well informed parties, making the most active and extensive preparations in the dock-yards, that this country may be ready at a moment's notice, to maintain the rights of Great Britain to the Oregon Territory. It is argued that British Ministers should no longer suffer themselves to be trifled with by the caprices of an "American rabble"—that however strongly opposed to war the more reflecting population of the Atlantic cities may be, and however willing to compromise a most difficult question, yet, as it is not in the power of President Polk and his advisers, even if it were their wish, to settle the Oregon question upon the terms proposed by Great Britain, it is imperative on the British government to be fully prepared to maintain their rights, whatever the consequences may be.

I think that I have stated the case in a simple manner. I look at the question from different points. I study attentively the popular feeling on this subject in the United States, and I watch the effect of the expression of that feeling in the members of government papers, upon the public mind in England, and I am firmly convinced that neither Sir Robert Peel, nor his political opponents, will submit to be tossed about by every wind and wave from America. They will not submit to the demands of President Polk, nor will they brook the execution of any of his party. They are preparing for the worst that may come; and whether the President's Message which is now probably on its way to this country, breathe peace or war, the Oregon question must be settled and speedily settled. There must be no delay, no tampering. Upon this point I repeat, the Premier and his colleagues have decided. They feel, and perhaps justly, that they have been trifled with. It is far from my intention to call forth a war excitement in the United States. It is my earnest wish to all ye, but at the same time it is my duty to warn my countrymen of their dangerous position—rendered more dangerous by their own injudicious and very wicked, threats towards a powerful nation, like Great Britain.

What are denominated the American government organs have recently published several warlike articles; whether for the sake of a little temporary popularity with the unreflecting million, or to ascertain how they would be received in England, it is impossible for me to say; but these articles in the official organs do most unquestionably, exercise a great influence over reflecting minds here. Whether Mr. Polk denies or approves these articles is of no consequence; they appear in the official journal at Washington (at least such is considered and as such is received in England and America. British statesmen carefully read these articles, and their advice to the Cabinet Councils is founded upon the warlike sentiments which they contain; it will not avail anything to utter such sentiments to-day and recall them to-morrow. This has been done too often already. The British government has been too often trifled with in this way. The time is come when the question of peace or war will be decided; this question be assured will not be put off any longer. It decays on the secular channels of commerce—it has a serious influence on government securities and destroys all the kind sympathies which exist between two great nations but I will not enlarge upon the subject. I will only give a solemn warning to the statesmen at Washington. I ask them to forget all petty political questions, and bring all the influence of position and talent—all the eloquence of mind, and all the charity and good will of the christian, to bear upon one point in the present emergency—and let that point be, the settlement of the Oregon question on any reasonable terms—if this be not done during the present session of Congress, I am convinced that a war will be the consequence, such as never has been seen before. This may appear strong language, and I may be accused of overestimating the public feeling here. I have watched it too long and too anxiously to be mistaken. I make all allowance for the thoughtless feeling just now, but I cannot be blind to the great preparations now making by the Government, nor any difficulty (the dock yards are now crowded with workmen, the provisions of war were never on so large a scale—and why is this? England is peace with all the world, but the language of her Councils is we have a difficult question to settle with the United States.

I shall make this letter short, that you may be able to find room for it at once; for although hastily and feebly written, it may have some little influence at Washington. Every other subject sinks into insignificance at the side of the Oregon question.

It will be a long time before any communication can be again sent to America. It will be a long time before you can know of the political movements here; but that you may be fully informed respecting the effect of recent American news, I have prepared another letter, in which I have brought into one view the opinions of the principle British Journals on the Oregon question, and other topics. These opinions are valuable, as showing the sentiments of Englishmen. They are valuable, as they exercise an influence over nearly the people, but over Britain's statesmen. Who can doubt, when the official organ of government says that Mr. Polk will insist in his message upon the whole of Oregon, and the official organ here, replies—"If we could believe that so monstrous a proposition was likely to be made by the American government, we should be disposed to regard it, as we hope it would be treated, as a virtual declaration of war against this country."

Who can doubt the influence of such language? language not made use of without deep reflection.

I will not encroach farther on your valuable space, but subscribe myself.

Your most obedient servant,

Per Steamer Acadia.

THE FOLLIES OF FASHION

There has been a great rage in Europe of late for China goods; and the contagion has now reached this country, and is carrying all before it. There was the last of a series of these goods held in New York on Tuesday; and the shawls went off at the following prices:

1 square Shawl splendid "Harlequin"	$155
1 long scarlet shawl wide inside gallery	170
1 Shawl "Harlequin"	300
1 square black shawl beautiful borders	165
1 scarlet shawl beautiful	175
1 long blue shawl superb quality and beautiful border	230
1 long orange shawl very superior and deep border	260
1 square green shall 2 1-2 yds	150
1 long scarlet shawl very beautiful	240
1 long white shawl very rich	270
1 black shawl magnificent	235
1 square grey shawl rich 2 1-2 yds	150
1 long scarlet shawl superfine	185
1 square shawl new style 4 corners	135
1 long black shawl splendid extra size	190
1 black scarlet shawl	160
1 square black do.	425
1 long white do. splendid	250
1 long scarlet do very magnificent	350
1 long blue do.	345
1 square new style harlequin for 4 or large size	265
1 long scarlet shawl very beautiful	170
1 square shawl white ground very rich	185
1 do do 2 1-4 yds elegant	175
1 long scarlet shawl beautiful	340
1 square shawl blue grd filled centres large size	185
1 long scarlet shawl magnificent	255

Besides these there was a large variety that sold from $50 to $100—a large number of shawls sold at $240, and a large number at $150 to $50 the pair. The tables, chessboards, pictures and all the smaller articles brought full prices, and the sale was one of the gayest places of amusement of the day.

4803 emigrants arrived in New Orleans in Nov. chiefly from Havana and Bremen.

COMSTOCK'S REMEDIES.

Comst'k's Pain Extractor, for the immediate cure of scalds, burns cuts, bruises and inflamatory affections of every kind.

Nerve and Bone Liniment and Indian Vegetable Elixir, a certain cure for all rheumatic affections.

East India Hair Dye, colors the hair and not the skin.

Dr. Lin's machine spread Plaster, for pain in the back, breast and side; they have a preference to anything in the line.

Comstock's Sarsaparilla. This article is sold at half the price of Read's, and warranted a better article.

Dr Bartholomew's Pectoral Syrup; an effective remedy for coughs, hoarseness, colds, pain in the breast, influenza, &c.

Dr Spohn's Headache Remedy; a sure remedy for both nervous and bilious.

Dr Spohn's Elixir of Health. The stomach is kept in perfect order by its use; it restores appetite, &c.

Oldridge's Balm of Columbia restores the hair and prevents it falling off.

Hay's Liniment; a remedy for Rheumatism, croup and whooping cough.

Hunstock's Vermifuge, positively a cure for worms.

Dr Mc Nair's Acoustic Oil. This oil has performed wonderful cures.

French Corn Plasters, a certain cure if properly applied.

Mother's Relief, for the medical advice, to be had gratis of the subscribers.

Bear Grease, highly recommended for curing rheumatism, soreness, relieving pimples on the face, curing scrofula, and preventing the hair from coming out or turning gray.

Dr Comstock's Hepatical Drops, a great but certain remedy.

Ol Twain. Let those who will have hair have them; but let those who wish to keep them dry apply this article to their boots and shoes and they will be sure to effect the object—do not like. It will positively make old leather as good as new; we have tried the experiment."

Naples Hair Dye. It will convert a grey head into a splendid head of black and glossy hair.

French Depilatory. This article removes and eradicates superfluous hair upon the face, hands, &c.

Dr Lin's Temperance Bitters and Chinese Blood Pills, a cure for Liver complaints.

Dr Lee's Celestial Balm of China; a cure for all diseases that require external application.

Welch's Toothache Drops; a certain remedy for toothache, ague in the face, &c.

The subscribers have these remedies directly from the proprietors. If you purchase them of us you will be sure to get the genuine. If you purchase them elsewhere, you may, and probably will get spurious articles.
